INTRODUCTION

"It is, indeed, a desirable thing to be well descended, but the glory belongs to our ancestors."—PLUTARCH.

WITH the Ancients, piety meant filial piety, and the thought was of a love which came to manifestation in acts, rather than expressed itself in words. The "pious" Æneas was so called because his filial love was of the sort which impelled him, at physical cost, to bear the burden of the "aged Anchises." That this tenet of the Ancients had a foundation in truth, is proven by the fact that Revelation in no wise discredited it, but emphasized its worth in "the first commandment with promise." One who is lacking in love to his ancestors to whom he owes his being, and the name he bears, will not be apt to abound in love for his neighbor to whom no ties of kinship bind him.

It would seem that a reverent regard for the memory of those who have gone, and a suitable solicitude for those who shall succeed us, should stimulate the preservation of the Family Record. It is to be regretted that the matter has been, in some instances, so long neglected that an annoying element of uncertainty is encountered in tracing out the ancestral line. The value of a genealogical record is its accuracy and its completeness, and accordingly corrections will be welcomed as courtesies, rather than regarded as chastenings.

It is perhaps hardly necessary to say that whatever merit or interest a genealogical work may be fortunate enough to possess, it cannot in the very nature of things aspire to that of originality. Research, and not invention, is the province of the genealogist and the historian; the effort of both being to collate and formulate familiar facts, as fully as may be, rather than to bring to light facts hitherto unknown.

As to the derivation of the family name of Ely there are several contradictory opinions. The best authority holds that it was derived from the well-known "Isle of Ely," in Cambridgeshire, which has been known as a religious seat from the early periods of Christian history. It is also stated that "There is authority for supposing that the place, Ely, owes its name to a personage who bore the name, as his distinguishing cognomen, of Helie, and who was the last of thirty-three ancient British kings or dukes, who ruled the southern portion of the 'Anglian Isle' from one to three centuries before the Christian era." The above opinion is quoted from the genealogical history of the Ingersolls, by Lieut. Charles Ripley, U. S. N.

We know that a few years after the murder of the famous Thomas à Becket, the name of Nicholas De Ely appears in history as one of his successors, and, apparently, he was the first De Ely. The "Lives of the Lord Chancellors," by Lord John Campbell, makes mention of Nicholas De Ely, at one time Chancellor of England, and who was Bishop of Worcester in 1268, and afterwards Bishop of Winchester until his death, in 1280. The will of Nicholas De Ely is on record, and it directs that his body shall be interred at Winchester, and his heart preserved in the Cathedral. It is interesting to note that not long since during some repairs to the Winchester Cathedral, the workmen came upon a bronze urn, with the inscription, "The Heart of Nicholas Ely."

Prior to the Conquest, in 1066, surnames were not in use in England. The Normans introduced the use of surnames, with many other of the customs of the more polished Continental nations. The name of De Ely probably represents a descendant of the Norman conquerors, while the Christian name, Nicholas, is suggestive of a Flemish or Dutch origin.

In the nave of the venerable Cathedral at Winchester one may see the brazen tablet commemorative of "Elizabeth, wife of Leonard Ely, who departed this life in the year of Our Lord 1690."

Beside this grave near the chancel Sir Roger Tichborne is interred, and near by are the tombs of King William Rufus and of Isaac Walton.

The prominent position of Elizabeth Ely's grave indicates that she was a person of distinction.

William D. Ely furnishes this note:

"So far as there is any record among books on antiquities, chronicles, etc., in the Congressional Library at Washington, Nicholas De Ely was the first Ely in history. He was the Bishop of Worcester in 1268, and of Winchester till his death, in 1280.

"Burke traces the family to this same Nicholas. The way he accounts for losing the De from the name is that in the reign of Charles I., 1638, when the family left the Cavaliers and joined the party of Cromwell, they dropped the De." It is true that the family arms indicate a Norman origin, but so do the arms of hundreds of families who bear names which are strictly English.

KING ALFRED'S CROSS AT WINCHESTER, ENGLAND
(From the MAIL AND EXPRESS)

Many knights and gentlemen adventurers from Flanders and the Low Countries, and from other parts of Europe, were found in the army of William of Normandy, for the expedition of the Conquerors against England drew many adventurers to the ranks of the invading army, attracted by the desire for the lands, titles, or wealth, to be gained by the Conquest of Britain. It may well be that Nicholas De Ely derived his given name from some adventurous gentleman of Flanders, and his surname from grants made by the Crown.

The surname of De Ely, thus early brought into prominence, would not unnaturally become in time abbreviated to "Ely," as more consonant to the Saxon tongue and more congenial to the Saxon mind.

Now, while we have no means of knowing that Richard Ely, of Plymouth, was of the posterity of Nicholas De Ely, it is quite probable that he was of Norman descent. This is indicated by family tradition, and corroborated by the form, features and complexion characteristic of the Elys from the earliest obtainable records.

"There is no good, analogous reason to suppose that the family name is of Jewish origin, although the Rev. E. Stiles Ely once wrote:

" 'The Elys of Missouri, I found, bear the general forenames and even the features of the Ely family of New England, from which I have been led to believe that, years ago in England, our ancestor must have been some converted Jew.' "

"It is a fact, I believe, that very many Elys have similar complexion—the men being dark and the women brunettes—but in all I have seen the peculiar olive tint of the Israelite is wanting."

The constituent elements of the English population are to be traced in the history of the country. The first inhabitants were Britons, probably a mixed Celtic race, and who, during the time of the possession of the country by the Romans, must have become slightly changed by the admixture of that race.

Upon a scattered population of Romanized Britons, came the great wave of the Saxon invasion, in the fifth and sixth centuries.

The Britons are usually said to have been driven to the West, but probably this was not so much the case as has been generally thought, for it is seldom that an invasion expels the mass of the people from the ground they have long occupied. After this, however, the predominating element of English society was undoubtedly Saxon, the Norman Conquest only adding to it a French aristocracy, which little affected the great bulk of the population. The English, therefore, exclusive of the Welsh, who are Britons, almost unchanged, may be regarded as in the main a Teutonic people, an admixture of British or Celtic entering into the composition always in less and less measure as we advance from Wales towards the eastern coasts, where the people are nearly pure Saxon.

"The Saxon Englishman is distinguished from other races by a stature rather low, owing chiefly to the neck and limbs being short, by the trunk and vital system being large, and the complexion, irides (plural of iris, the colored part of the eye, surrounding the pupil), and hair light, and by the face being broad, the forehead large, and the upper and back part of the head round and small."—Sears' Pictorial Great Britain.

We find in all this no resemblance whatever to those of the Ely family who are known to us.

Additional indications of Norman origin in the Ely family may be noted in the faithfully cherished names of Richard and William, which are Norman names made famous by illustrious Norman Kings. Richard, signifying "strong, like a ruler; powerful"; and William, signifying "resolute helmet, or helmet of resolution; defense; protector"; are names of old Germanic origin, and carry in their roots and import the suggestion of having been introduced by Norman, or Continental warriors, into Saxon England.

The Cathedral town of Ely is situated upon a large tract of high land encompassed with fens that were formly covered with water, in the County of Cambridge, on the river Ouse. The city is built upon a considerable eminence in the "Isle of Ely," sixteen miles N. N. E. of Cambridge; population about 8,000. The city consists principally of one street, and contains many old buildings. It is the seat of a bishopric founded in 1107. Its cathedral is a splendid structure, built in successive centuries from 1174 to 1534, and presenting a singular mixture of Saxon,

ELY CATHEDRAL

Norman, and early English styles. It has a total length from east to west of 525 feet; the western tower has an altitude of 220 feet. The interior is exceedingly beautiful, and much has been done during the present century to restore and beautify the various chapels it contains. In recent restorations by Sir G. G. Scott, R. A., over $300,000 have been expended. The stalls are said to be fine specimens of wood carving.

The Church of the Holy Trinity, which is attached to the Cathedral, was commenced in the reign of Edward II., and is one of the most perfect buildings of that age in England.

A famous convent was founded at Ely about 670, by Etheldreda, wife of Egfrid, King of Northumberland, and she became its first Abbess. It was destroyed by the Danes in 870, and 100 years later was rebuilt by Ethelwold, Bishop of Winchester, who placed in it monks instead of nuns.

Ely has extensive manufactories of various sorts, and several benevolent institutions and schools, among which is a grammar school founded by Henry VIII. It is the capital of the division of Cambridgeshire called the "Isle of Ely," separated from the rest of the County by the Ouse. Cambridgeshire is in the south midland division of England, and was separated by the course of the river Ouse into two nearly equal parts, Cambridge County proper, and the "Isle of Ely." In the reign of Charles I., and until a recent period, the "Isle of Ely" was a separate jurisdiction, forming a palatinate belonging to the Bishop of that See, but is now combined with the other parts of the County.

I find considerable difference of opinion as to the ancestry of Richard Ely of Plymouth, with whom our genealogical record in America begins. We are not able to trace him with certainty beyond the town of Plymouth. An elaborate and interesting attempt has been made by the late Colonel Joseph L. Chester, of London, himself descended from Richard Ely, to connect the Elys of Wonston with Richard Ely. Colonel Chester states, in his printed report of his investigations, that there is no absolute legal proof of the connection, although he thinks he has presented a case so strongly circumstantial that there will be but little danger in accepting his conclusions.

Colonel Chester ascertained that Leonard Ely of Wonston had a son

Richard, who was living at Wonston early in the XVII. Century, and who left there between 1640 and 1650. About the date when the record of Richard Ely ceases to be found at Wonston there is mention of a Richard Ely at Plymouth, and there is the church record at Plymouth of the death of Richard Ely on the 12th of February, 1659. It is probable that this was the father of the Richard Ely who emigrated from Plymouth to America.

Colonel Chester says: "I submit that there is not a fact nor a date in this theory that does not harmonize with what we know absolutely of the Wonston family and of Richard Ely, the emigrant."

While this is quite true, and there are no important facts controverted by the theory, it would be much more satisfactory were some additional evidence obtainable. A curious fact in connection with this point is that it would seem as if corroborative testimony might be adduced from the family Coat of Arms, in which Colonel Chester had no faith. On pages 6 and 7 of the pamphlet called "The Elys of Wonston," Colonel Chester states very fully his disbelief in the authenticity of the Coat of Arms.

"Whether on tankards or emblazoned on parchment, old as they may appear to be, they are really," he thinks, "not older than the first quarter or half of the eighteenth century, when certain unscrupulous herald painters and engravers went over to New England and found and painted and engraved Coats of Arms for anybody and everybody who desired them."

This conclusion of Colonel Chester would seem to be discredited by more recent investigation. There are sufficient reasons for asserting that the Coat of Arms is genuine; it forms a most important factor in the history of the family, and we believe that Colonel Chester was in error in disputing its authenticity. Ex-Mayor Smith Ely writes that when visiting Winchester, in England, he had the pleasure of meeting a certain Mr. George Ely, a well known gentleman of that city, who was Manager of the London and County Bank at Winchester, near Wonston, and who showed him two old rings (which he had inherited from his father) on which were engraved the fleurs-de-lis. These rings were family heirlooms of considerable antiquity.

Investigations made in 1895 at the College of Arms, Queen Victoria

NAVE OF ELY CATHEDRAL

Street, London, prove that the Elys were a heraldic family. The subject was not then as thoroughly examined as its importance merits, but enough was learned to make it clear that from a very early date the Elys of Wonston had made use of the fleur-de-lis as their family insignia.

The fact that Richard Ely had a Coat of Arms displaying the fleur-de-lis is very strong proof of a connection with the Elys of Wonston.

An honored member of the Ely family writes that in his opinion there is good reason to suppose the Elys to have been of French origin.

"The Coat of Arms would indicate a French derivation, and Agnew, in his 'Protestant Exiles,' mentions a number of Elys who became naturalized in England within a few years after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes by Louis XIV., October 22, 1685."

COAT OF ARMS FROM THE OLD RICHARD ELY TANKARD.

COAT OF ARMS FROM AN ANCIENT VELLUM IN THE NATHANIEL ELY FAMILY.

There are two family relics of peculiar interest which belonged to Richard Ely, these are a tankard and a ring, both bearing the shield exhibiting the fleur-de-lis. The tankard is in the possession of Richard Fenwick Ely of New York. It came to him along the following line of family descent from Joanna Ely, the granddaughter of Richard Ely.

Nathaniel Matson settled in Boston. His son, Nathaniel Matson second, married first Ruth Roe; married second Joanna Ely, daughter of William Ely. Their seventh child, Abigail Matson, married John Coult, of Lyme. His son, William Coult, married Nancy Denison. Their son, William Coult, was the husband of Mrs. Coult, who owned the tankard.

The initials "A. M." on the tankard stand for Abigail Matson, to whom the tankard descended from her mother, Joanna (Ely) Matson.

THE ELY TANKARD AND RING.

The seal ring which exhibits substantially the same coat of arms as the tankard, is also very interesting. It is now in the possession of Mr. Joseph Elihu Ely of Binghamton, and descended to him along the following line: His father was Oliver Ely, son of Elihu Ely of Revolutionary fame and maker of the "powder horn" hereinafter mentioned. Within a few years Mrs. Caroline Ely Steele, a daughter of Elihu Ely wrote a very full history of the ring.

Elihu was the son of Deacon Richard Ely of Lime, youngest son of Richard Ely and Mary Marvin.

This Richard Ely was the second son of Richard Ely of Plymouth, England.

The ring is a mystery upon a mystery. The fleur-de-lis itself is an occult emblem. Many English and Scotch families bear it upon a portion of their shield, but with some reference to France. The lilies surrounding the red lion in the arms of Scotland are said to have been conferred by Charlemagne. In that magnificent work upon French Heraldry, entitled "Livre d'Or," it will be found that golden lilies were used as a badge by Louis VII. of France, before Heraldry had an existence. Until the end of the fourteenth century, the arms of French kings bore any number of golden fleurs-de-lis. It was Charles V., or, according to some historians, Charles VI., who reduced the indefinite number to three, disposed two to one, as in the arms of France to-day. This modification was adopted by the Bourbon branch at the same epoch; perhaps to signify the Trinity, or three races. In very ancient times the grant of a right to wear a fleur-de-lis upon the family arms appears to have been the highest mark of royal favor.

Thus "By letters patent, dated at Paris, 1434, the king, Charles VII., permitted to the celebrated Arnand-Guilhem de Fadras to quarter his arms with three fleurs-de-lis and gave him the title of Restorer of the Crown of France."

THE BOURBON ROYAL STANDARD.

HISTORY OF THE SYMBOL.

From the heraldic point of view the fleur-de-lis is well worth fighting for. This famous old device derives its name from the fancy that it represents three flowers of the white lily. It is not, however, a lily, nor even a flower. Some claim that it is a blossoming reed; others say that it is the tip of an old style Frankish javelin.

A fatal objection to this theory is the fact that a somewhat similar symbol was used as an ornament by the early Merovingian, Greek, Roman, Spanish and English kings, and has even been found on the sculptured head dresses of Egyptian sphinxes.

We first hear of it in France in the twelfth century. When Louis VII. started on a cruise in 1137, he chose the purple iris as his symbol, and thus the iris became Louis' flower (fleur-de-Louis), and this was afterward gradually changed into fleur-de-luce and fleur-de-lis. Until the reign of Charles VI. there were many fleurs-de-lis on the national flag and arms of France, but about the year 1381 the number was reduced to three.

The arms of England bore fleurs-de-lis from the time of Edward III. until the beginning of the present century. King Edward bore them because he claimed to be the rightful heir to the French throne, and King George III. dropped them, because Ireland was joined to England in 1800, and the King's title and the national arms had to be changed. King George gave up the title of King of France, and the fleur-de-lis disappeared from the royal escutcheon.

Ever since the French Revolution the fleur-de-lis has been the symbol of the royalist party and the Bourbons. During the revolution it was proscribed, and many persons who persisted in wearing it lost their lives for their temerity and loyalty. Care was taken, too, that it should be thoroughly effaced from all the public buildings and other places throughout France. When Napoleon came into power, he substituted a bee (some say three bees) for the old national device, and the bee has in its turn given way to the violet, which is the favorite flower of the imperialists.

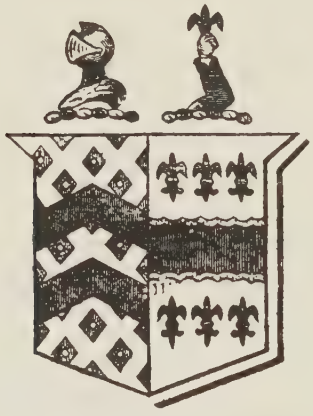
The present discussion as to who may rightly wear it has aroused much interest in France, and there may be some curious developments before the matter is definitely settled.

THE FIRST RICHARD ELY.

William D. Ely, Esq., of Providence, in a note on this subject, says:

"The Ely Arms, now in my possession, a copy of which was taken from the draught in the hands of Harven Ely, Esq., of Rochester, N. Y., are as follows, viz.:

"On a shield argent, a fesse engrailed between six fleurs-de-lis, gules. Crest, a closed helmet, facing the dexter side of the shield (to the left of the beholder). These arms are of the description called by the heralds canting or punning arms, as the legend conveys one of the neatest puns in the whole science.



MRS. HEPSA ELY SILLIMAN.

"Six fleurs-de-lis, which being interpreted may read six flowers, or brothers, or principal men of the family of De Ely (the two E's, contiguous, being no objection in the Norman French of the thirteenth century); the engrailed fesse (one of the original nine honorable ordinaries) encircling the whole band, as brothers should be joined in one body.

"The helmet shows the parentage of the six De Elys to have been from an esquire or gentleman and, as may be known from the direction of his visor, they were born in wedlock.

"That the arms are of ancient date may be inferred from the fact that they are simple in their elements, have no inklings of quarterings about them, and bear upon them the fesse, the second on the list of honorable ordinaries.

"Such is my reading, and hence, also, I infer that those to whom the Patent was granted distinguished themselves in the war with France, or under a French King."

The royal lilies of France are always golden; the Bourbon lilies silver; but the fleur-de-lis in every description of the Ely arms that I have carefully verified, is red. There is an impression in many branches of the Ely family, where the coat of arms is not used, that red is an Ely color. One Ely related to me that many years ago, when a little boy, he went with an aged aunt into the garret where were lying several shades of yarn ready for weaving. She told him to choose the color he liked best, and when he selected scarlet, she said, "You are a true Ely. You have chosen the Ely color." I am told that in the Coat of Arms of Richard Ely Hamelin, the lilies are black upon a shield of dead gold. In another branch of the family the lily is azure upon silver, but I do not find in any of the generations or branches that either gold or silver lilies were borne, and, therefore, the emblem did not indicate royalty.

"A fosse engrailed on a shield argent, between six fleurs-de-lis or crest, an arm erect, vested, argent, in hand ppr., a fleur-de-lis sable. These arms have been borne by the name Ely as far back as the sixteenth century—probably much longer."

COLONEL JOHN ELY.

WILLIAM ELY, OF HARTFORD, CONN.

The following information, contributed by Hon. Smith E. Lane, of New York City, is interesting and suggestive. Mr. Lane quotes from Burke's General Armory, as follows:

ELLEY (as borne by Charles Elley, of Hampstead, of a Hampshire family).

ARMS.—Argent, three lions azure, over all a bend gules.

CREST.—A cubit arm erect, coupled below the elbow, habited argent, holding in the hand proper a fleur-de-lis sable.

Observe: That the crest is the same as that of the Eiley family, but the arms totally different. LANE.

There were three settlements of Elys in America between 1630 and 1690. In 1635 there was a Nathaniel Ely living in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and in 1636 he formed one of a band of pioneers who penetrated the wilderness and made the first settlement at Hartford; there was the settlement of Richard Ely at Lyme, Connecticut; and there was the settlement of Joshua Ely, which dates from 1683, at Trenton, New Jersey.

It has been supposed that Nathaniel and Richard Ely were brothers, and it is quite possible that Joshua was also a near relation, if not a brother, there being a tradition that Nathaniel and Richard were brothers, and also a tradition to the effect that Nathaniel, Richard, and Joshua were brothers; but, so far, these traditions have yielded no proof of fact.

"It seems, however, from the great similarity and substantial identity of the Coats of Arms of the Nathaniel, Richard, and Joshua branches, as though they were of the same family, even if not closely related."

There is great uncertainty as to the name of Richard Ely's first wife. Colonel Chester has found the record in the register of St. Andrew's Church at Plymouth of the burial of Joane, wife of Richard Ely, under date of January 7, 1660, but we do not know her maiden name. It is here that we find a suggestion which tends to corroborate the Wonston theory as to the ancestry of Richard Ely.

1667. 9, October. In answ. to the petition of Nath Ely, of Springfield, for ye remittmen of the fine of sixteen pounds for selling cider, etc., the Court on the peticoners ingenuous confession, etc., judge meete to abate the sajd fine to twenty shillings.—The Records of the Colony of the Massachusetts Bay in New England. Vol. IV. HYDE ABBEY, AT WINCHESTER, BURIAL PLACE OF KING ALFRED
(From the MAIL AND EXPRESS)

There is a tradition in the family that the maiden name of Richard Ely's first wife was Joane Phipps, and there is good reason to believe the tradition is correct. This theory strengthens the belief that Richard Ely was connected with the family at Wonston, for the family of Phipps were prominent residents of that place.

"Hon. Smith Ely, Jr., while Mayor of the City of New York, received a letter from Rev. H. Gilder, rector of St. Peter's Church, Sandwich, County of Kent, England, which enclosed a "Plea for the Restoration of St. Peter's Church, Sandwich," a structure built in the reign of King John. In this printed plea is the following statement:

" 'In this church are some very fine monuments. In the north aisle is one of elaborate design (circa 1320), supposed to belong to the St. Leger family. There are also recumbent effigies of Thomas Ely and Margaret, his wife (who were great benefactors to the church and town), upon a table tomb (A. D. 1400), originally under a canopy, which is now entirely destroyed.'

"Then follows an appeal with a view to raise funds for the restoration of the church."

"Now, if the old Elys in England who were buried nearly five hundred years ago have begun to look up distinguished and thrifty individuals of the name on this side of the ocean, I am sure such favored Elys will bend their steps to the old tomb, and ask of those recumbent effigies, with their armorial bearings, the missing genealogical link."

Charles Merivale, Dean of Ely, thus writes to Z. Stiles Ely:

"I have found the name of Ely but twice among 20,000 of our Episcopal clergy, and two other times have met with it among the general population, but it is now of rare occurrence among us. I am well pleased to see that it has flourished so luxuriantly in the new soil to which it has been transplanted."

After his arrival in America, between the years 1660 and 1670, Richard Ely married his second wife, a Mrs. Cullick, who was a sister of Colonel George Fenwick. George Fenwick belonged to an ancient and honorable family of Northumberland that traced its ancestry from a De Fenwyke, who was the lord of the manor and castle of Fenwyke, in Stamfordham, Northumberland, in the time of King Stephen. George Fenwick was the great-grandson of Sir John Fenwick, chief of the name and ancestor of the Fenwicks of Wallington, Brinkburn, Stanton, Whitton, etc. The Brinkburn family was founded by Tristam, a grandson of this Sir John, who received, in the reign of Edward VI., a grant of Brinkburn Priory, on the river Croquet, about twenty-five miles northwesterly from Newcastle.

Sir John Fenwick of Wallington, son of Tristam, was created a baronet by Charles I. in 1628. It is not quite certain whether George Fenwick was a son or a nephew of Sir John Wallington, but there is evidence that he was a member of this branch of the family, and nearly related to the Sir John Fenwick who emigrated to New Jersey in 1675.

Colonel George Fenwick died in March, 1656, and is buried in a church in Berwick-on-Tweed, where a tablet is erected to his memory, with the inscription:

COL. GEORGE FENWICK, OF BRINKBURN, ESQ.

Governor of Berwick in the year 1652.
Was a principal instrument in causing this church to be built, and

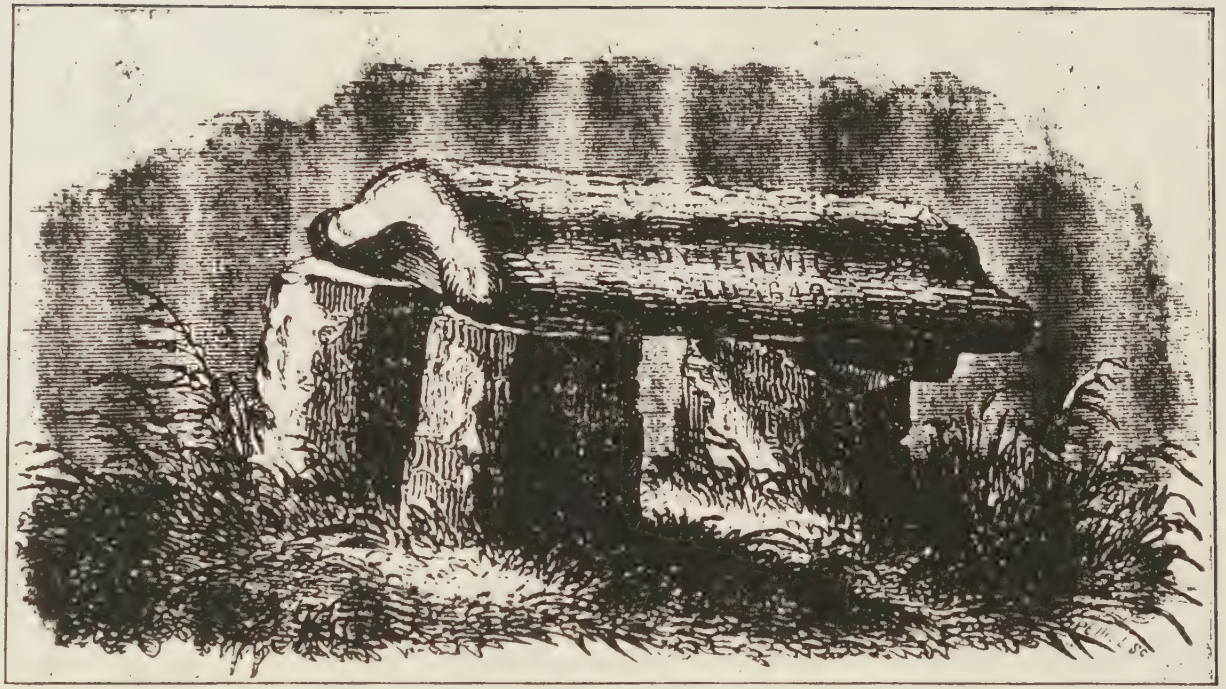
The wife of Col. George Fenwick was Lady Fenwick, or, as she was sometimes called, Lady Alice Boteler. She was the second daughter of



THE TOMB OF LADY FENWICK

SAYBROOK, CONNECTICUT

Sir Edward Apsley, of Thackham, in the County of Surrey, and at the time of her marriage with Mr. Fenwick, was the widow of Sir John Boteler, of Teston, in Kent. Lady Fenwick died in 1645, and was the first white woman buried in American soil. She was interred at Saybrook, Conn. In 1870 it became necessary to remove the remains of Lady Fenwick, owing to the laying out of a railroad, and the disinterment took place at Saybrook, Conn., on Wednesday, November 23, 1870. The remains were found in a good state of preservation, and were carefully collected and reverently reinterred in the cemetery of Saybrook, with imposing public ceremonies, at which some of the most prominent people of the State were present.

The tomb of Lady Fenwick stands on a slight eminence on the western shore of the Connecticut River at Saybrook, near the remains of an old fort, and is about a mile south of the ferry and a mile north of the lighthouse at the mouth of the river.

It was a condition made by Colonel Fenwick in parting with his property here, that the tomb of his wife should be kept in repair by the purchaser and his heirs forever; and it so happens that the descendants of the purchaser have always lived on the land so disposed of.

Hence the inscription on the tomb is a modern one, made according to the ancient agreement.

The "oldest inhabitant" cannot recollect any previous lettering on the stone; the sandstone, of which the tomb is composed, is so worn and furrowed by time and storm that it is not wonderful that any original marks have long since disappeared.

Saybrook is notable as the place for a residence in which it is said that Cromwell, Pymm, Hasselrig and John Hampden—the great revolutionists of England—actually embarked in a vessel at London; but for some reason did not carry out their plan, and so changed the course of English history.

Long ago, when the Puritan fathers settled the town of Saybrook at the mouth of the Connecticut River, they established what was to prove one of the two cradles of civilization in the New World. The infant town was located on the famous grant of land obtained from the Earl of Warwick by Lords Say, Brooke, Seal and others. This tract is described in the chronicles as "extending westward from Narragansett River one hundred and twenty miles along the coast, and thence to the Pacific"—a somewhat more extended territory doubtless than those English grantees realized when they sailed across the sea to take up their claim on the shores of that very new New England.

The town is better known as the original seat of Yale College, the first fifteen Commencements having been held here.

The removal of the institution, or more particularly its library, caused so much disturbance that the Governor of the State and a posse of officers were requisite to enforce the measure, and even then a part of the library was stolen and the removal of the rest much hindered by the burning of bridges and obstructing the roads.

The famous "Saybrook Platform" was a system of doctrine and church government adopted as a basis of the seminary.

THE CHURCH, LYME, CONN.

Lyme, the town intervening between New London and Saybrook, has, among many other quaint items of history, a most unpuritan settlement by a pugilistic tournament between four combatants, two from each town, of a claim to certain lands which was alike urged by New London and Lyme. The Lyme champions were Matthew Griswold, the son of George Fenwick's agent, a man of great physical power, and William Ely, the son of Richard the emigrant. The tradition is alluded to in various local histories, among which the best known are Caulkins' "History of New London," pp. 166-691, and Dr. Dwight's "Travels in New England," 1821, Vol. II., page 522.

The champions of Lyme won the victory, and that town holds the land to this day.

Another item of interest is the naming of a part of the Beach on the Sound, at Lyme, from the circumstance of a negro sleeping in the first log cabin built on that side of the river, to guard the same from the Indians, before the settlers were ready to take possession.

The place has always since been called Black Hall.

George Fenwick was the founder of Saybrook, Conn., where he settled in 1639, under a patent from Lords Say and Brook; and one of his sisters married, May 20, 1648, Captain John Cullick, an early proprietor and prominent citizen of Hartford, and Secretary of the Colony from 1648 to 1658. Captain Cullick removed to Boston, and died there, in January, 1663. His widow was Richard Ely's second wife.

It was through his wife that Richard Ely acquired the property known as Six Mile Island Farm, where Ely Landing and Ferry were established. This property, first taken up by George Fenwick, and afterwards passing, through the marriage of his sister, to whom he had given it, into the possession of the Elys, constitutes one of the oldest titles in America.

The name of Ely's Landing is yet preserved, and portions of the farm are still, after two hundred and twenty-five years, in possession of descendants of Richard Ely.

The system of enumeration which has been adopted in the Ely Genealogy requires some explanation, for it is not the system in ordinary use, and at first glance it certainly seems cumbersome and confusing.

The numerals affixed to each name are not mere numbers, but are significant figures, arranged upon a system intended to facilitate reference.

Instead of beginning with a unit of the lowest denomination to distinguish the first person in the series and regularly increasing the number for each individual in the genealogy, the reader will find a digit added for each generation, beginning with the second, since no unit of value is assigned to Richard, of the first generation, with whom the record begins.

Take as an illustration the number 12345, in the record; figures which, of course, have no reference to the recorded number of individuals but are simply numerals employed to facilitate reference.

The parent of the person represented by the figures 12345 will be found designated as 1234. His grandparent as 123. His great-grandparent as 12; and the next ancestor as 1.

The children of the person to whose name the numbers 12345 are prefixed will be 123451, or 123452, in the order of their ages.

It is not a system to be in all respects commended, but it has some advantages which it is hoped will outweigh its deficiencies.

It is not practicable within the limits of a single volume to develop both a family history and a genealogy, and the reader will recognize the fact that the present work is more directly devoted to the latter.

Some items of interest have been added to the dry genealogical array of dates and names, and for these the editor has drawn freely from the authorities of which a list is subjoined.

Those who would more fully inform themselves as to the family history will find much to interest them in a perusal of the works referred to.

GENEALOGY

ELY FAMILY

SKETCH OF THE ORIGIN AND HISTORY OF THE ELYES OF UTTERBY AND WONSTON, ENGLAND.

In the foregoing pages we have recounted the efforts made to determine the ancestry of Richard Ely, who came from Plymouth, England, to America in 1660. Regret was expressed that these efforts had not been productive of more substantial and satisfactory results. It is believed that recent investigations made by Mr. Wharton Dickinson, of New York, at the instance of Sumner Adriel Ely, Esq., have solved the difficulty, and, thanks to the kind courtesy of these gentlemen, we are able to present a very interesting account of the lineage of our first Richard.

An additional value is given to the investigation of Mr. Dickinson by the fact that it appears to furnish a clue to the mystery of the relationship between Richard Ely, of Plymouth, and Nathaniel Ely, who came to Hartford in 1636. Both had very similar coats-of-arms, and while a relationship has always been deemed probable, no proof of it has, until now, been found.

Col. Chester, on page VIII. of the "Ely Genealogy (Descendants of Nathaniel Ely), by Heman Ely," traces Nathaniel to the Rev. George Ely, who was of a Lincolnshire family. Mr. Wharton Dickinson would seem to have established the fact that Richard Ely was also of Lincolnshire origin, and that he was the son of Thomas Elye, of Utterby, who refers in his will to his son Richard, and thus the degree of relationship between Richard and Nathaniel is clearly indicated.

The following is a synopsis of the ancestry of the English Elyes as prepared by Mr. Dickinson:

PARAGRAPH I.—About the year 550 there appeared at Buda, the Capital of Hungary, a noble Roman youth named Tassilo, who took service under the Hungarian monarch, Theodoric (Theodore), and to whom the latter gave the hand of his daughter Brunehilda in marriage. Their son was named:

PARAGRAPH II.—Theodoric, the Hun, who in 580 was elected Duke by the Bavarians, a warlike people living to the southwest of Austria and just north of the ancient kingdom of Lombardy. He was succeeded by: [Bavarian Chronicles, Vol. I., page 104.]

PARAGRAPH III.—Theodoric II. and the line from Theodoric II. to Tassillo II. is given in the Bavarian Chronicles of the Abbey of Ausberg, published in Latin at Ausberg in 1793, by O. F. Oefelius in Vol. I., page 104. Theodoric was succeeded by:

PARAGRAPH IV.—Garibaldus, Third Duke, and he by:

PARAGRAPH V.—Tassillo I., Fourth Duke, and he by:

PARAGRAPH VI.—Theodoric III., Fifth Duke, who was baptized by St. Rhudberto, Bishop of Ausberg, in 680, and was the first of his line to embrace Christianity. His son:

PARAGRAPH VII.—Theodoric IV., Sixth Duke, was the great friend and patron of Theodebertus, Abbot of the Monastery of Ausberg, early in the Eighth Century, and built the great Church and Monastery of Ausberg, where Luther drew up the "Ausberg Confession of Faith."

Theodoric IV. was succeeded by:

PARAGRAPH VIII.—Grimaldus or Grimvaldus, Seventh Duke, and he by:

PARAGRAPH IX.—Hinckwertus, Eighth Duke, who dying about 760 left:

PARAGRAPH X.—Tassillo II., Ninth Duke, who married Luitberga, daughter and sole heiress of Dedierus, the last of the Lombard Kings, and who contested, with Charlemagne, from 784 to 786, the right to wear the Iron Crown of Lombardy; but was finally overthrown by Charlemagne, and cast into prison with his wife and youngest son, Guelph. Charlemagne had married Desidere, the only daughter of Tassillo, but later repudiated her and married Hildegarde of Swabia. Tassillo languished in prison until the death of Charlemagne, in 814. He died about 820, having had:

1.—Theodoric V., Tenth Duke, d. s. p.

2.—Guelph I. See paragraph XI.

3.—Desidere, Queen of Charlemagne, 768-775, in which year she was divorced.

PARAGRAPH XI.—Guelph I., 830 to 850, Eleventh Duke, had issue:

1.—Guelph II., Twelfth Duke, an ancestor of the house of Brunswick Luneberg, which succeeded to the English Crown in 1714.

KING ALFRED'S GATE WINCHESTER

2.—Conrad, Count of Burgundy. See No. 12.

3.—Judith, Queen of Louis I. (le Debonnaire).

PARAGRAPH XII.—Conrad of Bavaria was invited by the Burgundians to become their Sovereign Count, and thus became Conrad I. of Burgundy, the progenitor of an illustrious line of Counts, Dukes and Kings of Burgundy. He left two sons:

1.—Conrad II., who carried on the line of Burgundy.

2.—Wulfgrin, see No. 13.

PARAGRAPH XIII.—Wulfgrin took service under his kinsman, Charles the Bald, King of France, and was created Count of Perigord and Angoulême. (Genealogist, Second Series, Vol. 2, pages 1 to 12.) He married Rogerlinde, daughter of Bernard, Duke of Toulouse, and fought several engagements with the Northmen. He died May 3, 886, leaving

1.—William, see No. 14.

2.—Aldwin, who became Second Count of Angoulême and died 27th March, 916. His line ended with:

1. Aymer Taillifer, Tenth and last Count, who died in 1192, leaving a daughter and sole heiress.

1. Isabel, married first, John, King of England, See Royal pedigree, No. 61 d. pages 8-9; married, second, Hugh Le Brun, Count de la Marche.

PARAGRAPH XIV.—William, Second Count of Perigord, died about 910, leaving a son and heir:

PARAGRAPH XV.—Bernard, Third Count of Perigord, who died about 950, and was succeeded by:

PARAGRAPH XVI.—Adelbert, Fourth Count, who remained true to the Carlovingian line when Hugh Capet usurped the throne of France, in 987. Hugh summoned all the great vassals of the crown to swear allegiance to him in the Cathedral of Nôtre-Dame, Paris. When Adelbert strode up the aisle and faced the newly crowned monarch with haughty mien, and announced his name and rank, Hugh sternly asked him: "Who made thee Count?" Adelbert, eyeing him with haughty defiance, replied, "Who made thee King?" However, he seems to have taken the oath with the other great vassals and princes and retired to Perigord, where he died about the close of the Tenth Century. His son and heir:

PARAGRAPH XVII.—Heli or Helias, Fifth Count, called "de la Flêche," probably from his skill in handling the bow when hunting, or from the striking architecture of his castle towers, left:

PARAGRAPH XVIII.—Raoul, Sixth Count, was succeeded by:

PARAGRAPH XIX.—Raoul II., Seventh Count, who left:

PARAGRAPH XX.—John, Eighth Count of Perigord, who married Margaret, sole daughter and heiress of Hugh II., Count of Maine; son of Hugh, Count of Maine, a younger son of Hugh Capet, King of France. See No. 4, page 1 and No. 35, page 5 (Royal Pedigree); John died in 1090, leaving:

1. Raoul, Ninth Count, who married Eleanor, Countess of Valois, and became, in right of his wife, Count of Valois.

2. Helias, see No. 21.

PARAGRAPH XXI.—Helias de la Flêche succeeded his father as Count of Maine in 1090.

A very satisfactory account of Helias is given in Palgrave's History of England and Normandy, Vol. IV., p. 631; and Freeman's Norman Conquest, Vol. III., p. 182. Helias married Matilda, daughter of Gervais, Seigneur du Château du Loir. In 1097 he took the Cross and prepared to join Robert, of Normandy, in the crusade. Upon asking permission of his feudal superior, William Rufus, King of England and Duke of Normandy, Rufus said, "Go where you choose, but first surrender Maine and Mantes; all that my father had, I will have also." Helias answered that he held this patrimony by hereditary right, derived from his ancestors. "Let that right be investigated by the Supreme Legislature; the High Court in which the Kings, Nobles and the Bishops are assembled; let the claim be examined according to the laws of the country, and by that judgment stand or fall."

He was the first great peer of France to maintain the doctrine, then unheard of, that the people of France had constitutional rights which even Kings were bound to respect (a position his great descendant, Bishop Ely, always maintained, and enforced)

In June, 1098, Helias was captured by stratagem by Robert de Belesme, Earl of Shrewsbury, near Dangeuil, and brought before Rufus, who kept him in prison until 1099, when he was released, and went to England (Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, Vol. II., p. 203, Vol. XXIII., Master of the Rolls), and in 1100 Henry I. conferred upon him extensive grants of land in Cambridgeshire, including the Isle of Ely, where he died in 1110. His children were:

1. Helias, Fifth Count, who went to Maine to recover his rights, but was put to death by Fulk V., Count of Anjou, his brother-in-law.
2. Richard de Helie, elected Abbot of Ely in 1106. See Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, Vol. II., p. 203 (being Vol. XXIII, Master of the Rolls, Series Great Britain).

   In William of Malmsbury Chronicle, page 114, we find mention of "Ricardus de Helie, Abbatus de Ely," 1106-1109, when Henry I. transferred the Abbey to the newly created Diocese of Ely, as its Cathedral.

   On page 325 we find "the doubts of the incorruptibility of the body of Saint Wilburga cleared up by Richard de Helie, 1106," and "her sacred body was brought to the Shrine of Ely."
3. Uthred, see paragraph 22.
4. Sybilla, who married Count Fulk, of Anjou.

PARAGRAPH XXII.—Uthred de Helie inherited the land granted to Helie, Count of Maine, by Henry I., in 1100, in the Isle of Ely, in Cambridgeshire. Uthred died during the reign of Stephen, 1135-1154, leaving two sons:

1. John, see paragraph XXIII.
2. Helias, who went to Scotland in 1165 and received from Alexander I. a grant of the Barony of Dundas in Stirlingshire, and was the founder of the noble houses of Dundas of Dundas, Dundas of Arnistoun, and Dundas of Fingark.

THE ELYES OF UTTERBY AND WONSTON, 550-1650.

PARAGRAPH XXIII.—John de Elie flourished in the reign of Stephen and Henry II., and warmly espoused the cause of the Empress Matilda, daughter of Henry I., and wife of his (John's) own cousin, Geoffrey Plantagenet, Count of Anjou. When the latter's son, Henry, ascended the English throne, in 1154, he appointed John de Elie Treasurer of the Household. John died about 1170, and was succeeded by his son:

PARAGRAPH XXIV.—Richard de Elie whom Henry II. appointed Lord High Treasurer of England, in which high office he served during the entire reign of Henry II., 1154-1189, and in the reign of Richard I. until his death in 1199. (Book of Dignities, page 152.) His son:

PARAGRAPH XXV.—William de Elye was one of the Justiciaries of England, 1208-9 (see Book of Dignities, p. 364), and Lord High Treasurer in the Reign of King John. He died in 1209. Book of Dignities, pp. 152 and 364; his son and heir:

PARAGRAPH XXVI.—Walter de Elye was one of the Knights that accompanied Richard to Palestine in 1190, and when they returned in 1192 Richard placed his queen, Berengaria, and two of her ladies, Bertha, daughter of the Count of Brittany, and Irene, daughter of the Emperor of Cyprus, Isaac Comnenus, in the custody of Walter de Ely and Robert de Wancie to conduct to England, and they received £168 12s. from the royal Exchequer for the expenses. (See Vol. VIII., p. 71, of Journal of the Yorkshire Archæological and Topographical Society.) Sir Walter distinguished himself at the Siege of Acre, and participated in other battles under Richard. He died about 1220, leaving several sons:

1. Henry, who about 1220 acquired the Manor of Utterby, County Lincoln, where he lived many years. His name appears on the Rolls of the Court of Assizes, held at Lincoln. 54th Henry III. (1269), as attorney for Thomas Blaumpayn, of Holkynton, County Lincoln, where he is called Henricus de Elye, of Utterby. Surtee's Soc. Pub., Vol. LXXXVIII., p. 211. His only daughter:

    1. Catherine, married Ralph de Shelton, of Norwich, County Norfolk. (See Bloomfield's Norfolk, Vol. V., page 264.) But it is not apparent that she carried

Utterby to her husband, as we find Richard, son of Ralph de Elye, at Utterby. Catherine left:

1. Henry, of whom we only know that he was living in 1244 and was the father of:
    1. Nicholas, whose name appears in connection with the date 1257. His son was:
        1. Henry, 1270; father of:
            Sir Robert, born 1261; married Isabel —— and died in 1305, leaving:
1. John, who married Maud ———, and left:
    1. John, married Agatha ———.
    2. Ralph, married Joan ———.
    3. Nicholas, married Alice ———, and had daughter Alice, who married her cousin, John de Elye, of Utterby.
    4. Catherine, who married Richard de Elye, of Utterby.

2. Ralph, see paragraph XXVII.
3. Philip, Lord High Treasurer of England, 1211. Book of Dignities, p. 152.
4. William, witness to a charter from Walter de Calverley to the Monks of Howden, near Pontefract, York, in 1253. (Yorkshire Archæological and Topographical Journal, Vol. XI., p. 57.)
5. Gerard, living, 1245, 29th Henry III. Calendar of Ancient Deeds, Vol. I., A. 4050.
6. Nicholas, born in Ely, about 1200, originally a monk in the Cluniac Monastery of Daventry, 1231-49 (Dugdale's Monasticon, Vol. V., p. 176); appointed Archdeacon of Ely, 1249, and prebendary of St. Paul's, 1252; Lord High Chancellor and Keeper of the Great Seal, October 18, 1260, to July, 1261;

Lord High Treasurer, 1262-63; Lord High Chancellor, 1263-64; Lord High Treasurer, 1264-66; elected Bishop of Worcester, 1266, and Bishop of Winchester, 1268; died 1280. (See Stephen's Dictionary of Nat. Bio., Vol. XVII., p. 344.) The body of this illustrious man, one of England's greatest prelates, was interred in the Church of Waverley Abbey, in Surrey, to which he was warmly attached, but his heart was deposited near the High Altar in his own Cathedral at Winchester.

The grandson of Richard was Thomas, of Utterby, who was living there in 1634, and who was the father of John, who was living in Lincolnshire in 1660.

PARAGRAPH XLIII.—Leonard Elye removed from Utterby to Wonston, in the reign of Elizabeth, about 1560; in 1588 was Supervisor of the will of William Gore, of Nether-Wallop, one of the parishioners of his cousin Rev. Thomas Elye, of Nether-Wallop. His sons were:

Wilts, died in 1663. A tablet to his memory was erected in Chippenham church (Genealogist, New Series, Vol. VI, p. 204), bearing this inscription: "Near this place lyeth the body of John Elye, Gent., sometime Burgess of this Towne, who dyed Nov. 2d, 1663." His wife's name was Mary, as we learn from her tablet:

"Neare to this place lyeth also the body of Mary, relict of John Elye, Gent., who died Oct. the 19th, 1671." They had a son Richard, whose tablet reads: "Neare this place lyeth the body of Richard, son to John Elye, Gent., who dyed the 21st Feby., 1676, aged 23 years."

5. Richard, born 1608; removed to Plymouth, County Devon.
6. Edward, born 1614; matriculated St. Mary's Hall, Oxford. 4 Nov. 1631 called son of "Richard Elye of Wonston, Hants, Gent."

PARAGRAPH XLV. Thomas Elye was born in 1600; the register of St. Mary's College, Oxford, shows that "Thomas Elye, of Southamptonshire, Gent., matriculated 28 March, 1617, aged 17." Graduated B.A. 1621; M.A. 1625; Vicar of South Stoneham, Hants, 1629-30. Died 30 March, 1631. Inquisition at Basingstoke, 11 May, 7th, Charles I. (1631) mentions Thomas, son and heir, aged 8; Richard, aged 6; Elizabeth, aged 4. (Genealogist New Series, Vol. 15, p. 260.) He married, in 1622, his cousin Elizabeth, daughter of William Gore the Younger (5th and youngest son of William Gore the Elder), who owned lands at Basingstoke. As stated in his will he had:

1. Thomas, born 1623; removed to Plymouth, County Devon, and became Alderman and Mayor of Plymouth about 1650. His daughter
    1. Mary married Randolph Floyer, of Topsham, County Devon, near Plymouth, and nephew of the gentleman who married her aunt, Elizabeth Elye. They had:

1. Anthony, named in the will of his great aunt, Eleanor Floyer, 10 January, 1695.
2. Mary, also named in said will.

2. Richard. See No. 46.
3. Elizabeth; married Randolph Floyer, of Floyer, County Devon. (His brother, William Floyer, of Berne, County Dorset, had a son, Randolph Floyer, of Topsham, who married Mary Elye, as just related.)

PARAGRAPH XLVI.—Richard Ely, as he spelt his name, was born at Basingstoke in 1625. He is said, when a young man, to have served under Cromwell, and we are very much inclined to believe he is the "Captain Richard Elye" referred to by L. C. Norris-Elye. He was just of the age, in 1643, to have enlisted as a private, but this fact cannot at present be verified. He was in Plymouth, Devon, from about 1650 to 1655, where his brother Thomas was permanently located, and were, also, his uncle Richard had lived many years. They apparently belonged to St. John Parish, and here it is that we must look to find the name of Richard Ely's first wife. He probably came to Boston as early as 1655, where his kinsman, John Ely, had come as early as 1650, and soon after 1660 he married Elizabeth Cullick, a widow, daughter of Col. Samuel Phipps, of Boston, who owned, in her own right, some 300 acres of land at Lyme, Conn., to which place he removed in 1663, and where she died 12 Nov., 1683, and he died, 24 Nov., 1684. By first wife only he had:

1. William.
2. Richard, born about 1650. When about 15 years old his father sent him to the Barbadoes, where he had a relative living named James Ely, living in St. Michael's Parish, Bridgeton, as late as 1680. (Hotten's List of Emigrants, p. 447.) Richard seems to have been of a roving disposition, for we find him in 1692 in Kittery, Maine, as a witness to the will of John Sloper, February 9, 1692 (Maine Wills, p. 37). In 1695 we find his name on the Tax List of Boston (Boston Tax List, 1694-95, p. 161). He married Mary Marvin, and in 1690 received 1,300 acres at Lyme. He died in 1726.

THE ELYS OF WONSTON,

1540-1660.

CHURCH AND BURIAL GROUND

WONSTON, ENGLAND

QUOTING FROM THE REPORT OF THE LATE COLONEL CHESTER WE BEGIN THE ACCOUNT OF THE ELYS OF WONSTON WITH

A. JOHN ELY, Warden of the Episcopal Palace of Wolvesey, at Winchester, who, by his wife Julian, had two sons, Nicholas and Edward.

The Will of John Ely, dated Nov. 28, 1541, was proved at Winchester by the relict Julian on the 25th of May, 1542. Col. Chester, in his pamphlet, "The Elys of Wonston," says that: "The will itself affords no clue as to the social status of the testator, but fortunately the indorsement made upon it when filed supplies this deficiency. That endorsement is, 'Testamentum Johis Ely nuper Custodis de Wolvesey,' etc.: which means that he was Warden of the Episcopal Palace of Wolvesey. This palace of the Bishops of Winchester was in reality a castle, erected soon after the Conquest, and destroyed by the Parliamentary forces after the capture of Winchester in 1645. The post of Warden or Major-Domo of such an establishment as a bishop's castle or palace in those days, when they lived in a style only less than that of royalty, was one of dignity and importance, and would not have been held by an inferior person."

"John Ely named no children in his Will; but it does not follow necessarily that he had none. Such omissions were very common. The will is so very brief that it was probably made in extremis, the chief object being to secure to his wife the control of his possessions, whatever they may have been, for the benefit of herself and her young children. My impression is that he left at least two sons, Nicholas and Edward. In the registers of Wonston, where the Ely family lived for several generations afterwards there occurs the baptism, 22d July, 1570, of William, son of Edward Ely, neither of whom is again mentioned in the register. I take him to have been the younger son of John Ely, and that he had settled elsewhere, but took occasion while, perhaps, paying a visit to his elder brother at Wonston to have his child baptised there. He is, however, of no further importance to our narrative, except as showing a good reason for the subsequent occurrence of the Christian names of Edward and William in the Ely pedigree." Their children:

Nicholas, d. 1571; m. ——— Cannon.
Edward.

"I have failed to find any further trace of the widow Julian. Her will is not in existence. She may have remarried and so have been lost sight of, or she may have died and been buried at Wonston before the date of the existing parish registers, those previous to 1570 being hopelessly lost. I may add here that, if there were ever any monuments for the Elys at Wonston, they have entirely disappeared, so that we can obtain no information from that source."

The following view, copied from an old print of 1783, shows the ruins of the Episcopal Palace of Wolvesley, of which John Ely was Warden in 1540.

The following is an abstract of the Will of John Ely, as given by Col. Chester in his pamphlet "The Elys of Wonston":

"In the name of god amen in the yere of our lorde god MVCxlith the xxviii daye of November I John Ely of the parishe of Saynte Elizabethe beinge not sike and in goode remembrance make and institute this my laste wille in maner and forme foloynge ffryste I bequethe my sowlle vnto allmightie god and to owr blessyde ladie saynt Marye and to all the holye companye of heven and my body to be buryed in Sayncte Elizabethe churche I bequeathe to my mother churche of the blessyde Trynite (i. e., now Winchester Cathedral) xijd to Saynte Elizabethe xijd and all the resydue of my goodes moveable and unmoveable I bequeathe to Julian my wyffe whome I make my hole executrix Wytnes whereof I have subscribyd my name and herevnto putte my seale."

A A. NICHOLAS ELY. The first occurrence of the name of Ely in the Wonston registers is the baptism of William, son of Edward, already alluded to. The next is the burial on the 4th of September, 1571, of "Nicholas Elye, the farmer of Wonston." This description of him does not mean that he was merely a farmer at Wonston, but that he was the farmer, or leaseholder, of the Wonston estate, belonging to the bishop of Winchester. The bishops of the period (and down to the time of the Commonwealth), or, rather, the various sees which they represented, possessed numerous estates, mostly in their respective dioceses, but sometimes in others, which had come into their possession either as religious bequests to the church or by purchase, which they let out on lease, and from which they derived considerable revenue. These leases of the "Bishops' Lands," as they continued to be called down to the middle of the seventeenth century, were much sought after, as, for some reason or another, the bishops were considered good landlords, and there was also a religious feeling among the leaseholders that they connected them in some mysterious way directly with the church. The disposal of them afforded the bishops a sort of patronage, and it was a custom to give the preference to their favorites, and oftentimes to provide thus for their retainers, or, when, dying in their service, for their families.

One of the Hampshire estates of the bishop of Winchester lay in the parish of Wonston, and it is that of which we find Nicholas Ely the farmer, or leaseholder, at his death in 1571. Whether it was a mere farm of ordinary magnitude, or a more considerable estate, it is not easy to say. From the fact that he is specified directly as "the farmer of Wonston," it looks as though it may have been the superior farm in the parish. In the inventory attached to his will, however, the appraised value of the lease itself is given as £60. Whether this was a large or small sum would depend upon how long the existing lease had yet to run. The family were in possession of it for quite seventy-five years longer, but it may of course have been renewed during that period once or a dozen times. Sixty pounds, however, was not exactly a small sum. It would be equal at this day, according to the relative value of money then and now, to at least £300, say $1500, and this, it must be remembered, was only what a purchaser would have to pay for the right of the unexpired term of the lease itself. The annual rent would have to be paid to the landlord as well. Besides, these appraisements of a dead man's possessions were always greatly below their actual value, as they were made by the testator's friends and neighbors, on whose estates similar appraisements would have to be made in due course, and who followed the rule of doing as they would be done by. At the London Probate Registry it is quite understood that a testator's personal possessions are generally appraised at about one-third their real value. If this were so, then the probable value of Nicholas Ely's lease would have been nearly $5,000. But, whatever it was, he was in possession of it at his death, and the question is, how he came by it? I can not but think, either that he inherited it from his father, or that after his father's death it was bestowed upon him by the bishop, in order thus to make some provision for the family of his old retainer. In either case, and in the absence of any of the other Elys from the county in question and the diocese of Winchester, I think the probability so very great as to be almost a certainty that the Warden of the Bishop's Palace and Nicholas Ely, the farmer of the same bishop's lands at Wonston, were father and son.

THE ELYS OF WONSTON, 1540-1660.

Nicholas Ely was twice married. Of his first wife, who was the mother of all his children, I am not able to learn even the Christian name, as she died long before the extant registers begin. She was, however, evidently the daughter of Elizabeth Cannon, whom Nicholas Ely in his will called his mother, i. e., mother-in-law, for whom he provided as a good son-in-law might be expected to do for the widowed grandmother of his own children. His second wife was Alice, one of the daughters of Thomas Inkpen (or Ingpen, for they spelt the name in both ways), of Galacre, in Longparish, in the same county. This family was an heraldic one, and their pedigree was entered at the Heraldic Visitation of Hampshire in 1634, which proves that the social status of Nicholas Ely was then such that he could ally himself with the gentry of the county. She is mentioned in her father's will, dated 25th of February, 1564-5, as then the wife of Nicholas Ely. She survived her husband, but was not buried at Wonston, nor was she remarried there. He provided handsomely for her, even to her remaining in his own house; but, as none of his children were hers, she probably returned to her own friends. She is of no account in the pedigree beyond showing that Nicholas Ely was considered a fitting match for a recognized gentlewoman.—Col. Chester, in "The Elys of Wonston."

And if it happen that said children, Thomas, Richard, Mary, or Elizabeth die before receiving their legacies then the legacy of him, her or them so dying shall be equally divided among the survivors, and if all die (which God forbid) then to remain only to my executor.—All the residue of my goods, debts and chattels, also the lease of my farm of Wonston, I give to Leonard Ely, my eldest son, whom I make and ordaine sole executor of this my last Will and testament—and I appoint my brother-in-law, Francis Inckepenne, Gentleman, Richard Inckepenne, his eldest son, Edward Gilbert, of Everly Co. Wilts, Gentleman, and William St. John of Norton Co. Southampton, Gentleman, overseers of my said will, and I give to each a gold angel."

A codicil, dated 13th July, 1571, gives £10 more to each of said children, to make their legacies each £30.

A codicil, dated 18th July, 1571, gives six and eight pence to the poor man's box at Wonston, a ewe and lamb to the parson of Wonston, and a ewe and lamb towards the reparations of the church of Wonston.

NICHOLAS ELYE.

A B. EDWARD ELY, was the son of John Ely and Julian ———. No mention can be found of Edward Ely in the registers of Wonston with the exception of the record of the baptism of his son, William, which event took place on the 22d of July 1570.

A A A. LEONARD ELY, son of Nicholas Ely and ——— (Cannon), was old enough at his father's death to be his executor, but was then unmarried. He married, probably toward the end of the year, or early in 1572, Margaret Gore (or Goore). Her identity is established by the following entry in the Wonston register, under date of January 3rd, 1613-14: "Barbara, the wife of William Saint John, of Norton, Esquyre, whilst he lived, and Margreat, the wife of Leonard Eely, of Wonston, Gent., being sisters, were buryed both in one grave." In the Visitation of Hampshire, of 1634, the wife of this William St. John (who was of the family afterwards Earls of Bolingbroke) is given as "Barbara, daughter of . . . Goore, of Wallop, co. Southampton." It has not thus far been ascertained who was the father of these two sisters, but the Gores generally were of great respectability, and the St. Johns were not in the habit of marrying out of their own rank.

By his wife, Margaret Gore, Leonard Ely had ten children, six sons and four daughters.

Leonard Ely survived his wife Margaret a little more than a year and a half, and was buried at Wonston on the 27th of August, 1615. He left a will under date of April 10, 1615, which will was proved at Winchester on the 6th of September, in the same year, by Richard Ely, the son and sole executor. The inventory of his effects has disappeared. It is evident that, besides still holding the lease of the farm of Wonston, Leonard Ely had accumulated other leases, both in Wonston and the neighboring parishes. He had also married into a good family, and thus acquired connections among the gentry of the county, and he died leaving his family well provided for.

Following will be found a verbatim copy of the Will of Leonard Ely:

A A B. CHRISTOPHER ELY, named in his father's will as his second son, and to whom he bequeathed £20. He settled and died in Lincolnshire. He was the son of Nicholas Ely and ——— (Cannon).

His will, dated 14th of September, 1598, was proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, the 26th of October following. It was dated at Kirton, in Lindsey, county Lincoln, and he styled himself a Yeoman. He named his brothers and sisters and their husbands, so that his identification is complete. His wife Margaret was his executrix, of whom nothing further has been found. He left a young son, Nicholas, evidently his only child. Lest it might be thought strange that he should have strayed away to a such a distant county, it may be suggested as a very probable and very reasonable explanation that his brother-in-law, Dr. Reniger, owned extensive estates in Lincolnshire (as appears by his will), and that he placed their management in Christopher Ely's hands, as his steward or agent.

A A C. THOMAS ELY, son of Nicholas Ely and ——— (Cannon), was named as third son in his father's will, in 1570. He was then a minor, and was at school at Winchester.

He became Vicar of Nether Wallop, in Hampshire, 10th March, 1586-7, and on the 6th of August, 1604, was made a prebendary of Salisbury, both of which posts he held until his death. His will, dated 13th of May, 1615, was proved at London on the 14th of June following, by his brother, Richard Ely, and his brother-in-law, Lawrence Jackson. He left a widow, Elenor, and a young daughter, Elizabeth, of neither of whom was Col. Chester able to find anything later, and also one son, John Ely, who subsequently married Anne, daughter of Thomas Edmonds, of Bossington, in Hampshire (of another heraldic family, whose pedigree is in the Visitation of Hampshire of 1634); but no record has been found of any issue. His widow renounced the administration of his estate on the 9th of February, 1630-1, when he was described as of Quidhampton, in the parish of Overton, Hants, and letters were granted to Lawrence Jackson, above mentioned, the husband of one of his aunts.

A A D. RICHARD ELY, named as the fourth and youngest son of Nicholas Ely in the will of the latter, in 1570, was then a minor.

In the will of his brother, Christopher Ely, in 1598, his "three children" were named, and in that of his sister, Margery Reniger in 1624-5; he was said to be living at Overton, before mentioned. This is the last date to which he has been traced. He left no will, and as the early Overton registers are not in existence, one has not been able to ascertain the names of his wife and two of his children, or when they and himself died. His eldest and, presumably, only son, matriculated at Oxford University from St. Mary Hall, on the 28th of March, 1617, aged 17 (so born in 1599, or early in 1600), paying the fees of a gentleman's son. In the latter part of 1626 he became vicar of South Stoneham, Hants, and so continued until his death. His will, dated on the 30th of March, 1631, is on file at Winchester, but has no record of probate attached.

The inventory of his goods, however, is dated the 2nd of April in the same year. He left his lands and goods to his wife (without giving her name) and his three children, Thomas, Richard, and Elizabeth, all, of course, very young, as he could not have married until after 1621. Of the eldest son, Thomas, and the daughter, Elizabeth, no further information has been found, but Richard subsequently became a merchant in London, where Col. Chester traced him, from his marriage in 1655-6, down to his burial, 30th of January, 1680-1.

A A E. MARGARET ELY, eldest daughter of Nicholas Ely and ——— (Cannon), married the Rev. Michael Reniger, D. D. (an account of whom will be found in Anthony Wood's Athenæ Oxonienses), afterward Arch-deacon of Winchester, Prebendary of London, and Prebendary, Sub-dean, and finally Chancellor of the Diocese of Lincoln, who died at Crawley, Hants, on the 26th of August, 1609.

Margaret Ely survived her husband seventeen years. Her will, dated March 9, 1624-5, was proved at Winchester on the 16th of October, 1626. They had several children, some of whom, with issue, were living at her death.

A A F. ELIZABETH ELY, youngest daughter of Nicholas Ely and ——— (Cannon), was married at Wonston on the first of December, 1584, to Lawrence Jackson, described in the register as a gentleman. (He was the son of Rev. Lawrence Jackson, Rector of Overton, Hants.)

They were both living in 1615, with issue—Bridget and William, and he was living as late as February 9, 1630-1, when he administered the estate of his wife's nephew, John Ely.

A A A A. DOROTHY ELY, daughter of Leonard Ely and Margaret Gore, was baptised at Wonston, January 2, 1572-3, and married there, July 15, 1594, to Edward Tutt, of Chilbolton, Hampshire, who was also of an heraldic family. She died before 1615, leaving a son James and a daughter Margaret, and her husband remarried.

A A A B. RICHARD ELY, eldest son of Leonard Ely and Margaret Gore, was baptised at Wonston on the 18th of July, 1574.

He was his father's executor in 1615, and was named in his brother Nicholas' will, in 1634, as then of Wonston. It is clear, however, that he had not lived there for some years after his marriage, and before his father's death, as none of his children were baptised there.

His wife, Anne, about whom nothing has been learned beyond her name, was buried there the 30th of October, 1646.

- Anne, d. 1646.

A A A E. NICHOLAS ELY, third son of Leonard Ely and Margaret Gore, was baptised at Wonston, January 21, 1580-1.

He was educated at Oxford, where he matriculated from Gloucester Hall, in January or February, 1597-8, aged 17, paying the fees of a gentleman's son. By his father, who had purchased the right from the patron of the living, he was, in 1608, presented to the rectory of Winterslow, in Wiltshire, and continued to be rector of that parish until his death.

His will, dated the 8th of May, 1634, was proved at Salisbury on the 14th of October, 1635, by his relict. He evidently had no children. Among his legacies to his brothers and sisters was one to his sister Elizabeth of "the gold ring with a precious stone" bequeathed to him by his father, which should be remembered.

His wife was Phillis Marsh, who evidently returned to her friends. Her will, as of East Tisted, Hampshire, dated 18th of May, 1646, was confirmed May 31, 1650, and was proved at Winchester on the 2nd of October in the latter year, but contains nothing of interest, as her bequests were confined to her own family.

A A A F. CHRISTOPHER ELY, son of Leonard Ely and Margaret Gore, was baptised at Wonston, January 13, 1581-2.

He and his wife Anne were named in his father's will in 1615, and he in his brother Nicholas' will in 1634; but nothing further has been found concerning either of them.

A A A G. HENRY ELY, son of Leonard Ely and Margaret Gore, was baptised at Wonston, October 27, 1583.

He had a daughter Mary baptised there, March 28, 1626, but his name does not occur again in the Wonston registers.

He was named in his brother Nicholas' will in 1634, and as then living at Rumsey in Hampshire; but the Rumsey registers reveal nothing about him.

A A A I. LEONARD ELY, youngest son of Leonard Ely and Margaret Gore, was baptised at Wonston, June 1, 1589.

He was married there, October 21, 1616, to Barbara Spencer, who was buried there, May 7, 1624. By her he had one son, Leonard, who was baptised at Wonston, November 28, 1617, and who was living as late as 1646, after which nothing more concerning him has been found.

Leonard Ely, the elder, married a second wife, Mary, who was buried at Wonston, January 31, 1647-8, whom he probably survived; but no later date of him has been found than the 18th of May, 1646, when he was named in the will of his brother Nicholas. By his last wife he had a son Samuel, baptised at Wonston, May 4, 1634, and a daughter Anne, baptised there, July 9, 1642. Of the latter nothing further has been found, but the descendants of the son Samuel have been traced three generations later.

Children of Leonard Ely and Barbara Spencer:

Children of Leonard Ely and Mary—Second wife.

Anne, b. 1642.

The fortunes of the family appear to have culminated about this period, viz., 1650. Leonard Ely was the youngest of six sons, and, of course, his fortune proportionably small. His descendants appear to have deteriorated in social position, though there is no reason to suppose, but the contrary, that they were otherwise than respectable in the various callings to which they betook themselves. This last named Samuel Ely left a son Leonard, who followed the trade of a joiner in Winchester, and died in 1719. His will shows that he was at least a thrifty man, as he owned the leases of several houses in that city. He left three sons, Edward, Samuel, and Leonard, and two daughters, Elizabeth, married to Henry Crutch, a tailor, and Margaret, married to Robert Weight, a cordwainer. Edward, the eldest son, at his death in 1733, was porter of the Cathedral Close in Winchester, and was thus, if the pedigree be correct, an official, though in a much more humble capacity, of the same episcopal establishment in which his ancestor, as warden of the Bishop's palace, had figured two centuries before.

A A A J. ELIZABETH ELY, daughter of Leonard Ely and Margaret Gore, was baptised at Wonston, May 25, 1591.

She was married there, December 5, 1614, to Leonard Green. Both were living, with a daughter Barbara, as late as 1635.

"We return now to Richard Ely; the son of Leonard Ely and Margaret Gore. His son Richard, we know, was living at the date of his grandfather's will, in 1615, and evidently very young. As his brother Edward was born in 1612, it is probably safe to assume that he was himself born about 1610.

The question that now arises is, What became of these last two Richards, father and son?

That they left Wonston is certain, and probably soon after 1646, in which year the elder Richard buried his wife and daughter. The last entry of the name of Ely in the Wonston register is in January, 1647-8, when the second wife of Leonard Ely was buried. There was a rate made in April, 1664, still extant, which contains the names of all the residents of Wonston at that date, and there is no Ely among them. Indeed, there were none left in 1646 except the families of the two brothers, Richard and Leonard. That of the latter I have already traced to Winchester, but the two Richards, father and son, appear not only to have quitted Wonston, but to have left the county altogether, as there is no will of either of them at Winchester or London. Why did they so leave and where did they go?

As to the first half of the question, there is a most reasonable solution of the mystery. The old homestead at Wonston, to which the elder Richard had succeeded, was sold over their heads, and they were driven away.

The sequestration of all the lands held by Bishops, Deans, and Chapters by the long Parliament, is so well known that I need only allude to it. The Sequestration Committee was appointed as early as 1642, but it was not until October, 1646, that the ordinance was passed vesting all the honors, manors, lordships, &c., of these dignitaries in the hands of certain trustees, "for the payment of the just and necessary debts of the kingdom." This was followed a month later by another ordinance directing the sale of all the bishops' lands and estates for the service of the Commonwealth. The sale of these estates commenced the next year and continued for nearly five years. The earliest date we have was 5th July, 1647, and the latest 19th March, 1651-2. The prices at which the trustees had appraised them were so low that they were greedily purchased by speculators, or by tradesmen of moderate wealth, who were thus able to secure estates in the country at a low price. Scarcely any instances are known where the old tenants, or leaseholders remained on these lands. The latter class of purchasers, just mentioned, wanted them for their own residences, while the former instantly doubled or trebled the former rents, with which the bishops had been content, which was ruinous to the then holders, and so they were forced to abandon what had been the homes of their families for many generations.

Somewhere between 1647 and 1651 the "farm of Wonston," the home of the Elys, had been thus disposed of, and it is precisely at this period that the two Richard Elys, being eldest sons in succession, the actual and prospective lessees of the farm, disappear, not only from the parish but from the county.

As I have shown before, it seemed evident that the elder Richard Ely did not live permanently at Wonston, certainly before his father's death, as none of his children were baptized there. It is equally evident that he retained his right there, because, wherever his other residence, his wife and children were brought there to be buried. He was living there in 1634, as his brother Nicholas then described him as of Wonston. His other residence was not at Winchester nor its immediate vicinity, as I have exhausted the various parish registers, and find no trace of him, and it is clear that he went a little farther afield. My theory is that he was engaged in some sort of business, probably at Southampton, and, if so, it would be likely to be a business connected with shipping. That by 1634, he then beginning to get in years, he retired to the homestead at Wonston, leaving his son Richard to manage the business, or he himself dividing his time between the two places. That in process of time the son Richard decided to change the base of his operations, and migrated to Plymouth, either opening a branch establishment or transferring his entire business there. Such a transition from one to another of the principal seaports on the south coast of England would be the most natural thing possible.

Portsmouth is the other seaport of Hampshire, but I have examined the registers of that and the adjacent parishes without finding a single Ely entry. In Southampton, at this period, there were four parishes, but in only one of them do the existing registers begin early enough to be of any use in this inquiry. The registers of St. Michael begin in 1552, but contain no Ely entries, while those of St. Mary, Holy Rood, and All Saints do not commence, respectively, until 1675, 1653, and 1650. My firm conviction is that, if the earlier registers were not hopelessly lost, I should have found in one or other of them the baptisms of the elder Richard's children and the marriage of the younger Richard.

Richard Ely, the emigrant to New England, appears in Plymouth in or shortly before 1647, as suddenly as if he had dropped from the clouds, and he must have come from somewhere. I have shown that there were no Elys in Plymouth prior to his date and none in Devonshire at any period. He must have come, therefore, from some other part of the country, and as he was engaged in the shipping business, nothing is more reasonable than that he should have followed that business at his former place of residence. In those days vessels sailing from Southampton usually called at Plymouth, and the two ports were intimately connected. There is not only nothing unreasonable in my theory, but everything in its favor.

In 1647, Richard Ely the younger, of Wonston, would have been about thirty-five years old. The Richard Ely of Plymouth had probably recently married, as we never hear of any other of his children than those already named, and William, the eldest, was born there in 1647. He may, however, have been there a year or two longer. At all events he is there in business in 1647.

Soon after, certainly between that year and 1651, the elder Richard suddenly finds the old homestead at Wonston sold over his head, and he is thrust out into the world in his old age. It will be remembered that he had buried his wife in October, 1646, and his only surviving daughter the following month. In another year or two he found himself homeless. Where should the broken-down old man go except to the new home of his only son in Plymouth? That he did go there is my firm belief, and also that he, and only he, was the Richard Ely who was buried there on the 12th of February, 1658-9, as I have already stated.

I submit that there is not a fact nor a date in this theory that does not harmonize perfectly with what we know absolutely of the history of the Wonston family and of Richard Ely, the emigrant, and, although, as I said at the outset, I can not establish the identity by positive legal proof, the circumstantial evidence is so strong that, as a descendant of Richard Ely myself, I have an instinctive conviction that through him I descend also from the Wonston family, whose history I have narrated, beginning with the warden of the Bishop's Palace at Winchester.

Under such circumstances, it is easy to understand the emigration of Richard Ely. He had buried his aged father, and in less than a year after, his own wife. He was the last of his direct line, the ancient home of his fathers had been wrested from him, and his immediate hearth was desolate. At Plymouth, and in his peculiar line of business, he would be sure to hear glowing accounts of the new world, and with no tie to keep him in England, it is not strange that, in the very year of his wife's death, he resolved to seek his future fortunes there.

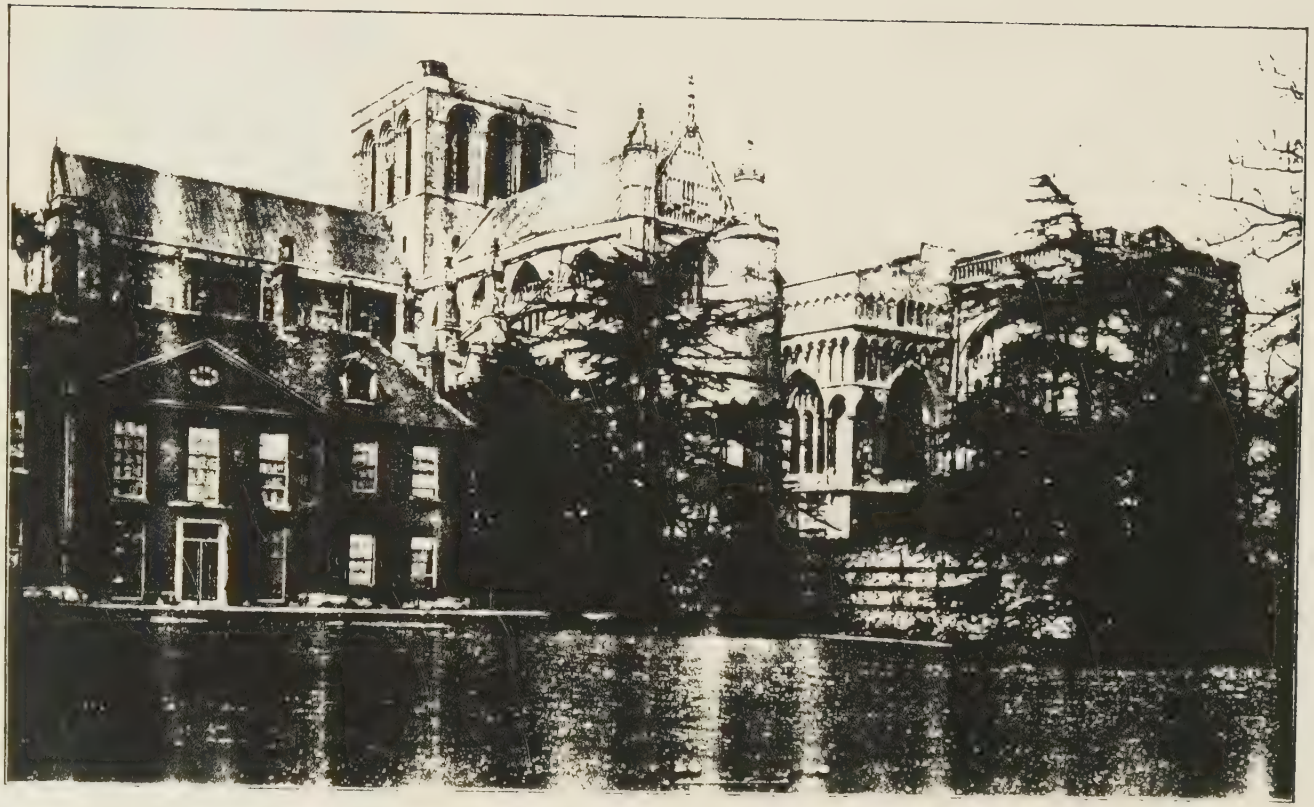
Dear Sir:—

In accordance with your request, I have made careful researches in order to ascertain, if possible, whether any proof can be found that the two families of Ely of Wonston and Ely of Plymouth (Richard Ely emigrated from Plymouth to New England in 1660) were the same or were connected in any way.

In order to discover this, I have followed up as carefully as possible the clue you suggested, viz.: that the sequestration of the Bishop of Winchester's lands at Wonston some time between 1642 and 1648 might have been the immediate cause of the breaking up of the Wonston home of the Elys, and the indirect cause of the emigration of Richard Ely, presuming that he was related to the Wonston Elys, if not indeed one of them.



CATHEDRAL CLOSE

WINCHESTER

THE ELYS OF WONSTON, 1540-1660.

The following are the sources of probable and possible information upon the point which I have exhausted:—

(1) I have examined all the printed books (including topographical and historical works) in the British Museum which bear upon the subject.

(2) I have also examined the MSS. in the British Museum bearing on the subject, particularly the volumes entitled:

The Original Accounts, Information, Inventories and Other Papers concerning the Real and Personal Estates of the Delinquents seized by the Parliament of England from 1642 to 1648 inclusive, As they were given in at that time to the Treasurer of Sequestrations, at the Guildhall in London.

(3) The Calendars of State Papers in the British Museum, and also in the Room for Literary Research at the Record Office, have also been examined.

In the hope of finding some information on this point I have approached the Bishop of Winchester and also the Registrar of the Diocese. From the letters received in reply (which I append) it seems pretty clear that it is hopeless to look for information in that direction.

In conclusion, I may say that whilst I have not succeeded in finding anything which specifically confirms the theory that Richard Ely, who emigrated in 1660, was a member of the Ely family of Wonston, I have not found anything which is in any way opposed to it; and I cannot but think that your supposition is correct.

I also append copies of the Domesday Book account of Wonston, and a translation thereof.

I am, dear Sir, Yours faithfully,
George Clinch.

Farnham Castle, Surrey, 23 July, '95.

My dear Sir:—

Lyme, Conn., Oct. 22d, 1877.

Dear Sir:—

In 1660, Richard Ely came from Plymouth, England, and settled on the Connecticut river, at Lyme. His descendants are now scattered over the United States, and are largely strangers to each other.

It has been suggested that these descendants should hold a family reunion in this town in June or September, 1878. The undersigned, residents of this place, and descendants of said Richard Ely, have been appointed a committee to correspond with leading members of the family, to ascertain their views as to the advisability of such a reunion, and to call the same should general interest be manifested. So far as expression has been made to members of the committee, it has been almost unanimous in favor of it. We shall be pleased to have your views, and also those of any other descendants you may know, with their names and post-office addresses, with suggestions as to the meeting (should it take place); also, any historical facts you may have respecting the family.

In case your name is chosen to sign the call for said reunion, will it be agreeable to you to have it so used? Will you please give your official title in your reply, which is solicited as early as practicable. It may be addressed to Rev. Wm. B. Cary, Lyme, Conn., Secretary of the Committee.

George Ely, Lyme, Conn.
Zebulon Stiles Ely, Lyme, Conn., and New York.
William N. Ely, Lyme, Conn.
Israel N. Matson, Lyme, Conn.

The undersigned, descendants of Richard and of Nathaniel Ely, respectfully request your attendance at a FAMILY RE-UNION, to be held at Lyme, Connecticut, on Wednesday, July 10th, 1878. You will also EXTEND this invitation to such of the descendants as you may know.

As a Genealogy of the Ely Family is contemplated, it is desirable that all facts in your possession, with names, dates and family relationships fully stated, be furnished to Rev. Wm. Ely, Chairman of the General Committee, Germantown, Philadelphia as soon as possible.

Should you decide to attend, please advise, in due time, Rev. Wm. B. Cary, Lyme, Conn., Secretary of the Local Committee, or Z. Stiles Ely, Treasurer, 26 West 26th Street, New York.

If unable to be present, the Meeting will be glad to receive your congratulations and good wishes, and also to be furnished with your address.

The General Committee of Arrangements beg to say, that from the correspondence and other information, they were led to believe that the early part of July would suit the convenience of the largest number, and have consequently issued the call for the meeting for the 10th of that month. In selecting the names affixed to the call, they have endeavored, so far as they were able, to get those representing the different branches of the family and different localities, and hence not all of those who have offered to sign it appear. They have added so far as known to them, the titles of those signing.

They hope, and from the interest manifested are led to believe, that the Reunion will not only be agreeable but beneficial, bringing together, after a lapse of more than two hundred years, to the home of the first Richard Ely, the widely scattered members of both his family and those of the first Nathaniel Ely, there to recall the virtues of our ancestors and promote among one and another kindly feelings and better acquaintance. They desire that this meeting may be an honor to the memory of the fathers, and worthy of their children; an event that will long be remembered by all who participate in it.

The Hon. Nathan C. Ely, of New York, will preside, and Addresses, etc., are expected from distinguished speakers.

The Committee intend publishing with the Genealogy a brief history of the family and of the meeting; and it is believed that all the "descendants," even if they do not attend, will be interested in the Re-union, and especially in the volume to be published, and will be glad to contribute to one or both objects.

Any excess of funds from any source will be applied towards reducing the cost of the book.

Such contributions and also remittances for Dinner Tickets, are requested to be sent to Z. Stiles Ely, Treasurer, 26 West Twenty-sixth Street, New York, at as early a day as practicable.

Tickets for the Dinner will be one dollar, and should be applied for as early as may be, and not later than 10th June, so that provision may be made and seats reserved for those who attend. Should any desire to bring their friends with them, they will be welcomed on the same terms as descendants. Those having in their possession valuable relics and historical documents connected with the family, are requested to bring them.

Arrangements have been made with the N. Y. and N. H. Railroad to furnish tickets at half fare from New York, Norwalk, Bridgeport and New Haven, to Lyme; also excursion tickets, good for ten days, at same rate. All trains on 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th of July, will stop at Lyme. Those wishing to avail themselves of the reduction will be furnished with cards, which on presentation at the Company's ticket office in this City, Fourth Avenue and 42d Street, or at the offices in the other places, will entitle them to tickets at such abatement. These cards will be furnished on application, to any one of the following:

Heman Ely.....Elyria, Ohio.	Rev. Wm. Ely.....Germantown, Phila.
Alfred Ely .....Rochester, N. Y.	Dudley P. Ely.....S. Norwalk, Conn.
Nathan C. Ely, 9th St. and 3d Av., N. Y.	Dan'l C. Eaton.....New Haven, Conn.

Z. Stiles Ely, 26 West Twenty-sixth Street, New York.

It is expected that similar arrangements will be made with Railroads north and east from Lyme; and those coming over these roads will apply for information to Col. Israel Matson of that place.

Arrangements have also been made with the New York and Hartford Steamboats to furnish tickets, good for thirty days, from New York to Lyme and return, for $1.50, from New York to Lyme $1.00, from Hartford and intermediate landings to Lyme and return, fifty cents. The boats leave Peck Slip, New York, daily, at 4 p. m., arriving at Lyme about 2 o'clock the following morning. Tickets procured on board the boats.

Correspondents will be particular to give the State, with the name of their Post Office. WM. ELY, Chairman.

PROSPECTUS OF THE GENEALOGY AND RECORDS OF THE ELY FAMILY.

The account of the Re-union Meeting, lately published, gives much valuable information respecting the first of the Ely name, who settled in this country, and of some of the descendants. A genealogical record of the family is, however, yet to be prepared. A mass of matter for this purpose has already been brought together, but much more is still needed to fill up the gaps, and to bring down the line of descendants of Nathaniel, Richard and Joshua Ely to the present time. In view of the interest already expressed in this work, it is proposed to prepare and publish (for subscribers only) a complete genealogy of the family in three divisions, corresponding to its three main lines of descent. Each division of the work will be under the editorial charge of a member of that branch of the family whose records are therein given, and the whole work will be under the sanction of the Genealogical Committee of the Ely Association. Brief biographical and historical notices will be introduced of the eminent and noteworthy members of the family. It must be evident to all, that a work of this nature, which aims at both fullness and accuracy, cannot be prepared without the aid and co-operation of the various members of our now widely scattered family. To obtain this information, a number of questions have been subjoined, and it is particularly requested that all replies to these questions shall be arranged in the order in which they are given, and that special attention be paid to names, dates, and places, of births, marriages and deaths. Besides what is known to the present generation, much knowledge can be gathered from family records in Bibles, from old letters and papers, from public records of wills, deeds, etc., and from tombstones. All communications and replies to the questions annexed to be directed: those of the Nathaniel Ely branch, to the Hon. Heman Ely, Elyria, Lorain County, Ohio; those of the Richard Ely branch, to Rev. William Ely, Germantown, Philadelphia; those of the Joshua Ely branch, to Richard Elias Ely, Esq., New Hope, Bucks County, Pa. The book will probably contain 750 to 800 pages, and will be printed in royal 8vo., in good style. A limited number of portraits of members of the family may be inserted at the expense of those so desiring. It is hoped that the book may be ready for the press in the course of a year or fifteen months. The subscription price will be five dollars per copy, put up in cloth boards. As considerable expense is incurred in the printing of such a work, it is requested that the subscription price, or at least one-half ($2.50) of it, be paid in, when the book is ready for the press (of which due notice will be given), the other half ($2.50) to be paid upon the delivery of the volume. The aid and assistance, both by the forwarding of full and accurate information, and also by subscription, at once, to the work is earnestly invoked of every member of the Ely family who feels a just pride in the honorable records of the past, and who desires to hand down those records in durable and permanent form to the future. All names ofsubscribers, and remittances of subscriptions for the volume, to be sent to Edwin A. Ely, Esq., 103 Gold Street, New York. All particulars of family history to be sent (as stated above) to the editor of that branch of the family to which the writer belongs. Where any doubt exists on the latter point, such letters to be addressed to Rev. William Ely, Germantown, Philadelphia.

Stiles Ely, Esq., 26 West 26th Street, New York City; or to Edwin A. Ely, Secretary, 103 Gold Street, N. Y. THE RICHARD ELY GENEALOGICAL RECORD.

The following statement is made for the benefit and information of those who have actively and financially sustained the project of collecting and publishing the genealogical records of the descendants of Richard Ely.

These records were inaugurated by the late J. Nelson Sterry, and, upon his death, were carried forward by Rev. William Ely, until the partial loss of his eyesight rendered necessary a transfer to the subscriber.

They now comprise the names of about 7,000 individuals, grouped in some 1,300 families—each individual being numbered, in pursuance of a system which indicates, at the same time, the generation and the particular line of descent. In connection with this, but not yet indexed, there has been gathered a large mass of biographical notes, narratives and incidents, calculated to interest the general reader, while obtaining special importance in the families of those immediately connected.

By careful estimates, made with a view to publication, it was found that $2,000 would be required to defray the actual cost of an edition of 500 copies of these records and biographical notes—no payment being provided for the labor expended in gathering the material and preparing it for the press.

Those who had already devoted much time and means to the work made liberal subscriptions, amounting to 150 copies, leaving 350 copies to be otherwise provided for. Of this 350 copies there have now been taken 125 copies by the following subscribers:

THE RICHARD ELY GENEALOGICAL RECORD.

The several meetings of the Ely family during the last few years have developed a permanent organization known as "The Ely Association," and promoted, at the same time, a very desirable social intercourse and much personal acquaintance.

The genealogical researches, previously commenced by individuals, have been continued and extended; that of the Richard Ely branch having so far progressed as to invite its very early publication.

The compilation of this record has resulted in the collection and arrangement of more than eight thousand names, and also in the accumulation of a mass of incidents and historical notes, relative to individuals and families, which will be read with satisiaction by members of the family.

The work was commenced by James Nelson Sterry, of Newtown, Long Island, and at the time of his death was transferred to Rev. William Ely, of Germantown, Pennsylvania, who continued it for nearly three years. In consequence of impaired eyesight Rev. William Ely resigned his work to Mr. Moses S. Beach, of Brooklyn, in whose hands it has reached its present condition.

It must be remembered that the object of the proposed publication of the Richard Ely genealogical record is not to make money. Those who have prepared it are not paid, in any way, for their services. They have acted only as members of the family, disbursing money placed in their hands to the best possible advantage; and they now propose that the printed book shall be furnished to all who desire it for the smallest sum at which it can be produced.

The outlay necessary for printing circulars and blank records, for postage and for postal cards, and for preparations needful to place the work in the hands of the printer, was originally estimated at one thousand dollars, but this work will, by much care, be completed within the sum of six hundred dollars. The cost of printing and binding an edition of five hundred copies of a book of three hundred and sixty pages, of medium sized type, will be fourteen hundred dollars, making the total absolute outlay four dollars for each copy. If a larger edition can be disposed of, the cost per copy would be materially reduced. Thus an edition of eight hundred copies could be supplied at three dollars per copy; one of fourteen hundred copies, at two dollars per copy; and one of two thousand copies at one dollar and fifty cents per copy. As the publication will be made for the good of all and for the profit of no one, the money needful to defray the cost must be furnished before the work will be commenced.

The publication will therefore be made upon subscriptions paid in advance, at the rate of four dollars per copy. Should the number thus subscribed for exceed five hundred copies, each subscriber will receive an additional number of copies free of charge, or a return of a portion of the money paid. Thus the subscriber for six copies, having paid twenty-four dollars, would, in the event of an edition of eight hundred copies being required, receive either eight copies of the book, or six copies of the book and six dollars in money. If the entire amount needful for the publication is not provided within a reasonable time, all of the money subscribed and paid will be refunded.

Of the subscriptions to an edition of five hundred copies, at four dollars per copy, the following are already entered:

Z. Stiles Ely,	25 copies,	$100.00
Moses Ely,	25 copies,	100.00
Ambrose K. Ely,	25 copies,	100.00
Richard S. Ely,	25 copies,	100.00
Edwin A. Ely and Smith Ely,	25 copies,	100.00
M. S. Beach,	25 copies,	100.00
Still required before publication will be commenced,	350 copies,	1,400.00
Total,	500 copies,	$2,000.00

Subscriptions, which must be accompanied with the money at the rate of four dollars per copy, may be sent to either of the following gentlemen:

MOSES ELY, Chairman of Finance Committee,
Boreel Building, 115 Broadway, New York, City.
EDWIN A. ELY, Treasurer of Ely Association,
103 Gold Street, New York City.
MOSES BEACH, Ely Genealogical Committee,
96 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Should a special edition of the Richard Ely Record, printed upon extra fine paper, with wide margins and extra binding, be required, it can probably be furnished at an increased price of from one to two dollars per copy. Those who may desire copies of such an edition will please state the fact.

Some of the records of families have not yet been completely furnished. Should this circular be received by members of any such family, they will please give notice to Mr. Beach, and supply him with the omitted portions as speedily as possible.

HISTORICAL.

In order to make clear what those who originated the idea of the publication of the family record had in mind, how broadly and wisely they planned, and how elaborate and painstaking were their preparations, it has seemed desirable to recount on the foregoing pages the efforts made a score or more of years since to prepare and publish the Genealogy of the Ely family; descendants of Richard Ely, of Plymouth, England.

Careful and intelligent effort was patiently bestowed upon the matter and the needed information was to a great extent collected in accordance with the plan laid down for the preparation of a record which should be as complete as it was possible to make it.

After some years of research and correspondence a variety of causes interrupted the labors of Mr. Beach, Mr. Sterry, the Rev. William Ely and others at that time active in the work, and not long after, owing to the death of Mr. Beach and the failing sight of the Rev. William Ely, the plan for an Ely Genealogy was finally abandoned.

It is most unfortunate that plans so well laid, and preparations so widely heralded, should have been thus unavoidably defeated; but

"The best laid schemes of mice and men
Gang aft a-gley,
And leave us naught but grief and pain
For promised joy."

In the course of time it came about that the material obtained with so much care and cost by Mr. Beach, and those interested with him in the preparation of the record, passed into the possession of certain well-known members of the Ely family, who felt a keen interest in the subject, and in the preservation of the information which had been collected, but who had not been in any way connected with the production of the genealogy begun by Mr. Beach and his associates, or in their plans, except as subscribers to the proposed work.

Within a short time the project for publishing the Ely Genealogy was taken up again by less experienced and skillful hands, and an effort was made to partially, at least, carry out the intentions of those who originated the idea of a record of the descendants of Richard Ely of Lyme, Conn. Owing to the munificence of a lineal descendant it has been possible to bring the work to a conclusion and place it before our readers in its present shape. THE EDITOR.

When Richard left England, his eldest son was in the West Indies. This boy must, at the time of his father's second marriage, have been about fifteen years old. It is a natural inquiry what a gentleman's son could be doing alone in that foreign country. There is mention made about this time in Camden Horton's "Shipping List" of one James Ely, a planter, in the West Indies, who was a man of some importance, owner of ten slaves, etc. Possibly, he was a brother of the first Richard. The boy William, after his mother's death, might have been entrusted to this uncle. This is given as mere conjecture. However that may be, his father sent for him two years after his own arrival.—Ely Re-union Pamphlet.

THE ELY ANCESTRY.

FIRST GENERATION.

Richard Ely, of Plymouth, Devonshire Co., England, emigrated to America between 1660 and 1663, his son Richard accompanying him. He resided for a time at Boston, and later settled at Lyme, Conn., which in 1660 was a part of Saybrook. Mr. Ely was a widower when he came to America, his first wife Joane (maiden name presumed to have been Phipps), having died in Plymouth, Jan. 7, 1660. A note by a person of reliability states: "This Phipps is supposed to have been a sister of Constantine John Phipps (Baron ~~Mulgrau~~), the great navigator and commissioner of the Admiralty. A younger brother, Viscount ~~Normandy~~, was an officer of the British army."

5. Samuel.

For his second wife Mr. Ely married at Boston in 1664 a Mrs. Elizabeth Cullick, widow of Capt. John Cullick, who was for some time Secretary of the Colony of Connecticut, and whose will may be seen among the Boston records.

Capt. John Cullick was one of the most noted men in the Colony of Connecticut, and had, by vote of the town of Hartford, conferred on him the estate assigned to Jonathan Luce. He lived on the north side of Elm Street. He married Elizabeth, sister of Hon. George Fenwick, in 1648.

He represented Hartford in the General Court from 1644 to 1647, when he was chosen Assistant and Secretary of State; which offices he filled for ten years. He was one of the Commissioners of the United Colonies from 1652 to 1654.

"He removed to and died in Boston in 1663, and Gen. John Leverett possessed his estate in Hartford." "His children were: John, 1649, graduated at Harvard College in 1668; Elizabeth, 1652, married Benjamin Batten, Boston." (Wm. S. Porter; "Hist. notices of Conn." Hartford; 1842.)

The widow of Capt. Cullick being interested, as was her brother, Col. Fenwick, in landed estates near the mouth of Connecticut river, the necessary care and improvement of the lands led Mr. Ely to leave Boston and make his residence at Lyme, Conn. There he and his sons added largely to the estates. He was the founder of the Ely family of Lyme. Mrs. Cullick's estate was £400 in debt, and Mr. Ely discharged the debt, and took title to the property. The estate was largely composed of lands known as the Great Meadow. In 1675, Mr. Ely applied to the Honorable General Court in Hartford to appropriate to him upland to accommodate his cattle in connection with the Great Meadow for summer food, assigning various reasons for this claim, one of which is that he is yearly charged with a sixth or a seventh part of the rates of the town. Mrs. Cullick was a sister of Colonel Fenwick, of Saybrookport, Colonel Fenwick being the husband of Lady Alice Fenwick, whose tomb is to be seen in the Saybrook Cemetery.

That Richard Ely was a shipping merchant in Plymouth is proven by a certain bond to Benjamin Stark dated Plymouth, Dec. 30, 1658, for the due and faithful sailing the ship Judith, by Caleb Crane, Plymouth to Madeira, thence to Cape Verd Islands, thence to Barbadoes, thence to London. This bond is now in possession of Richard Ely, of Binghamton, N. Y.

Mr. Ely died in Lyme, Nov. 24, 1684; his second wife died Nov. 12, 1683. Their married life was a long and happy one. Mr. Cullick Ely lives not over a quarter mile from where the first Richard Ely's house stood.

One authority says the red sandstone monument of Mr. Ely is to be seen in a damaged condition in the old cemetery in Lyme, in the part of the town called "Black Hall." It seems that a more recent and legible monument has been erected by some pious descendant, information in regard to which has been kindly furnished by Professor Daniel C. Eaton, of Yale College. Eaton is a great-grandson of Elijah Ely, who was a great-great-grandson of the first Richard Ely.

The brother of Richard Ely's second wife (Col. Geo. Fenwick) was a member of Parliament and was appointed by Cromwell to act as one of the Judges to try King Charles. He refused to serve, however, in that capacity.

Richard Ely, after settling at Lyme, became involved in a lawsuit with George Fenwick, in which he was successful and received over nine hundred pounds sterling, a very considerable sum for those days.

Richard Ely had 3,000 acres of land, including what is now called Ely's Ferry, in his estate; and a few years later the town of Lyme set off to his sons, Richard and William, 1,300 acres adjoining their father's land, for 300 pounds, making an estate of over 4,000 acres in the possession of the Elys of Lyme. Some of these lands are still in the family. Mr. Cullick Ely lives not more than one quarter of a mile from where the first Richard's house stood.

"An incident in the life of Richard marks deeply the religious feeling which imbued his soul, and illustrates the fervency of his devotion and piety. Twenty-four months after his arrival, his eldest son, William, whom he had left in the islands of the West Indies on his voyage, came, too, to join the wild abode of his surviving parent. The rude brigantine which bore him hither, with unskilled seamen to navigate, was dismantled in a furious gale in the archipelago, and finally foundered in mid-ocean. Every soul on board the ill-fated vessel sank to rise no more except William Ely, who, lashed to a disintegrated yard-arm, floated among the seething billows, lashed in fury by the raging storm, until on the third day, exhausted and with life nearly extinct, he was picked up by a Spanish cruiser, then on an exploring expedition to the shores of New England.

"Landing William on the coast not far distant from the mouth of the Connecticut, he sought and soon found the rude hamlet of his father. With joy unspeakable, he embraced his son, who related to him the story of his voyage, his rescue, and escape from a watery grave.

"Prayer and thanksgiving were offered up by the father and son for this Divine interposition, and daily, for weeks and months, he ascended to the height of a neighboring hill and there alone, with outstretched arms, poured forth his gratitude to the Divine Master for the preservation of his child."—Hon. Alfred Ely, Ely Re-union Pamphlet, pages 139-140.

The Colonial Records of Connecticut, (1665-1677, pages 210 and 211) give an account, under date of June, 1673, of a dispute between Mr. Richard Ely and the townsmen of Saybrook, respecting his proportion of fence on the Western Neck, and involving his title to certain lands claimed by him. The matter was referred to abitration, Mr. Ely and the town mutually binding themselves, under a forfeiture of five hundred pounds, to submit to the award which should be made by the arbitrators.

On page 255 of the above work we find that the Court, in May, 1675, on Mr. Ely's petition, recommended the town of Lyme to accommodate Mr. Ely's farm with a suitable quantity of upland to his meadow at Six Mile Island.

The town records at Deep River, Connecticut, contain an instrument, dated 1668, which is of considerable interest.

Richard's elder son William, having attained his majority in 1668, was then capable of making a valid conveyance of real estate, and the instrument referred to is a Deed by William Ely to his father Richard of his right, title and interest in and to five tenements in Plymouth, England.

These tenements are described as situated in Hampton Cut, near the New Church.

The consideration named is fifty pounds in money and also an island with a building upon it situated in the Piscataqua River, Maine.

This instrument gives reason to believe that the Ely family were well-to-do residents of Plymouth, investors in real estate, and taxpayers, before coming to America. The conveyance was possibly made to enable Richard Ely to dispose of the tenements in Plymouth, for William's interest was probably only a reversionary interest.

The island in the Piscataqua River must have been afterwards conveyed back to Richard Ely, for ten years later, in 1670, he sold it to another party. The building erected upon it may have been for the purposes of trade with the Indians.

There is an interesting mention of the name of William Ely in the annals of the Province of New Hampshire, given in Palfrey's History of New England, Vol. 3, and in the Provincial Papers relating to New Hampshire, 1623-1686, page 459, etc.

Towards the close of the year 1682 the Governor of the Province (of New Hampshire), one Cranfield, was exercising despotic power in administering the affairs of the Province.

He summarily dismissed a faithful officer named Stillman who had been in charge of the fort and appointed one of his henchmen.

This act aroused much feeling, and Edward Gore, a Deputy from Hampton to the recent Assembly, gathered a little company and went about organizing opposition.

No overt acts were committed, but there was an undoubted attempt to incite a feeling against the Governor.

All implicated in the affair were arrested and convicted, but were presently set at liberty except Gore, who was condemned to death, and who was imprisoned for a year, awaiting the carrying out of the sentence; the latter part of the time in the Tower of London; but he was finally pardoned.

This memorial is strictly colonial, being a facsimile of the ancient Wolcott monument in the old Windsor Cemetery erected in the 17th century, not far from the date of Richard Ely's death. The Ely stone bears also a marked resemblance in outline to the celebrated tomb of Lady Fenwick, which is of brown stone, bearing a scroll top. This seems very appropriate as Lady Fenwick and Richard Ely were connections by marriage, and the dates of their sojourn at the mouth of the "Great River" not far removed.

The Richard Ely monument occupies a central site, somewhat elevated, in the ancient Ely cemetery, a place of unusual interest. Here for nine generations, descendants only of this Richard Ely have been buried. No one save the Ely descendants or those connected by marriage can be mingled with the dust in that sacred enclosure. Undoubtedly the founder of his race in America, Richard Ely and his wife, were among the first burials, if not the very first; but their stones like countless others, have fallen victims to the destructive forces of nature. The oldest now standing is the one to Captain William Ely, born 1647, died Feb. 23, 1717.

The monument is a sarcophagus of brown stone, most carefully selected and cut on its own base to insure durability. It is of stately appearance, bearing upon one end the Ely Coat of Arms, and upon the sides the following inscriptions:

In the list of names of those who were in active sympathy with Gore, and were arrested with him, we find the name of William Ely.

Governor Cranfield and his associates were most despotic, excluded Massachusetts vessels from their harbor, put an arbitrary value on silver coin, and altered the boundaries of towns. Cranfield was finally forced to leave the Province and take refuge in the West Indies.

THE ELY CEMETERY, LYME, CONN.

THE ELY ANCESTRY.

SECOND GENERATION.

William Ely, the eldest son of Richard, had gone to the West Indies, perhaps to visit an uncle residing there, about the time his father emigrated to America. Two years after his settlement in America, Richard sent for his son William, who arrived in Connecticut from the West Indies about 1670. He resided in Lyme, married Elizabeth Smith, and was for many years Judge of the County Court of New London. William Ely died in February, 1717, aged 71 years. The monument in the Lyme cemetery, erected to the memory of his father, also commemorates his name.

In connection with the statement that William Ely visited an uncle in the West Indies about 1670, it is of interest that the Colonial Records of New York are said to mention the fact that in 1650 a certain William Ely, a merchant doing business in the West Indies, complained to Governor Stuyvesant of an injustice done him by the Spanish authorities, and petitioned the Governor to redress his injuries.

Possibly this may have been an uncle of William Ely, the son of Richard, the emigrant.

The "Mail and Express" of September 10, 1898, published the following query, which mentions a different date for the marriage than the one generally accepted. It is probably an error:

Does any one know who were the parents of Elizabeth Smith, of Lyme, Conn.? She married William Ely, first, of Lyme, September, 1670.

There is a tradition that Judge Ely was twice married, but, if so, the name of his second wife is not known, nor those of the children.

HERE LIETH THE BODY OF

WHO
Died February 23, 1717, in the 71st Year of his Age.

MRS. ELIZABETH,
RELICT OF
WILLIAM ELY,
Died Oct. 10, 1750, in the 89th year of her age.

Col. Chester found in Plymouth the record of William's baptism, under date Oct. 15, 1647.

Mr. Moses H. Beach, in a letter dated Nov. 10, 1885, states that William Ely's first wife, Elizabeth Smith, was a daughter of ~~Nathaniel~~ Smith and (supposed) Elizabeth Ely, who died in 1683.

Nehemiah Smith was born in England in 1605, and died at Norwich, Conn., in 1686.

From the "Mail and Express" of January 30, 1897, we take the following as to the Rev. Nehemiah Smith:

Rev. Nehemiah Smith was born in England in 1605; he came to Plymouth, Mass., early in that century. Norwich, Conn., was purchased from the Indian chief, Uncas, and his sons in June, 1659.

Rev. Mr. Smith was one of the original proprietors and largest landholder in the settlement. He died about 1686, 81 years old; married Sarah Bourne, born 1615, died 1684. They had children—Sarah, born 1642, baptized in the First Church, New Haven, Conn.; Mary, born 1642 (I presume twins); Hannah, 1644; Mercy, 1645; Elizabeth, 1645; Nehemiah second, 1646, in New Haven; he married Lydia Winchester, daughter of Alexander Winchester, of Rochester, Mass., October 24, 1669. They had Nehemiah (3), November 14, 1673, who married Dorothy Wheeler, daughter of Isaac and Martha Park Wheeler, granddaughter of Thomas and Mary Wheeler. Nehemiah and Lydia (Winchester) Smith had seven children. N.

(From the "Mail and Express," January 29,1898.)

Lydia Winchester, daughter of Alexander Winchester, was married to Nehemiah Smith, at Rochester, Mass., in 1669. What is the maiden name of Lydia Winchester's mother?

Polly Winchester, born in Massachusetts or Connecticut in 1764, lived when a girl at Norwich, Conn. Her mother's name was Abigail Sawyer. Place of birth unknown. Abigail Sawyer's mother's name was Dinah Standish, a lineal descendant of Myles Standish. Was she his granddaughter, or how was she related to him? G. E. H.

SECOND GENERATION.

Elizabeth, the wife of William Ely, was born in 1645, and was the daughter of Nehemiah Smith and Sarah Bourne.

Nehemiah lived at New Haven, and died in 1686, probably at Norwich, and Elizabeth (Smith) Ely died in 1683.

William Ely remarried, but we do not know the full name of his second wife, her given name seems to have been the same as that of the first wife, Elizabeth.

A writer in the Genealogical and Historical Department of the "Mail and Express," in the issue of Saturday, January 21, 1899, writes:

"William Ely lived at Lyme, Conn. He married an Elizabeth Smith, May 12, 1681. This William Ely was the son of Richard Ely and Joanne Phipps; was born in England in 1646; was reported to have been in the West Indies during early life, and to have rejoined his father, Richard, who had settled at Lyme, Conn., and to have died in 1717.

It is difficult to trace out the Smith ancestry satisfactorily, and one finds the name entering into nearly every genealogical line.

An enquiry which appeared in the "Mail and Express" of December 11, 1897, is as follows:

Can you or any of your readers give me any information regarding the descendants of Eleanor Elizabeth Carlosonius, a titled lady from Holland, who married a British officer—a Bull Smith, I believe—and eloped with him to this country some time during the last century, settling in Smithtown, Long Island?

J. S. C.

The reply appeared in the "Mail and Express" of March 12, 1898, and while we cannot claim any direct reference to the Ely ancestry is shown by it, the article, nevertheless, has an interest to the descendants of those who, very early in the history of this country, were connected with the great family of "the Smiths." It is as follows:

Smithtown, L. I., was founded by Richard Smith, who was the patentee of that place. He had several daughters, two of whom, Deborah and Elizabeth, married men named Lawrence, of the same family. After the death of William Lawrence, the husband of Elizabeth Smith, she married Sir Philip Carteret, of New Jersey, the first English Governor, and was from that time called "Lady Carteret." She left numerous descendants by her first husband, William Lawrence, a record of which will be found in the "Lawrence Genealogy, by Thomas Lawrence." The above referred to may be the "titled" lady to whom you refer. This Richard Smith, above mentioned, I am informed, was "Bull Smith." H. M.

Elizabeth Smith, daughter of the "bull rider," was thrice married; her several husbands were William Lawrence, Philip Carteret and Richard Townley respectively. From Lady Carteret "Elizabethtown," N. J., was so named.

Is it not probable that the mother of Elizabeth was the Princess Eleanor Elizabeth Carlosonius (or Carlos-Sonius) about whom I made enquiry? The records I have in my possession state that "he (Richard Smith) went to Holland and married a native." J. F. C.

Elizabeth (Smith) Lawrence-Carteret-Townley was daughter of Richard Smith, of Nessequack, L. I., patentee of Smithtown, and married, first (license dated March 4, 1664), as his second wife, Captain William Lawrence, of Flushing, L. I., who died 1680 (administration March 25, 1680). She married, second, in April, 1681, Hon. Philip Carteret, Governor of the Province of East and West Jersey, who died between December 10 and 20, 1682, and she married, lastly, in 1685, Colonel Richard Townley, who died in April, 1711. Her second husband was never knighted, and therefore she was never "Lady" Carteret, but appears in the records as "the widow Cartwright." (See full account of the early generations of the Lawrences in the Thomas Book, 1896, pages 398-420; especially for her, pages 414-416). Elizabeth, N. J., was named for Sir George Carteret's wife, Elizabeth, in 1665, nearly twenty years before Elizabeth Smith was there. (See Winsor's Narrative and Critical History of America, Vol. III., page 425). L. B. T.

There is a record in the Probate Office in New London of the will of "William Ely," dated September, 1717, and the inventory of "Capt. William Ely," who died March, 1717. In the latter were "one silver tankard and silver spoons," appraised £20. The amount of the inventory: Real Estate, £1,767.10; Movables, £528.7; Sum Total, £2,295.14.4.

Colonel Chester thought that the tankard could have been picked up anywhere, and had no faith in it as a family relic, but he must have been unaware of the above facts.—[Extract from letter of E. McCurdy Salisbury, July 19, 1882.]

You will remember, too, what a champion for the landed interests of his town William was, when I call to your mind that he, with Matthew Griswold, fought and defeated the New London champions and settled the border line of Lyme at the Niantic River.*—From Ely Pamphlet.

Public Records of Connecticut, page 294: Captain William Eelye and Lieut. John Clark, in the name of the legatees mentioned in a certain Will, petition the Assembly to lay out and settle the bounds of certain lands given the legatees of said will, and grant them a patent in the year 1687.

This land was on both sides of the Ungushet River, within sight of Hartford, and was several miles in extent.

Page 430: Costs allowed Capt. Will Eelye, Ens. Joseph Peck and Matthew Griswold for attendance at this Court, 1702, on petition of the inhabitants of Hadden.

Page 578: In 1705 Capt. Willia Ely and Lieut. Wakeman went home without leave from the House of Representatives.

Page 453: In October, 1703, the Assembly heard the complaint of Joseph Selden against Capt. Eely, charging that Justice with maladministration (the grandson of Capt. Ely had married the daughter of Joseph Selden, so that this was a sort of family quarrel). Capt. Ely expressed surprise at the attack, and desired to put in a proper defence. The Assembly allowed him until the following May to file his answer. Each party gave a bond in the sum of £100, Capt. Ely for his appearance, Selden to assure his prosecution of the case.

Page 480: In May, 1704, on the hearing of the complaint of Joseph Selden against Capt. William Eely, the Court having heard and considered the pleas of both parties, do not judge Capt. Eely to be guilty of maladministration in the matters alleged by said Selden, and the suit was dismissed with costs against Selden.

The following is an extract from the Public Records of the Colony of Connecticut, 1689 to 1706:

SECOND GENERATION.

A special Court held at Hartford, Aug. 29, 1689, by order of the Governor.

The gentlemen of the Court appearing with the deputies, there not being a sufficient number of Assistants to constitute a Court, the Governor dismissed those present, and ordered a meeting of the General Court the 3rd day of September next at Hartford.

(The General Court was unable to meet in August, on account of the prevalence of an epidemic of sore throat and fever, the like having not been known in the memory of man.)

On the 3rd day of September, 1689, the General Court met, and Mr. William Ely is named as the Deputy for Lyme.

The first business before the Court was to determine "rules and methods most proper for the preserving and securing of their Majesty's subjects in these plantations against the rage of the heathen and the suppressing of them."

In May, 1701, the Committee made return to the Assembly (page 351) that owing to the unseasonableness of the weather they had been prevented from doing that work, and upon motion of Hon. John Winthrop, a Committee, including Capt. William Eelye, was appointed to carry out said work.

The Public Records of Connecticut, 1706-1716, page 95, has the following reference to Capt. Ely:

This Assembly, May, 1709, do establish and confirm Mr. John Coult of Lyme to be the Ensign of the Company or Train band in that town under the command of Captain Wm. Ely.

Page 292. At a meeting of the Governor and Council in New London, Oct. 30, 1711, Capt. William Ely of Lyme, Mr. Samuel Rogers and Capt. John Hamlin of Middletown, and desired a replevin for the said hogshead.

Capt. Ely's complaint was sustained, and the election was in part set aside.

The Journal of the Council held in New London, Aug. 26, 1710, gives instructions to the Treasurer to pay forthwith out of the treasury of this Colony the sums expended by certain individuals for "setting forth the present expedition against Port Royal and Nova Scotia." Among them appears the name of Captain William Eely, for his account on file £12 5s. 6d.

2. Richard Ely, second son of Richard, the emigrant, has but a meagre record. He was born in 1656, probably in Plymouth, where Col. Chester found the record of his baptism, June 19, 1657.

He accompanied his father to America, resided with him at Lyme, and married Mary Marvin, born in 1666, eldest daughter of Lieutenant Reinold Marvin, and his wife, Sarah Clark, of Lyme.

Children of 2 Richard Ely and Mary Marvin.

4. Richard, b. Oct. 27, 1697; d. Feb. 24, 1774; m. 1st, Elizabeth Peck; m. 2nd, Phebe Hubbard, of Middletown, Conn.

Extract from the Colonial Records of Connecticut:

Whereas, Upon a meeting between Captain Joseph Sill and Mr. Richard Ely, in behalf of Mary, his wife, daughter of Lieut. Renauld Marvin, late of Lyme, with the Overseers, it appeareth that there remaineth due to the said Ely in behalf of his wife the sum of Thirty pounds of the Ninety Pounds assigned to her by the Distribution of the Court.

These are to desire Lieut. Abner Post and Sergt. John Chapman to view the twenty acres of upland and fourteen acres of meadow belonging to the Estate of Reinold Marvin, which lands are at Say Brook, and by the best of their judgment to determine what quantity of the said twenty acres of upland shall pay this thirty pounds, the whole of the uplands and the meadow being estimated at eighty pounds; and in case the said Post and Chapman cannot agree, then they are hereby desired and empowered to chose a third man a umpire, and two of these three agreeing to bee the final decision of the case.

Given under our hands the 6 July, 1687.

RICHARD ELY.

Unto the above agreement we who have subscribed have given our advice and consent.

Lieut. Reinold Marvin became a Freeman of East Saybrook (Lyme) in 1658 on the same day with his father, Reginold. Reynold Marvin, who came from England, settled at Newtown, then Hartford, then Farmington, in 1639, and was made a Freeman at Lyme, Conn., May 20, 1868; he died in 1662. Reinold was also a large land owner in his own right, and was prominent in town affairs. He represented Lyme in the General Court in 1670 and from 1672 to 1676. Vol. III., p. 113, Col. Rec. of Conn.

He died in the latter year He was interred not far from the centre of the "Duck River Burying Ground." I believe that there is no stone there of an earlier date. His grave is placed, somewhat singularly, nearly at right angles with all the others about it, except that of his widow and the grave of her second husband.

She remarried, February 12, 1678, Captain Joseph Sill, the famous fighter of the Indians.

1. John.
2. Mary.
3. Captain Reinold, b. 1669.
4. Deacon Samuel, b. 1671.
5. Sarah, b. 1673.

Mary married Richard Ely of Saybrook, Conn., younger son of Richard Ely, the emigrant, and brother of that William Ely who, with Matthew Griswold, was one of the Lyme champions in the famous pugilistic contests to decide the New London boundary. Vol. III., p. 115, Conn. Rec.

Their children:

1. Samuel, born 1671, who married Jane, daughter of Lieut. Richard and Elizabeth (Hyde) Lord, thus early uniting the families of Hyde, Lee, Lord, and Marvin, whose frequent intermarriages defy any attempt to state relationships. They resided at Saybrook, and had two children.

2. Richard, who was twice married and had 13 children. His first wife was Elizabeth Peck, by whom he had four children. Of these, the youngest daughter was Elizabeth, who married Colonel Sam Selden, Jr., and had a daughter, Elizabeth, who married Deacon Elisha Marvin, and a son, Richard E. Selden, the grandfather of the late Chief Justice Morrison Remick Waite. Vol. III., p. 115, Conn. Records.

Professor and Mrs. Salisbury are of the opinion that many of the eccentricities attributed to Captain Reinold Marvin may more probably be ascribed to his son, Deacon Reinold, who married, 1st, December 23, 1725, Mrs. Sarah Lee; and 2nd, July 7, 1746, Mrs. Mary Kellogg, née Mary Niles of Colchester.

It was the worthy Deacon who closed a letter to Judge John Griswold, in 1737, on the subject of his many law suits:

"Sir, this is yours at any rate,
To read, if you have leisure,
To burn, conceal, communicate,
According to your pleasure."

Deacon Marvin appears to have been remarkable for his eccentricity in almost all the transactions of life. His courtship, it is said, was as follows: Having one day mounted his horse, with only a sheep skin for a saddle, he rode in front of the house where Sarah or Betty Lee lived, and without dismounting requested Betty to come to him; on her coming, he told her that the Lord had sent him there to marry her. Without much hesitation, she replied, "The Lord's Will be done."

During his whole life he professed to be governed much by Divine communications that were made to him.

Once he said that the Lord had directed him to distribute his cows among his poor neighbors. After the distribution had been going on for some time, a certain man, fearing that none might fall to himself, went to the Deacon and told him that he had received a communication from the Lord, directing him to the Deacon for a cow. "Well," says the Deacon, "you shall receive it. What cow did the Lord say should be given you, a new milch or a farrow?"

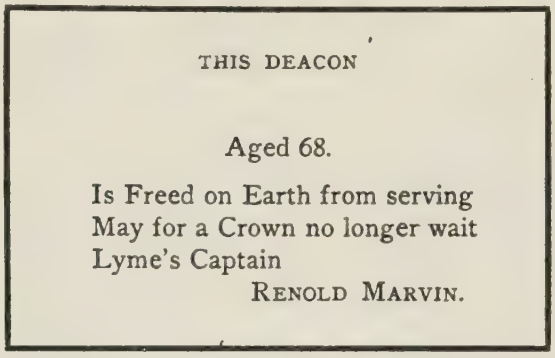
"A new milch cow," was the reply.

"Well," said the Deacon, "your communication could not be from the Lord, for I have already given away all my new milch cows."

He was, it is said, the greatest land proprietor of any man in the vicinity, and of regular standing in the Church.

SECOND GENERATION.

In the graveyard at South Lyme may still be seen the quaintly inscribed memorial of good old Deacon Marvin, who married Sarah, or Betty, Lee.



The grave is so long as to be noticeable, which may show that the old warrior had the high stature characteristic of the family. Salisbury Genealogy, Vol. III., page 123.

Mrs. E. U. Seymour, of Syracuse, N. Y., writes that her mother was a granddaughter of Margaret Ely, and that her mother's great-grandfather, Captain Richard Ely, was a grandson of the first Richard. He died in East Hartford while on a visit to his daughter, and was buried there. "My mother recollected perfectly the gentle and ladylike manners of her grandmother, of her leading her by the hand to church when the funeral obsequies of Washington were celebrated, and that her grandmother wore on that occasion a black satin cloak. She well remembered, too, hearing her say that her great-grandfather, Col. Richard Ely, brought the chest and drawers from England when he first came to this country."—Page 85, Ely Pamphlet.

He was deacon of the church in Lyme, and by occupation was a farmer. He is No. 152 in the Genealogy of the Perkins Family, Part I., page 60, his ancestry being Abraham 64, Isaac 12, John 2, John 1. After the death of Elizabeth Ely, the worthy deacon married a Mary Ely, who was the widow of Richard Ely, her maiden name being Pearson. Their marriage took place July 15, 1759.

The will of Deacon Abraham Perkins was signed April 3, 1786, and proven Sept. 11, 1786. In his will he names his children Francis, William, Abraham, Jr., Betty Mather, Daniel, Samuel, Sarah Pratt, Joseph and Benjamin. William, Samuel and Abraham were named as executors. A stone in the graveyard at Lyme bears this inscription:

John Ely, the son of Daniel, was a Colonel in the army of the Revolution, was a distinguished physician, and a man of great personal worth.

Lucretia married Benjamin Colt, ancestor of Samuel Colt, manufacturer of Colt's Revolver, and a relative of the late Dudley Selden of New York.

There is mention of a thirteenth child of Daniel Ely, but no reliable information of such child has been obtained; it probably died in infancy.

We make the following extracts from the "Public Records of Connecticut," regarding Mr. Daniel Ely:

In October, 1728, the General Assembly commissioned Daniel Ely as Ensign of the North Company of Lyme, Richard Ely being then Lieutenant and Daniel Starlin Captain. (p. 195.)

Daniel Ely represented Lyme in the Assembly, October, 1751 (p. 38), and in addition to serving as Justice as mentioned above, was appointed Justice May, 1751 (p. 13), also in May, 1752 (p. 73), in May, 1753 (p. 155), in May, 1754 (p. 246), in May, 1755 (p. 357), and in May, 1756 (p. 492).

of the seine for the taking of fish, and desiring the appointment of a Committee to examine into and report on the subject. The Committee was accordingly appointed to take testimony, etc., 'all at the expense of the memorialists.' (Col. Rec. of Conn. Vol. XII. 1762-1767, p. 639.)

In October, 1766, Nathaniel Matson, Junr., of Lyme, administrator on the Estate of Daniel Ely, Junr., deceased of Lyme ,petitioned the Assembly to be authorized to sell certain lands belonging to the deceased, since his debts exceeded the value of his personal estate by the sum of £154 s7 d3. The Assembly granted the necessary authority. (Vol. XII., page 536.)

In October, 1767, Nathaniel Matson, Jr., petitioned for authority to sell still more land, that sold under the former order being insufficient by the sum of £29 s13 d7 to pay all the debts of the deceased; and the authority was given for a further sale. (page 641.)

In Vol. XIII., 1768-1772, it is related that in January, 1796, Daniel Ely of Lyme in New London County, petitioned the Assembly, "showing that in the year 1741, he mortgaged a tract of land to the Government, redeemable in the year 1745 upon the payment of £25; that he hath never yet redeemed the same, and he prays that some suitable person may be empowered to give a deed of release of said lands upon the memorialist securing the payment of the sum due to the Government on said mortgage in some reasonable time as per memorial on file."

"Resolved by this Assembly, that Matthew Griswold, Esq., of Lyme, be, and he is hereby, fully empowered to execute a deed of release on all said lands in said Deed to said Daniel Ely, upon his, said Ely's, first securing with good security to the satisfaction of said Matthew Griswold, Esq., to be paid to the Treasurer of the Colony within one year from the rising of this Assembly the sums still remaining due on said mortgage." (Page 164.)

In October, 1769, Daniel Ely of Lyme memorialized the Assembly, then sitting at New Haven, "showing that by his Deed dated January 14, A. D. 1741, he mortgaged a piece of land lying in said Lyme, bounded as in said deed, recorded in the records of said Lyme, may appear; that the whole of the monies due on said mortgage have long since been paid, but no deed of release given, etc.; praying that a deed of release may be executed, etc., as per memorial on file;

"Resolved by this Assembly, that upon said memorialist evidencing the payment of said money due as aforesaid, a deed of release be executed in the name and behalf of the Governor and Company to the memorialist;

"And the Honorable Matthew Griswold, Esq., is hereby appointed and fully empowered to adjust and settle the payments made of said mortgage and upon evidence of the payments, to execute a deed of release of the premises in the name of the Governor and Company as aforesaid."

15. William Ely, son of William Ely and Elizabeth Smith, married Oct. 25, 1715, Hannah Thompson, daughter of William Thompson.

17. Elizabeth Ely, born 1715, daughter of William Ely and Elizabeth Smith, married Samuel Smith. The date of her marriage has not been preserved. It is said they had a daughter named Elizabeth, who married Joshua Raymond. (See History of Norwich, page 199, by Miss Caulkins.)

The Genealogical and Historical Department of the Mail and Express, in the issue of Jany. 21, 1899, contains a communication numbered 2853 and signed E. F. L. N. in reference to Samuel Smith as follows:

"Samuel Smith, born 1676, married (probably) Elizabeth Ely, of Lyme, Conn. They had daughter, Elizabeth. Samuel was the son of Nehemiah Smith and Lydia Winchester. Nehemiah was son of the Reverend Nehemiah, of Norwich, Conn., and Sarah Bourne. They had Elizabeth, born 1645."

His wife was Jane Lord, born about 1686, daughter of Lieut. Richard Lord and his wife, Elizabeth Hyde. Lieut. Lord's will, an abstract of which is printed in E. E. & E. M. Salisbury's "Family Histories and Genealogies," Vol. I., page 287, is dated 1725, and contains legacies "to two grandchildren, Samuel and Elizabeth Ely, children of daughter Jane, deceased." All the known descendants of this Samuel Ely were included in Walworth's "Hyde Genealogy," published in 1864, occupying many pages of that voluminous work. The date of Mr. Ely's death has not been ascertained.

THIRD GENERATION.

The connection between the Hyde, Griswold and Ely Families, as given in the Hyde Genealogy, is as follows:

William Hyde the first (great, great, great, great grandfather of Z. Stiles Ely), of Norwich, is not certainly known to have been connected with any of the Hyde families who came to this country from England, of which there were several in the United States. Among other families of that name were the following:

1. Samuel Hyde, who came to Newton, Mass., about 1640, and has many descendants.

2. Jonathan Hyde, his younger brother, who married 1 Mary French, and 2 Mary Rediat, and had 19 children. He was the grandfather of Jonathan Hyde, who settled at Pomfret, Conn., in 1714, and had 6 sons; and who was probably the ancestor of most of the Pomfret and Canterbury Hydes, whose descendants are now extensively scattered in different parts of the United States. He was the ancestor of the Rev. Ephraim Hyde, who graduated at Yale, 1759, and was minister of Rehoboth, and of the venerable Dr. John Angier Hyde, a distinguished physician of Freeport, Me., who was living in 1856, at the advanced age of 84 years.

3. Humphrey Hyde, who came from England, and was an extensive landholder at Fairfield, Conn., in 1655. He made his will 8 May, 1666, devising divers tracts of land to his son John, and to his daughters Hannah and Sarah. His son, John Hyde, who died 1689, at Fairfield, had by his wife Elizabeth one son and three daughters. He was the ancestor of the late Thomas S. Jesup, quartermaster general of the U. S. A.; of Samuel Burr Sherwood, of Westport, Conn., who grad. at Yale in 1786, and was a member of Congress; of Sarah Sherwood, wife of the late Gov. Bissell of Conn.; and of Rachel Hyde, wife of Judge Ebenezer Andrews of Milan, O., who grad. at Yale in 1817.

4. John Hyde, of Richmond, Va., who came to America about 1750, and has descendants in various parts of the Union.

The name of William Hyde (1) first apppears at Hartford, Conn., in 1636. And his name is on the monument in the old cemetery at that place as one of the original settlers; and he had lands assigned to him there.

Many families of the name of Hyde had been settled in different parts of England for five or six hundred years prior to the settlement of New England. One of the name, Sir Nicholas Hyde, was chief justice of the court of King's Bench in 1626; another, Sir Robert Hyde, was chief justice of the court of common pleas in 1660. And a third, Sir Edward Hyde, afterwards the Earl of Clarendon, was lord chancellor at the restoration, 1660; and was the grandfather of Queen Mary the Second, and Queen Ann, and of Edward Hyde, Lord Cornbury, who was one of the provincial Governors of New York.

William Hyde (1) the first, of Norwich, was a contemporary of Sir Robert Hyde and of the Earl of Clarendon, but was undoubtedly of humbler origin. I have not been able to ascertain from what part of England he came; to what family he belonged; or where he first landed in this country, or the precise time when he arrived here. He probably, however, came over in 1633, with the Rev. Thomas Hooker, the first minister of Hartford; sojourned a short time at Newton, Mass., and removed with him to Hartford in 1636. The time of his removal to Saybrooke is not ascertained, but he owned lands in Hartford as late as 1639. He probably went to Saybrooke soon after that, and his daughter was married there early in 1652. No information has been obtained as to the name of his wife, or when, or where she died. From the age of the son when he died (forty), he must have been born in 1636. His mother was of course then living, and probably died at Hartford or Saybrooke, before the removal of her husband to Norwich; as no account of her death is found upon the Norwich records. The daughter either was born in England or was married very young; the date of her birth, or her age of the time of her death in 1703, have not been ascertained.

Norwich was settled in 1660. The 35 original proprietors of that town were the Rev. James Fitch, the first minister of that place; Major John Mason, afterwards Lieut. Gov. of Connecticut; Lieut. Thomas Leffingwell; Lieut. Thomas Tracy and his eldest son, John Tracy; Deacon Thomas Adgate; Christopher Huntington, and his brother, Deacon Simon Huntington; Ensign Thomas Waterman; William Hyde and his son Samuel Hyde, and his son-in-law, John Post; Thomas Post; Lieut. William Backus, and his brother Stephen Backus; Deacon Hugh Calkins, and his son, John Calkins, and his son-in-law, Jonathan Royce; John Reynolds; Thomas Bliss; Francis Griswold; John Birchard; Robert Wade; Morgan Bowers; John Gager; Thomas Howard; Dr. John Olmstead; Nehemiah Smith; Richard Eggerton; John Elderkin; John Bradford; Thomas Bingham; Robert Allen; John Baldwin and John Pease. Most of these original proprietors of Norwich were from Saybrook, and East Saybrook, (now Lyme). Hugh Calkins, and his son and son-in-law, and John Pease, John Gager, Nehemiah Smith and Robert Allen, were from New London. Thomas Waterman and John Bradford were from Marshfield, Mass.

William Hyde was a man of considerable importance among the settlers of Norwich, and was frequently elected as one of the townsmen, or selectmen. He died at Norwich, 6 January, 1681. His home lot was devised to his grandson, William Hyde (6) the second. And a part of it was owned by William Mansfield, a descendant of the latter; and was occupied by him as the site of his dwelling house in 1859.

The children of William Hyde were:

2. Samuel, b. about 1637, at Hartford; m. Jane Lee.

3. Hester, b. prob. in England; m. John Post.

II. SAMUEL HYDE (2), born at Hartford, Conn., about 1637, only son of the first William Hyde of Norwich, m. in June, 1659, Jane Lee of East Saybrooke (now Lyme). She was the daughter of Thomas Lee and ——— Brown, his wife.

(This Thomas Lee came from England in 1641, with his wife and three children. He died on the passage; and his widow and children came to Saybrook. The first Thomas Lee of Lyme was a brother of Jane, wife of this Samuel Hyde. And Sarah Lee, who married John Large of Lyme, and setled on Long Island, was their sister.)

Thomas Lee lived at Saybrook, Conn.; he was made ensign October 12, 1676, and sergeant October 8, 1685.

The Mail and Express of Nov. 4, 1899, states that Thomas Lee came to America about 1641 with his mother, Phebe, and two sisters, Phebe and Jane. Tradition says that his father, whose name was also Thomas, had died on the voyage over. They landed at Boston, and went from there to Saybrook, Conn.

He married Sarah Kirkland, of Saybrook, and had by her five children:

John, born 1670; married Elizabeth Smith, of Lyme.

THIRD GENERATION.

Mary, twin of John; married Thomas Lord, of Lyme.
Thomas, born 1672; married Elizabeth Graham, of Hartford.
Sarah, born 1674; married Daniel Buckingham, of Saybrook.
Phebe, born 1676; married Capt. Reinold Marvin, of Lyme.
He married, secondly, June, 1676, Mary DeWolf—probably the daughter of Belshazar DeWolf, and had by her nine children:
Elizabeth, born 1681; married Samuel Peck, of Lyme.
William, born 1684; married Mary Griffin, of Long Island.
Stephen, born 1686; died 1694.
Joseph, born 1688; died 1705.
Benjamin, born 1690; died 1692.
Benjamin, second, born 1692.
Hannah, born 1695; married John Griswold.
Stephen, second, born 1698; married Abigail Lord.
Lydia, born 1701.

At a Court of Election, held at Hartford, May 12, 1670, Thomas Lee was elected a Freeman of Lyme. He represented Lyme as a Deputy at a General Court held at Hartford October 8, 1685, at the former session being recorded as "Ensign" Thomas Lee, and at the latter as "Sergeant." He died December 5, 1704.

Thomas Lee was one of the first settlers at Lyme and had large possessions there. He married first Sarah Kirtland, of Saybrook, and had by her five children. He married secondly Mary De Wolf and had by her nine children. Thomas Lee died December 5, 1704, at Lyme. His widow, Mary De Wolf, married May 30, 1705, Matthew Griswold. She died October 27, 1724, aged 68 years.

Jane Lee, daughter of Thomas Lee and ———— Brown, married June, 1659, Samuel Hyde at Hartford. She died July 8, 1745. Sarah Lee married John Largs, of Lyme (or John Lay).

Samuel Hyde (2) (great-great-great-grandfather of Z. Stiles Ely) and his wife came to Norwich in 1660. Their eldest daughter, Elizabeth, born in August of that year, was the first white child born in Norwich. He was a farmer and had lands assigned to him at Norwich West Farms, where he died in 1677, at the age of 40 years. And John Birchard became the guardian of his children, who were all minors at that time. The date of his wife's death is not ascertained.

Their children were:
4. Samuel, b. in May, 1665, at Norwich; m. Elizabeth Calkins.
5. John, b. in Dec., 1667, at Norwich; m. Experience Abel.
6. William, b. in Jan., 1670, at Norwich; m. Anne Bushnell.
7. Thomas, b. in July, 1672, at Norwich; m. Mary Backus. (See note.)
8. Jabez, b. in May, 1677, at Norwich; m. Elizabeth Bushnell.
9. Elizabeth, b. in August, 1660, at Norwich; m. Lieut. Richard Lord.
10. Phebe, b. in Jan., 1663, at Norwich; m. Matthew Griswold.
11. Sarah, b. in Feb., 1675; d. the same year.

In the Genealogical Column of the Mail and Express of June 18, 1898, we find the following details as to Jane Hyde:

Jane Hyde, born at Norwich, Conn.—(that part of the town is now called Franklin)—December 4, 1704; youngest daughter of Thomas Hyde and Mary Backus; was granddaughter of Samuel Hyde and Jane Lee, of Norwich; she married, March 20, 1828, John Birchard, born April 12, 1704, at Norwich; third son of James Birchard and Elizabeth Beckwith, of Norwich. They had Ezra, John, Gideon, Phineas, Matthew, Jemima, born February 13, 1729, at Norwich, married Jedediah Lathrop, of Bozrah, his second wife; Phebe, Jane, Lois, Elizabeth, Lucy. Mrs. Jane Hyde Birchard died December 5, 1754. John Birchard married, second, Mrs. Mary Barrol, and after her death, Mrs. Sarah Hyde. H. R.

No. 2,628 (Answer).—In reference to your inquiry regarding Jane Hyde, she was the daughter of Thomas Hyde, grandson of William Hyde, of Norwich, Conn. He married Mary Backus, born November, 1672. Jane was born December 4, 1704. She married, March 20, 1728, John Birchard, born April 12, 1704. They had eleven children. One of the daughters, Jemima, born February 13, 1729, married Capt. Jedediah Lathrop, of Bozrah, whose first wife was Abigail Hyde, daughter of Capt. Daniel Hyde and Elizabeth Calkins. Abigail died October 1, 1751, and Capt. Jedediah Lathrop married, May 18, 1752, Jemima Birchard, born February 13, 1729 (daughter of John Birchard and Jane Hyde). They had eight children. H. C. P.

III. PHEBE HYDE (10), born at Norwich, Conn., in Jan., 1663 (great, great, grandmother of Z. S. Ely), the second daughter of Samuel Hyde (2) and Jane Lee, was a granddaughter of William Hyde the first of Norwich. She married 21 May, 1683, Matthew Griswold, born in 1653 at East Saybrook, the eldest son of Matthew Griswold and Anna Wolcott of Lyme.

(This Matthew Griswold the first of Lyme and his four brothers, Thomas, Edward, Francis and George, were born in England, and were the sons of Edward Griswold of Kenilworth in Warwickshire. All these five sons, except Thomas, came to America; and Edward, George and Francis lived at Windsor in Sept., 1649. Edward settled at Killingworth, Conn.; Francis settled at Saybrook, and removed from there to Norwich in 1660, and had two sons and six daughters; George settled in Simsbury; and Matthew, born about 1597 in England, came with his brothers to Windsor, where he married, about 1636, Anne Wolcott (eldest daughter of Henry Wolcott, Esq., and Elizabeth Sanders of Windsor), and settled at Saybrook at the first establishment of that town, about 1639. He was one of its first commissioners of the peace or magistrates. He had the charge of Gov. Fenwick's affairs when the latter left the colony. He had a large tract of land in East Saybrook (now old Lyme), at a place now called Black Hall; most of which is still in the hands of his descendants. Upon those lands he afterwards settled. He died there at the age of 96 and was buried at Saybrook, on the opposite side of the Connecticut river.)

Matthew Griswold, and his wife, Pheby Hyde, settled at Lyme. He was a man of distinction, and one of the assistants of the colony. She died at Lyme, 29 Nov., 1704.

Their children were:

72. Matthew, b. 15 Sept., 1688, at Lyme, who died in 1712, unm.

73. John, b. 22 Dec., 1690, at Lyme, m. Hannah Lee.

74. George, b. 13 Aug., 1692, at Lyme, m. 1 Hannah Lynde, 2 Elizabeth Lee.

And they were buried in the cemetery at Old Lyme, below the hill. She was the widow of Thomas Lee the first of Lyme, and her maiden name was Mary De Wolf; probably daughter of Balthazar De Wolf.

IV. JANE LORD (67), born at Lyme about 1688, the third daughter of Lieut. Richard Lord and Elizabeth Hyde (9) of Lyme, was a granddaughter of Samuel Hyde (2) the first, and Jane Lee of Norwich. She married Samuel Ely, the eldest son of Richard Ely of Lyme, whose wife was Mary Marvin, born 1666, eldest daughter of Lieut. Reinold Marvin and Sarah Clark, his wife, of Lyme.

Samuel Ely and Jane Lord settled at Saybrook, where they died; but I have not ascertained the dates of their deaths.

Their children were:
461. Samuel, born at Saybrook, married Hannah Marsh.
462. Elizabeth, born at Saybrook, married Elisha Sheldon.

22. Mary Ely, daughter of Richard Ely and Mary Marvin, was born in 1689.

She married ——— Niles, of Hebron, Conn. We have no record of any children.

23. Sarah Ely, daughter of Richard Ely and Mary Marvin, was born in 1695.

She married, January 3, 1717, General Jonathan Gillette, of Colchester, Conn.

The following particulars as to the Gillette ancestry are communicated by Mr. C. E. Clapp, of the firm of Park Bros. & Co., Pittsburgh, Penn.:

Mr. Clapp wrote under date of Dec. 23, 1895:

General Jonathan Gillette, or Gillet, was born at Windsor, Conn., July 28, 1685, and died at Colchester, Conn., Jany. 3, 1775. He married Jany. 3, 1717, Sarah Ely, born 1695, died Aug. 4, 1759, daughter of Richard Ely, born in Plymouth, England, in 1656, and of Mary Marvin, born 1666. The parents of Richard Ely were Richard Ely of Plymouth, Eng., and Joan Phipps. Mary Marvin was the daughter of Reinold Marvin of Lyme, Conn., and of Sarah Clark, his wife.

The father of General Gillette was Josiah Gillet, who was born at Windsor, Conn., August, 1650, and who died in Colchester, Conn., where he removed in 1702, on the 29th day of Oct., 1736. He married July 30, 1676, Joanne Taintor, born Apr., 1657, died Jany. 23, 1735.

She was the daughter of Michael Taintor of Bradford, Conn., who was born in Wales, and who is mentioned in 1650 as a resident of Bradford, Conn.

Mr. Taintor was the master of a yacht trading in Virginia in 1653. He was Judge of Court, Commissioner, and Member of the General Assembly; he married Elizabeth Rose, daughter of Robert Rose. She died in August, 1659.

The father of Michael Taintor was Charles Taintor of Fairfield, Conn., and of Weathersfield, Conn., who came from Wales not later than 1643, on account of religious persecution. Mr. Taintor was a man of wealth, who had been deprived by confiscation of large estates in Wales. He held a position of importance among the New England settlers and was Deputy to the General Court or Assembly in 1647-1648. He was lost at sea in the year 1654.

The father of Josiah Gillet was Jonathan Gillet, who was born about 1600, and departed this life August 23, 1677. His wife Mary, family name not known, died Jan. 5, 1685. Mr. Gillet arrived at Nantasket from Dorchester, Devonshire, or Somersetshire, England, in the ship "Mary and John," May 30, 1630. He settled in Dorchester, but removed about 1636 to Windsor, Conn., where he made his permanent home.

24. Richard Ely, youngest son of Richard Ely and Mary Marvin, was born Oct. 27, 1697, at Lyme, Conn., and died Feb. 24, 1777. His tombstone is to be seen in the Ely Burial Ground at Lyme. He married first Elizabeth (Phebe) Peck, and resided near the residence of Mr. Z. Stiles Ely. (See Ely Reunion pamphlet, page 56.)

Mrs. Ely died Oct. 8, 1730, and Mr. Ely remarried Oct. 26, 1732.

His second wife was Phebe Hubbard, of Middletown, Conn., in regard to whom it is interesting to know that she was fourth in descent from George Hubbard, one of the original settlers of Hartford, Conn., her ancestry being as follows:

Her great-grandparents were: George Hubbard, who married Elizabeth Watts,

Their son, Joseph Hubbard, married Mary Foster, and their son, Robert Hubbard, married Abigail Adams, of Middletown, Conn., the latter being the parents of Phebe, the second wife of Deacon Richard Ely.

Children of Richard Ely and Elizabeth Peck:—

1. Elizabeth, b. Oct. 11, 1724; d. Feb. 12, 1802; m. Col. Samuel ~~Sheldon,~~ Selden captured at battle of Long Island, 1776, and died a prisoner, N. Y., Oct. 11, 1776.

RESIDENCE OF THE SECOND RICHARD ELY.

Richard Ely was a man of conspicuous piety and great Christian activity. He was generally known as Deacon Richard Ely, perhaps not only on account of his religious office, but also to distinguish him from his cousin, Capt. Richard Ely, seven years his senior, the son of Judge William Ely.

I have been permitted, thanks to the courtesy of Mr. Z. Stiles Ely, to see copies made from the family Bible of the worthy Deacon. This yellow and time stained copy gives evidence of the pious and methodical nature of Deacon Ely. Not only the year, month, and day of each advent into the family is recorded, but also the hour, and, when possible, the minutes are noted. A spirit of faith and Christian piety voices itself in many entries. Blessings are acknowledged with thanksgiving, deaths are recorded with resignation. One can reconstruct the man from these entries in the Family Bible.

"Richard Ely, of Lyme, Conn., born 1697, died 1777, married Elizabeth Peck. Who were his parents?" Signed E. I. L.—Mail and Express Genealogical Column, Sat. eve., Nov. 28, 1896.

(The first wife of Richard Ely was Elizabeth Peck. Elizabeth Ely, their daughter, born 11 Oct., 1724, at Lyme, married 23 May, 1745, Col. Samuel Selden, of the Revolutionary army, uncle of the Rev. Eliphalet Nott, D. D., Prest. of Union College, and was the mother of Chas. Selden and Joseph Dudley Selden, who settled at Troy, N. Y., and the grandmother of Elizabeth Spencer, wife of Gov. Lewis Cass, of Michigan. This Richard Ely was the only brother of Samuel Ely, who married Jane Lord. His second wife was born in 1705, and was sister of Robert Hubbard, who married Elizabeth Sill.)

All the children of Deacon Ely and Phebe Hubbard lived to an advanced age; all met in 1813 at the house of the eldest brother, Rev. Richard Ely, and the younger brother, Rev. David Ely of Huntington, Conn., preached a sermon on the occasion, he being then nearly three score years and ten.

ESTHER,

Deacon RICHARD ELY
and ELIZABETH his wife.

MRS. PHEBE,

widow

Deacon RICHARD ELY,

Died Aug. 28, 177(9?)
Aged 68.

Professor Daniel C. Eaton furnishes the above copies of inscriptions from tombstones at North Lyme.

The following interesting items are furnished me in reference to the children of the good Deacon Richard Ely:

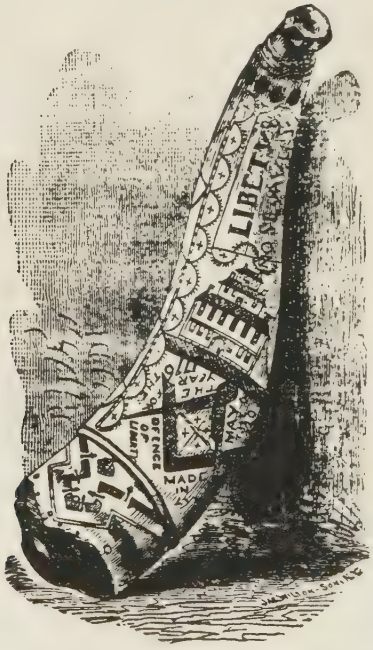
Elizabeth, the oldest child, who married Colonel Selden, was the grandmother of the late Chief Justice Morrison Waite of Lyme, and also of his wife, the Chief Justice and wife being cousins.

Ezra, the oldest son, was the grandfather of the late Rev. Dr. Ezra Stiles Ely of Philadelphia, and was the grandfather of Mr. Z. Stiles Ely's mother. Ezra was the great-grandfather of Prof. Richard T. Ely.

Richard, who married a Sheldon, was the grandfather of the late Richard S. Ely, of 373 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Seth, who married a Reynolds, was the grandfather of the late Abner L. Ely, of New York.

Elihu was the grandfather of the late Elias H. Ely, an eminent lawyer of this city, and friend of Daniel Webster.



THE OLD POWDER HORN.

Elihu Ely, great-grandson of Richard Ely, who came from Plymouth, England, was born at Lyme, Conn., November 15th, 1737, and died June 25th, 1815.

He was the maker and original owner of this ancient powder-horn (see previous page), which, besides much other carving on its surface, bears the inscription: "Made in Lyme, May the 20th, the year 1776, for the defence of Liberty. Liberty and no Slavery. Elihu Ely, owner."

He was an officer of the Connecticut Volunteers, and as such took part in the battle of Saratoga, October 7th, 1777, and was present at the surrender of General Burgoyne, October 17, 1777.

His sword carried by him as an officer on those occasions, and the powder-horn alluded to, are now in possession of his grandson, Richard Ely, of Binghamton, N. Y.

He was a great reader, a man of uncommon intelligence and much humor, and is said to have been an unusually fine looking man.

Josiah was father of the fifth Richard, who was the father of Mr. Z. Stiles Ely.

Phebe was the grandmother of the late Judge Colt, who was Chief Justice of Massachusetts.

Hepzibah was the grandmother of the wife, now deceased, of Prof. Ballard, and also of the late Rev. Dr. Pratt, of Portsmouth, O.

David was the grandfather of B. D. Silliman, the well-known lawyer of Brooklyn, now (1895) about ninety-three years of age.

The Rev. Dr. David Ely was for a long time one of the Trustees of Yale College, and was much interested in it.

The following extract from the Hyde Genealogy gives some connections of Phebe Hubbard:

V. ELIZABETH SILL (457), b. at Lyme, Conn., 20 Nov., 1708, the second daughter of Joseph Sill and Phebe Lord (66) of Lyme, was a granddaughter of Elizabeth Hyde (9) of the third generation. She m. 9 Oct., 1735, Robert Hubbard, b. 30 July, 1712 (son of Robert Hubbard, b. 6 Oct., 1673, at Middletown, and Abigail Atkins of Middletown, grandson of Joseph Hubbard, b. 10 Dec., 1643, and Mary Porter, and great grandson of George Hubbard, who was born in Wakefield, England, in 1594, came to Hartford, Conn., in 1636, m. Elizabeth Watts in 1640, settled in Hartford, and died 18 March, 1685, at Middletown. Robert Hubbard and Elizabeth his wife settled at Middletown). (Phebe Hubbard, sister of Robert, was great grandmother of Z. Stiles Ely.)

Their children were (great uncles and aunts of Z. S. E.):

In 1737 he married Elizabeth Perkins, and established himself as a farmer in his native town.

In 1756 he left Lyme, and moved to Livingston, N. J., on the Orange Mountain, where he resided until the time of his death, April 3, 1802.

From the Genealogy of the Perkins Family, we learn in regard to the wife of Capt. William Ely the following:

"155. ELIZABETH (Abraham 64, Isaac 12, John 2, John 1), was born in Chebacco Parish, Ipswich, Mass., December 30, 1715. She married Captain William Ely, Jr., being published September 16, 1737. He was born in Lyme, Conn., Aug. 10, 1715, and died in Livingston, N. J., April 3, 1802. She died May 27, 1782.

"Concerning Elizabeth (Perkins) Ely, one of her grandchildren, Smith Ely, Jr., says: 'She is held in peculiar veneration by her descendants, in consequence of certain traditions which show her to have been a woman of unusual force of character and sterling integrity.' He mentions the following incident showing her conscientiousness in what she considered her duty: 'Shortly after their settlement in New Jersey, her husband was financially ruined, or nearly so, in consequence of his being surety for his brother, and his property was levied upon. The officers who made the seizure advised Mrs. Ely to secrete a silver tea service which she had inherited from her parents; but she refused to do so.'"

The Perkins Genealogy mentions an Abraham Perkins 152, son of Abraham and Abigail (Dodge) Perkins, born 1708, who married 1st Elizabeth Ely, 2nd a widow, Mary Ely. This Abraham Perkins was a brother of Elizabeth, who married Captain William Ely. (See pages 117, 118, etc.).

The Public Records of Conn., 1735-43, page 494, states that in October, 1742, on petition to the Assembly of William Ely, Junr., of Lyme, vs. Samuel Ely, Elisha Shelden and Elizabeth, his wife, the question was put, whether the pleas offered by respondents in abatement of said petition, as on file, are sufficient. Resolved by this Assembly in the affirmative.

MONUMENT OF CAPTAIN WILLIAM ELY

ELY CEMETERY, LIVINGSTON, NEW JERSEY

No doubt, it will be observed, is expressed as to Capt. Ely's having entered upon a future existence of beatitude.

It may be that his character was so elevated to make the expression of such hopes unnecessary if not impertinent.

This Richard Ely's great grandson, known in the Colonial records as Captain William Ely, was born in Lyme, in 1713, was married in 1737 to Elizabeth Perkins, and established himself as a farmer in his native town. In 1750 he emigrated. Perhaps some Horace Greeley of that period advised the young man to "go West." At all events he did go West, as far as the hills near Orange, New Jersey, where he purchased some land, on which I now reside, and resumed his old occupation. He passed a useful and blameless life and was prominent in the Church and in public affairs. He reared a large family and died at a very advanced age, and was buried by the side of his wife in a burial ground which he had arranged on his own farm. His descendants have continued this place of sepulture, and in this quiet graveyard to-day, six generations of our people rest together.. The descendants of Captain William Ely are very numerous, and have representatives in almost every walk of life; but with scarcely an exception, I may say, that they have so conducted themselves as to reflect no discredit upon their New England ancestors.

Hon. Smith Ely, Jr., Lyme, July 10, 1878.

In response to an enquiry from Mrs. Hattie Wilson High, 528 Peachtree Street, Atlanta, Ga., William C. Mowry, Secretary of State, certified over the Seal of the State of Connecticut, Jany. 4, 1897, that the records on file in the Secretary of State's Office show that William Ely was the Deputy representing Lyme, in May, 1755, and in August, 1755; that the General Assembly, May session, 1738, voted that "This Assembly do establish and confirm Mr. William Ely to be Ensign of the company or trainband in the town of Lyme, and order that he be commissioned accordingly."

October Session, 1740.

This Assembly do establish and confirm Mr. William Ely to be Lieutenant of the 3d Company or trainband in the town of Lyme, and order that he be commissioned accordingly.

March Session, 1745.

This Assembly do establish and confirm Mr. William Ely to be Captain of the 3d Company, or trainband in the town of Lyme, and order that he be commissioned accordingly.

132. Joseph Ely, second son of Captain Richard Ely, and his wife, Ruhama Thompson, and grandson of Judge William Ely, was born in 1716. He married Rebecca Selden, second daughter of Mr. Joseph Selden, Dec. 9, 1742. Their children:—

9. Olive, b. June 23, 1758; d. 1843; m. Robert Hungerford.

Mr. Joseph Ely died April 17, 1762, at the age of 46 years; and his widow departed this life Feby. 20, 1781, aged 64 years.

The second son of Mr. and Mrs. Ely, named Joseph, died while a member of Yale College. The Ely signet ring (see pages 81 and 82 of the Ely Reunion Pamphlet) is said to have descended through his hands to the son of his sister Anna. Anna Ely married Elihu Ely, son of Deacon Richard Ely, of Revolutionary fame (see Reunion Pamphlet, page 88).

Mrs. Anna Ely gave the signet ring to her son, Joseph, and by him it was given to Joseph Elihu Ely, grandson of Elihu Ely (maker of the Powder Horn) and son of Oliver Ely, of Binghamton, N. Y.

In March, 1758, the Connecticut Assembly commissioned Joseph Ely as 2d Lieut. in the 2d Company. (Pub. Rec. Conn. Vol. XI, page 98.)

5. Tabitha, b. 1760; d. 1858; m. 1772, Jedediah Peck, her first cousin, son of Elijah Peck and Hepzibah Pearson.

In Vol. 12 of the Colonial Records of Conn., page 390, we find the record that in May, 1765, James Ely of Lyme (No. 152 of the Ely Genealogy) preferred a petition to the Assembly against Richard Ely and Mary Ely of Lyme, and that the respondents moved that the petitioner be required to give a bond for the prosecution of his petition, and for damages in case he should not make his plea good.

Mr. Samuel Holden Parsons of Lyme accordingly went security in the sum of £20.

The question was then put whether anything should be granted on this petition.
Resolved by this Assembly in the negative.
Costs allowed to the respondents in this case £2 11s. 6d.
Ex. granted May 3, 1765.

The following quotation from the Ely Reunion Pamphlet is by a direct descendant of Adriel Ely:

Rev. Dr. Foster Ely, Rector of Grace Church, Lockport, N. Y., said in substance:

Relatives and Friends:—When your Committee honored me with an invitation to prepare a paper on the "Richard Ely line," it was declined from inability to get the time. Judge of my surprise on arriving here to find my name on the programme as one of the speakers. What was to be done? To what expedient resort for relief from my embarrassment? The first impulse was to go either to the Ely Cemetery and there commune with our ancestral dead, or to the neighboring "Saybrook Point," so dear to our family as providing that grave for Lady Fenwick, around which cluster so many pleasant memories. But by my newly-found cousin, Judge George Ely, of this picturesque and historic place, that impulse was overruled, he giving the assurance that nothing in the way of a speech would be exacted, except what was strictly apologetical. The apology has now been offered.

Other speakers have alluded to their own immediate branch of the family. It may not, therefore, be indelicate to refer to mine, and so pay departed kindred a slight tribute of respect. My father was Adriel, Jr.; grandfather, Adriel; great-great-grandfather, William, the son of that Richard who, as has been said, came from England about the year 1650, and is the patron saint of his lineal descendants. The children of grandfather Adriel are Horace, Betsey, Sumner, William Stow, and Adriel, Jr. Each of these had offspring who survived them. Horace lived here, in Lyme, and married Sarah Rogers, by whom he had five children. They have all gone to their long home. The eldest was William Horace, the father of Sarah Olive and Theodore Rogers. The former, it was my good fortune to marry, and she is here to-day, not by courtesy, but by right.

In the 15th Volume of the Colonial Records of Conn., 1775-1776, p. 245, we read that at a meeting of the Governor and Council of Safety, Feby. 27, 1776, it was voted that Adriel Ely be and he is hereby appointed Ensign of the Company under command of Capt. John Ely.

P. 463: On Wednesday, July 3, 1776, Lieut. Martin Kirtland was appointed Captain of a Company at New London Station in the room of Capt. John Ely, promoted.

2d Lieut. Dane Pratts was made 1st Lieut. in room of Martin Kirtland.

Ensign Adriel Ely was made 2d Lieut. in room of Danl. Pratts.

Sergt. Danl. Kirtland was made Ensign in place of Adriel Ely.

132. Sarah Ely, daughter of Captain Richard Ely and his second wife, Margaret Olcott, was born in 1746. She married Silas Cheney, of Manchester, Conn., who was born March 14, 1734, died Sept. 5, 1791.

Children:

1. Silas Ely, born 1779, died Sept., 1821, married May 18, 1807, Mary Young.

After the death of Silas Cheney, the widow married a Mr. Cone, of Bolton, Conn.

141. Mary Ely, eldest daughter of Major Daniel Ely and his first wife, Mary Ann Champlin, was born in 1714. In 1736 she married Benjamin Lee, son of John Lee and Elizabeth Smith. Their children:—

1. Mary Ann, b. 1738.
2. Benjamin, b. 1740; d. 1826; m. 1760, Mary Dorr.
3. William, b. 1743.
4. Lucia, b. 1745.
5. Martin, b. 1748.
6. Abigail, b. 1752.
7. Esther, b. 1753.
8. John, b. 1755.
9. Elizabeth, b. 1757.
10. Lemuel, b. 1760.
11. Daniel, b. 1762.

From the Mail and Express of March 25, 1899, we take the following. It is very possible that the John Lee referred to was the 8th child of Mary Ely and Benjamin Lee. John Lee's native town (I am not positive) was Reading, Conn. His wife was Olive Towner. John Lee died in Roxbury, Delaware County, N. Y., just prior to the War of 1812. He had three children: Abigail, who married a Lemming; Sally, who married a Meeker, and Daniel Lee.

Daniel Lee lived in Reading, Conn. Born January 23, 1775, and married Mary (Molly) Olmstead, born January 26, 1777, of Ridgefield, Conn. In 1803 Daniel Lee and wife, with John Lee his father and mother, came to and settled in Roxbury, Delaware County, N. Y. He was a captain in the War of 1812; he had eight children: Daniel Olmstead, Betsey, Sarah, Abigail, John, Hannah, Elizabeth and Mary.

FOURTH GENERATION.

142. Ann Ely was the second daughter of Major Daniel Ely and his wife, Mary Ann Champlin, and was born in 1716. We have no further record of her except that she married Benjamin Harris.

143. Elizabeth Ely, the third daughter of Major Daniel Ely and Mary Ann Champlin, was born in 1718. She married on Feby. 28, 1739, Abraham Perkins, whose ancestry is given below. She died Feby. 21, 1759. Their children:—

1. Frances, b. 1741; m. ——— Lee.
2. William, b. 1743; m. Lydia Sterling.
3. Abraham, b. 1745; d. 1824; m. 1798, Annie Fanning.
4. Elizabeth, b. 1748; m. Frederick Mather.
5. Daniel, b. 1750.
6. Abigail, b. 1752; d. 1764.
7. Samuel, b. 1754; m. 1780, Polly Jewett.
8. Sarah, b. 1756.
9. Joseph, b. 1760.
10. Benjamin, b. 1762.
11. Abigail, b. 1764.

The following extract from the Perkins Genealogy will serve to show the ancestry of Abraham Perkins, who married Elizabeth Ely, February 28, 1739.

1. "JOHN PERKINS, SENIOR," the immigrant ancestor, was probably born in Newent, Gloucestershire, England, in the year 1590. He was among the earliest emigrants from the mother country, sailing from Bristol, England, December 1, 1630, in the ship Lyon, William Pierce, master, bound for Boston in America, taking with him his entire family, consisting then of his wife and five children. His fellow passengers were the afterwards famous divine, Rev. Roger Williams, and others; twenty in all. After a stormy passage of sixty-seven days, they arrived at Nantasket, February 5, 1631, and on the 6th came to an anchor before Boston.

For about two years after their arrival in America, the Perkins family resided in Boston, where the youngest child, Lydia, was born, her baptism being recorded upon the parish books of the First Church there, June 3, 1632.

We are not able to ascertain with certainty just what employed the time of our emigrant during the two years he resided in Boston, but the record shows that he was not idle, but engaged in the public business of the colony.

On the 18th of May, 1631, he took the oath of freeman, admitting him to all the civil rights of the colony. He removed from Boston in 1633 to the colony then newly founded by John Winthrop and others at Ipswich. Here he was largely engaged in agriculture and had several grants of land. The location of his house was near the river at the entrance to Jeffries Neck, on what is now East Street, where he had considerable land granted to him.

John Perkins, besides occupying town offices and holding other places of trust, appears to have been one of the leading men of Ipswich, and was highly esteemed by his fellow townsmen. He died in 1654, at the age of 64 years. The children of John Perkins and wife Judith were:—

2. John, b. 1614, d. Dec. 14, 1686.
3. Thomas, b. 1616, d. May 7, 1686.
4. Elizabeth, b. 1618, d. 1700.
5. Mary, b. 1620, d. 1700.
6. Jacob, b. 1624, d. Jan. 29, 1700.
7. Lydia, b. 1632, d. about 1672; baptised at First Church of Boston, June 3, 1632.

2. JOHN PERKINS, JR. (John), born in England in 1614, came, with others of the same family, to Boston in New England in 1631, and with them removed to Ipswich in 1633. The next year he had a grant of land, as appears from the book of land grants of Ipswich.

He married Elizabeth ——— about 1635, and entered upon the duties of life with a vigor which made him a desirable citizen of this new settlement.

He opened the first public house in Ipswich, and was chosen as Quartermaster of the military organization of the settlement, a title which he ever afterwards retained.

He was engaged in the coast fisheries, and used a part of what is Little Neck for curing his fish, as early as 1645.

His family was quite large, consisting of eight sons and one daughter, and perhaps more.

The children of Quartermaster Perkins and Elizabeth his wife were:

8. John, b. 1636; m. Lydia; d. 1699.
9. Abraham, b. 1640, m. Hannah Beamsley, d. 27 Apr., 1722.
10. Jacob, b. 1646, m. 1st, Sarah Wainwright; 2nd, Sarah Kinsman; d. Nov. 26, 1719.
11. Luke, b. 1649, m. 1st, Elizabeth Jaques; 2nd, Sarah ———; d. after 1694.

13. Nathaniel, b. 1652; m. Judith ———.
14. Samuel, b. 1655; m. Hannah West; d. 1700.
15. Thomas.
16. Sarah.

12. ISAAC (John 2, John 1), was born in Ipswich, Mass., about 1650. He married, in 1669, Hannah, daughter of Alexander Knight and his wife Hannah. The widow, Hannah Knight, after the death of her husband, married Robert Whitman, November 9, 1664.

This marriage of Isaac with Hannah Knight does not appear upon the record, but is made evident by the following extract: "Isaac Perkins and wife Hannah convey to Richard Kimball land in Ipswich which formerly belonged to her father, Alexander Knight, formerly of Ipswich. Feb. 6, 1716."

On March 20, 1683-4, his father gave him a deed of 100 acres in Chebacco Parish, near to what is now called "the falls"; he had been living there before this deed was made. This was half of the farm his father had bought of William Wittred, carpenter, August 8, 1661; it was owned by a grandson of Isaac in 1790.

He appears to have been a man who was highly respected by his neighbors, who spoke of him as "Mr. Isaac Perkins, of Chebacco."

The children of Isaac Perkins and his wife Hannah were:—

63. John, b. July 1, 1670; d. young.
64. Abraham, b. Sept. 15, 1671; m. Abigail Dodge.
65. Hannah, b. Jan. 31, 1673; m. ——— Woodward.

69. Sarah, b. March 28, 1685; m. ——— Marshall.
70. Mary, b. March 27, 1687; m. ——— Proctor.

64. ABRAHAM (Isaac 12, John 2, John 1), was born in Chebacco Parish, Ipswich, Mass., September 15, 1671. He married Abigail Dodge, November 6, 1701. She was the daughter of Joseph and Sarah Dodge, and was born in Beverly, the place of residence of her parents, September 12, 1681. She was the oldest of a family of eight brothers and sisters. Their marriage took place at Ipswich, Mass.

Abraham Perkins was a farmer in his native place, Chebacco, and acquired a large property in farming lands. His homestead and farm adjoined that of his father. This property he bought of his uncle Nathaniel in 1700. We have no record of the time of his death or that of his wife.

Children of Abraham and Abigail Dodge Perkins were:—

149. Abigail, b. 1702; m. Joseph Emerson.
150. James, b. in 1705; m. Margaret Andrews.

152. ABRAHAM (Abraham 64, Isaac 12, John 2, John 1), was born in Chebacco Parish, Ipswich, Mass., in 1708. He removed to Lyme, Conn., with his brother James, in 1736, or soon after that time. He there married, first, Elizabeth Ely, February 28, 1739. She was the daughter of Major Daniel Ely of Lyme, and was born in 1718. She died February 21, 1759, at the age of forty-one years. After the death of his wife, Elizabeth, he married a second time, to Mary Ely. She was the widow of Richard Ely; her maiden name was Person, or Pearson. Their marriage took place July 15, 1759.

He was chosen a deacon of the church in Lyme. By occupation he was a farmer.

FOURTH GENERATION.

In his will he mentions his children as follows: Francis, William, Abraham, Jr., Betty Mather, Daniel, Samuel, Sarah Pratt, Joseph, and Benjamin. 229. ISAAC (James 150, Abraham 64, Isaac 12, John 2, John 1), was born in Lyme, Conn., June 14, 1749. He married Lois Beebe about 1775. She was the daughter of David and Sarah (Lord) Beebe, of Lyme, Conn.

Isaac Perkins died in 1776. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and a family tradition says that he was returning sick from the army, and being so ill as to be unable to reach his home, he died by the way; but at what place cannot now be ascertained.

An inventory of his property was rendered by his administrator to the Probate Court, January 3, 1777. After his decease his widow, Lois, married Jacob Ely, of Lyme, Conn., May 15, 1783, and had by him seven children. Jacob Ely died September 28, 1836. Lois died April 11, 1837.

War, VIII., 80.

Pub. Rec. Conn., Vol. XI., page 98:

It is probable Wells Ely served at Ticonderoga, July 8. N. Y. Col. Doc., Vol. X. 732.

In May, 1759, the General Assembly of Conn. commissioned Wells Ely of Lyme 2nd Lieut. in the 4th Regiment.

148. Col. John Ely, son of Daniel Ely and Ruhama Turner, was born in 1737, and died in 1800. He married Sarah Worthington. Their children:—

Col. Ely rendered valuable services in the army of the Revolution, and was a warm friend of Washington. The following is quoted from the Ely Re-Union Pamphlet:

"'General Arnold's compliments wait on Col. Ely, asks the favor of his company to dine with him at his house to-day at two o'clock. Thursday morning at eight o'clock.'

"The month and year are not given, but of one thing we may be sure, it was before he betrayed the fortress.

"Mrs. Adelaide Ely Lampman well remembers hearing her grandfather, Dr. John Ely of Coxsackie, describe the visits of Generals Washington and Lafayette to his father's (Col. Ely's) house in Saybrook.

"The facts of his military services remain in the archives of the nation, reported by a committee on revolutionary claims.

"We know that scientific tastes, and a passion for alleviating suffering, led him to espouse the medical profession with enthusiasm. In it he rose rapidly to eminence. He became especially prominent for success in treating small-pox.

"He purchased an island which lies off the shore of Westport, and there erected regular hospitals for the management of the disease by inoculation.

"Those were the days of early marriages. At twenty he became the husband of Sarah Worthington, one of the celebrated beauties of Connecticut. Mrs. A. E. Lampman has a very interesting pocketbook embroidered upon silk canvas by this beautiful Sarah Worthington, probably before her marriage. The Worthington coat of arms is exquisitely wrought in silks of the true heraldic colors. Above the crest is worked in letters, still distinct, 'Sarah Worthington.' Beneath the shield, 'By the name of Worthington.'

"In 1775 he was the father of seven children, the most eminent physician in the county, and wealth flowed in abundantly. There was every enticement to hold him in his elegant, prosperous and happy home. But with patriotic ardor he promptly left all to aid the Revolution. He was then thirty-eight years old. He first mustered and commanded a militia company. The next year he united the duties of major, physician and surgeon at New London. Small-pox breaking out in the northern army, he went thither, and by his skill arrested its progress. The next year, with the rank of colonel, he commanded at Fort Trumbull over a regiment he had raised by his own exertions and equipped with his own money. After supplying perfectly the needs of his soldiers, the remainder of the money in gold and silver, tied in a silk handkerchief, he brought and poured into his wife's lap, saying: 'Here, Sarah, is all that is left of the Griswold farm.' She, like a true mother of the Revolution, replied with a smile, 'It is the price of Liberty.'

"In the winter, Col. Ely made the attempt to cross the Sound, and effect a landing on Long Island with his regiment. But it so happened that Col. Ely's boat was captured by the British and he was carried to Flatbush, where there were several hundred American officers, also prisoners. Sickness was raging among them. From the day of his captivity he threw the whole ardor of his nature, all the skill of his profession, into the unwearied nursing of these suffering patriots. The winter was severe, and the sick scattered over a distance of twenty miles. He made his patient round on foot, through the snow, until compelled by exhaustion to go on horseback. For the hire of his horse he was charged enormously, he paying from his own purse the expense, as also for medicines, at the same extortionate rates.

"His son, Worthington Ely, was then a student in Yale College, afterwards Dr. Worthington Ely. He determined to effect the rescue of his father. Some friends united with him in manning a vessel, and with the utmost daring they captured a British force, which entitled them to the exchange of Col. Ely. Even then his release did not come. The sick prisoners, with the selfishness of invalids, absorbed in their own sensations, sent a deputation to petition Congress that Col. Ely might not be exchanged, but might remain and minister to them. And so this strong hearted man stifled his yearning for his lonely wife, for his brave eldest son, who purchased his ransom at the risk of his own life, for his young children growing out of his knowledge, and remained three years longer the Good Samaritan of the Continental prisoners. No Jesuit missionary on the frontier ever made greater sacrifices than this martyr-patriot, in his zeal for country and humanity.

"Dr. John Ely of Coxsackie (son of Col. John Ely), was most eminent in this State. So long as 'The New York College of Physicians and Surgeons' remains a corporation, will his name stand as its most influential founder.

"Among those most eminent among his descendants were the brothers, Charles A. and S. G. Goodrich. The first and elder was distinguished in pulpit eloquence, served the State as Senator, and his three United States histories have gone through hundreds of editions. The younger, Peter Parley, is a household name. As story teller, as poet, as historian, as Senator, as Consul at Paris, he adorned whatever he touched. Nor have the daughters been without gifts. Perhaps the queenly Mrs. Wolcott of Litchfield, inherited most remarkably the disinterestedness of her grandsire; while her sister, Mrs. Whittlesey, drew from him her superior powers of conversation and broad sympathetic nature. These two shall shine as the stars forever, for by their earnest, unselfish labors they turned many to righteousness.

"His third daughter, Elizabeth Ely Goodrich, lived to see thirty of her own grandchildren. Perhaps Mrs. Sophia Goodrich Ashton, daughter of Rev. Charles A. Goodrich, led this band in richness of character. She was a deep scholar and a ready writer. Her 'Women of the Bible' is an authority in religious biography. Her life was transfigured by a faith that made Heaven just as real as Earth, and her home was a centre that drew thither friendship of the richest minds. All her gifts were consecrated, and her exquisitely beautiful hands were diligent in dispensing help, not less to orphan children than to her own.

"A few months younger was her cousin, Mary E. Smith, wife of Hon. J. J. Monell, of Newburgh. She represented in large degree the beauty and genius of her mother, Mary Ann Wolcott Goodrich Smith. Her early death removed a star from a brilliant social constellation. Her poetic gift was most delicate, and responded whenever her taste was pleased, or her heart touched."

Mrs. Emeline Sherman Smith, granddaughter of Dr. Worthington Ely, sent a poem to the Ely Reunion, which appears on page 76 of the Ely Pamphlet.

On Saturday, July 6, 1776, the Council of Safety met and issued instructions to Doctor John Ely to visit the Army at the northward, infected with small pox, etc., as follows, viz.:

By the Governor and Council of Safety of the Colony of Connecticut, Resolved that

Whereas, Two battalions are raising in this Colony to reinforce the Northern Army in pursuance of the recommendation of the Continental Congress, and as very few of the people of this Colony have passed through the small pox now prevalent in that Army, recruiting is likely to be greatly hindered, etc., etc.,

This Board are of the opinion, therefore, that it is highly proper to remove that impediment as far and as soon as possible; and do, therefore, as an expedient for that purpose, appoint, empower, and direct Major John Ely, physician and surgeon, and a gentleman who has had great experience in that disease, to repair forthwith to the army in the Northern Department, wait on the General and proper officers, find and learn the true state of the army with respect to that infectious sickness, advise and consult with the General, etc., concerning the proper methods to cleanse and remove said infection from the army and prevent the further spreading thereof, etc., etc.,

The Assembly in May, 1777, appointed John Ely, Esq., to be Colonel of one of the battalions now to be raised for the service of this State (page 255), and (on page 256) it appears that he was assigned to the 2nd Battalion, of which he was commissioned as Colonel in June, 1777.

The Council voted in January, 1778, extra pay to the officers and men of Colonel John Ely's and Colonel Roger Enos' regiments, because of their long and arduous services outside of the State.—(Page 483.)

Sarah, wife of James Abbott of Lebanon, memorialized the Assembly, stating that in May, 1777, the said James was appointed ensign in Col. Ely's Regiment for the defence of this State, that in the fall of 1777 the regiment was crossing the Sound on an expedition to Long Island, when it was captured by a British ship of war, that all were carried to New York, and there ever since detained as prisoners of war; and by reason of the detention of said James his wife has no means of support. To station the remainder of the Regiment at Fort Trumbull and thereabouts.

The following from the pages of the Hall Genealogy (Part I.) is not without interest:—

"Richard Mather, who married Deborah Ely (155), was son of Samuel Mather, born 1684, died at Lyme 1725.

"In 1712, Samuel Mather married Deborah Champion of Lyme. She was the daughter of Thomas Champion and his wife Hannah Brockway. The parents of Thomas Champion were Henry and Sarah Champion of Saybrook. Samuel Mather was the son of Richard Mather of Dorchester, who was born 1653, and married in 1680 Elizabeth Wise, daughter of Joseph Wise and his wife Mary Thompson of Roxbury.

"The father of Richard Mather was Timothy Mather of Dorchester, born in England in 1628, and who died in 1684. In 1650 Timothy Mather married Katherine Atherton, eldest daughter of Major-Gen. Humphrey Atherton.

"General Atherton came from Preston, Lancashire, to Dorchester in 1636. He was Captain of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery in 1650; Selectman and Representative nine years from 1638; an Assistant in 1657, and until his death.

In 1656 he succeeded General Sedgwick as Major General. He died September 16, 1661. Died by "a judgment of God" in being thrown from his horse on return from a review on Boston Common.

"Timothy Mather, who married Catherine Atherton, was a brother of Increase, who was born in Dorchester in 1639. Increase Mather married Martha, daughter of Rev. John Cotton. Increase was a graduate of Harvard College, and his son, Rev. Cotton Mather, who married the daughter of Colonel John Phillips of Charlestown was the famous preacher of his time.

"The Honorable J. P. C. Mather of New London was also descended from this branch of the Mathers.

"From Timothy Mather and his wife, Catherine Atherton, through Richard and Deborah (Ely) Mather and their son, Captain Sylvester (1559), who married Elizabeth Waite, descend the families of Ely and Mather of Binghamton, N. Y., and also the family of Professor R. H. Mather of Amherst, Mass."

The Hyde Genealogy confirms our record, and states

There are five generations of descendants of Joseph and Anna Booth Mather published in the Mather genealogy by Horace E. Mather, of Hartford, Conn. This work can be seen in the largest libraries of New York, Boston, Albany, Philadelphia and Chicago, as well as the smaller cities. The British Museum of London and the Bodleian Library of Oxford have copies of it. The book of 540 pages has thirteen generations in some of the lines from the grandfather of Rev. Richard Mather. RELICT OF who died July 28, 1838,

MAJOR MARSH ELY,

Aged 71.

In May, 1767, Samuel Ely and others, owners of land adjoining Eight Mile River in Lyme, petitioned the Assembly for the repeal of the law forbidding the use of the seine in taking fish, etc. Vol. 12, Pub. Rec. of Conn., page 584.

In Oct., 1755 (Vol. 10, page 438), Samuel Ely was appointed by the Assembly, in company with Zebulon Butler, administrator of John Butler, dec'd of Lyme, to sell real estate belonging to the said deceased to the amount of £1,935, to pay the deceased's debts.

In Jany., 1756, Vol. X, page 455, Samuel Ely was appointed to act with Ezra and Richard Brockway, administrators of Richard Brockway, 2nd, late of Lyme, to sell lands belonging to the estate, to the amount of £2,483 11s. 6d., and to pay the just debts of said deceased. Page 580: In Oct., 1756, the Assembly granted Samuel Ely and Zebulon Butler power to sell £520 19s. 5d. more in value of said lands of John Butler of Lyme, deceased, to pay remaining debts of said estate.

Plymouth Colony Records, Vol. X., 1653-1679, page 390: From the Files, War, Vol. I., Doc. 138:

The Records of the Governor and Council met at Boston, August 30, 1678, state that some of the Maquas in June last at Maguncog not far from Natick killed three and carried away captive twenty-four of our friendly Indians into their country without the least known provocation; that the Council commissioned Samuel Ely and Benjamin Wayte to repair to the Maquas sachems and demand the reason for their action and the delivery of the captives, and that the said Commissioners have not been able to obtain any satisfaction from the said Sachems.

In view of these facts, Sir Edmund Andros, Governor of New York, was communicated with and measures concerted to repress the Maquas and to obtain the release of their captives.

The Public Records of Connecticut, 1772-75, pages 8, 74, 289, 419 and 577, mention the appointment of Samuel Ely as Justice in May, 1768. Also in May, 1769, 1770, 1771, 1772 and 1773.

Vol. I. states that Samuel Ely was the Deputy representing the town of Lyme at the General Assembly at Hartford, May, 1777 (p. 220).

New Haven, October, 1777 (p. 409).
Hartford, October, 1777 (p. 411).

The powder horn of the worthy Major hangs in the library of Professor Eaton at Yale. It is a plain affair, destitute of carving or device, but it holds a good deal of powder.

Lois, who married, first, Captain Ezra Selden, who was her third cousin, oldest son of Ezra Selden and Elizabeth Rogers; and second, Rev. Ezra Halleck, is buried at Mattituck, Long Island.

FOURTH GENERATION.

The Hyde Genealogy contains the following account of Samuel Ely:—

Samuel Ely (461), born at Saybrook, Conn., the only son of Samuel Ely and Jane Lord (67) of Lyme, was a grandson of Elizabeth Hyde (9) of the third generation. He married 20 May, 1739, Hannah Marsh. They settled at Lyme, where he was a justice of the peace and where they both probably died.

Their children were:

1955. Samuel C., b. 6 Nov., 1740, at Lyme. He graduated at Yale, 1764, and was a Congregational clergyman. He m. ——— Billings and preached at Somers, and had two children.

The History of Massachusetts, by J. S. Barry, page 219, states that in Shay's Rebellion, in 1786, the Reverend Samuel Ely of Somers, Conn., made himself prominent by being a ringleader of the malcontents.

Mr. Ely interfered with the officers at Northampton and was arrested. A rescue was attempted by the insurgents and was successful, but three of Ely's followers were taken.

A riot followed at Hatfield, where the prisoners had been taken, and the militia were called out, but to avoid bloodshed the Governor of the jail gave up his prisoners on an agreement that Ely would surrender himself for trial when wanted. Mr. Ely was, however, subsequently exonerated.

212. Elizabeth Ely, born at Saybrook, Conn., 1715, was the only daughter of Samuel Ely and Jane Lord, and was a granddaughter of Elizabeth Hyde of the third generation.

She married, Oct. 7, 1735, Captain Elisha Sheldon, born in 1709, who was Assistant of the Colony from 1762 until his death. He was the youngest son of Thomas Sheldon and Mary Hinsdale of Northampton. He graduated at Yale in 1730. His father, Thomas Sheldon, born in 1661, was the third son of Isaac Sheldon, of Windsor, Conn., born in 1629, married 1653, and Mary Woodford, of Hartford, daughter of Thomas Woodford and Mary Blott, and grandson of Isaac Sheldon, of Dorchester, Mass.

He settled at Roxbury, and is enumerated as "Freeman," March 4, 1635. He married in Roxbury, Mary, a daughter of Robert Blott, of Charlestown, in 1634, who came to America in 1632, and may have been a fellow passenger with Thomas Woodford. Mr. Blott's wife was Susannah ————, who died Jany. 2, 1660. He died in 1665.

Elisha Sheldon was an efficient officer of the Revolution. He served in various capacities, and was for gallant and meritorious services promoted to be Colonel of the 2nd Regiment Continental Light Dragoons in 1776.

Ruth Sheldon, born in 1663, sister of Thomas, married Joseph Wright, who died in 1697, and was the ancestress of Gov. Silas Wright of Canton, N. Y., the distinguished U. S. Senator.

Capt. Elisha Sheldon and Elizabeth Ely (462) are mentioned in the Hyde Genealogy. It is there stated that > They settled at Lyme and removed from there to Litchfield, Conn., where he d. 1 Sept., 1779. She survived him and d. in 1790.

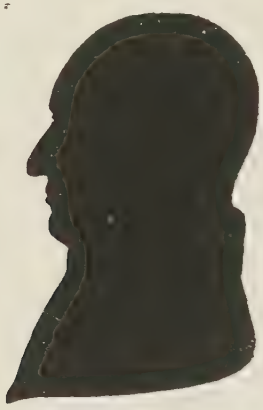
In Oct., 1762, Ezra Ely was commissioned Captain of the same company.—Vol. XII., page 85.

Appleton's New American Biography contains an account of Captain Ezra Ely.

245. Richard Ely, son of Deacon Richard Ely and Phebe Hubbard, was born Sept. 30, 1733. He was the fourth member of the family in America to bear the name of Richard Ely.

Mr. Ely dedicated his life to the ministry. His first charge was in North Bristol, Conn. (Bristol is now known as Madison.) Later he was for many years minister of the Second Society of Saybrook, long known by its Indian name "Pettipang," now Centre Brook, and was afterwards pastor of the church in Saybrook. Rev. Richard Ely was a graduate of Yale, 1754, and his diploma is still preserved in the family.



REV, RICHARD ELY.

On November 23, 1757, Mr. Ely married Miss Jerusha Sheldon, who was the daughter of Benjamin Sheldon of Northampton, Mass., and his wife, Mary Strong. This is the point of connection between the Ely family and the descendants of Ruling Elder John Strong, of the 1st Congregational Church of Northampton, who landed at Hull, Mass., May 30, 1630. See "Descendants of Elder John Strong," by Rev. Benjamin W. Dwight, Clinton, Oneida Co., N. Y.

Miss Sheldon was born February 28, 1737, and died Nov. 26, 1797.

Mr. Ely departed this life at the age of 80 years, 10 months, and 7 days, Aug. 23, 1814. He was for 50 years pastor of the church at Saybrook.

The Strong family came from the County of Shropshire, England. The first of the name of whom we have any record removed in 1545 to Caernarvon in Wales. His son was Richard Strong, born in Caernarvon in 1561, removed to Taunton, Somersetshire, England, in 1590, and resided there until his death in 1613.

Richard Strong's son, John, was born in Taunton, England, in 1606. He sailed from Plymouth for America, March 20 1630, landed at Hull, Mass., May 30, 1630, married, Dec., 1630, Abigail Ford, of Dorchester, Mass., she being his second wife. She was born 1608, and died July 6, 1688. Elder John Strong died April 14, 1699, aged 98, had 18 children, of whom 15 had families, mostly large, and descendants are said to number 22,000. John Strong was for years Ruling Elder of First Congregational Church, Northampton, Mass.

We take from the Mail and Express of Dec. 19, 1896, some further information as to Elder John Strong and his wife, Abigail Ford. Thomas Ford was the father of Abigail (date of birth unknown), first wife unknown; second wife (date of marriage unknown), Mrs. Ann Scott, widow of Thomas Scott. Thomas Ford died 1676. He had four daughters, if not more; what sons, if any, does not appear. The daughters were:

I. Joanna, who married November 6, 1633, Captain Roger Clapp, of Dorchester, Mass.

II. Abigail, who married Elder John Strong.

III. Hepzibah, married Richard Lyman, of Northampton, Mass.

IV. Daughter, name unknown; married Major Aaron Cook.

Elder John Strong, born 1605, Taunton, Eng.; first wife's name unknown; came with him from England in 1630, and she and an infant child died in Dorchester, Mass., in 1630-31; hence all the children of John Strong, except John, born in England, in 1626, were by second wife. He married second Abigail Ford, born in England; died in Northampton, Mass., July 6, 1688. He died April 14, 1699, Northampton, Mass. For authority and further details see Strong Family History. C. D. P.

Ancient Windsor, Vol. II., p. 270. Thomas Ford, one of the original company of the Mary and John, of Dorchester, Mass., 1630; freeman at Dorchester, 1631; memb. of orig. Dorch. church (O. C. R.); came to Windsor (see pp. 156, 549, Vol. 1); deputy to Conn. Gen'l Ct., 1637, '38, '39, '40; gr. juror, 1643; juror, 1644; rem. to Northampton, 1659; a man of good estate and great energy. He was a devoted friend to the regicides, Goffe and Whalley. He mar. (1) ———, who was adm. to the church in Windsor, '30-'60 (O. C. R.). Their fourth child, Abigail, married, 1640, Elder John Strong.

Thomas Ford married (2) Mrs. Ann (widow of Thomas) Scott.

He died November 28, 1676. His first wife died 1643.

Ebenezer Strong, son of Elder John, was born 1643, died Feb. 11, 1729, married Oct. 14, 1688, Hanah Clapp of Dorchester, born 1646.

Their son, Ebenezer Strong, born Aug. 2, 1671, died Nov. 12, 1729, married Oct. 25, 1695, Mary Holton, of Northampton, who was born July 22, 1680, and died Dec. 8, 1705.

Mary Strong, their daughter, born Jany. 16, 1701, died May 26, 1770, married June 12, 1723, Benjamin Sheldon of Northampton, Mass., who was born 1697, and who died Aug. 28 1773.

Their daughter, Jerusha Sheldon, born Feby. 28, 1737, died in 1797, married Nov. 23, 1757, Rev. Richard Ely (245), who was born Sept. 30, 1733, and died Aug. 23, 1814.

It was a son of this devout Rev. Richard Ely, of Saybrook, who projected and built the two first steamboats that plied between New York and the Connecticut river. The same Ely, with other philanthropic men, procured from Congress, through Henry Clay, the grant of lands in Alabama which were the endowment of that beneficent institution, the Hartford Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb.

The Ely Re-Union Pamphlet says that Rev. Richard Ely removed to Pettipang (now Centre Brook), and was the honored pastor of the Congregational Society in that place, until years and infirmities induced him to accept Rev. Aaron Hovey, his son-in-law, as a colleague. Having lost his wife, he concluded to remove to Chester to enjoy the society of his son, Richard Ely, M. D., and his children. After he was eighty years old he rode from Saybrook to Hartford to visit his son William, on horseback, and returned in the same manner, a distance of fifty miles each way.

At his request, in 1813, his five brothers visited him, all of whom had passed their three score and ten, except the youngest, Dr. David Ely, of Huntington, who preached a sermon upon the occasion. They were our father's guests, and though but children, we never lost the recollection of the pleasure of this family re-union which brought children with their fathers; it is from this recollection, perhaps, that we have been induced to desire another on a larger scale. The following year was one of great feebleness, but of cheerful resignation, and unwavering trust and confidence in his Redeemer, "knowing that he was able to keep that he had committed to Him."

We saw him sink, we saw him die,
With his own hand close either eye;
Shutting the things of earth from sight,
When passing into heavenly light.
Shade of our grandsire, thou art dear,
Say is thy spirit present here?

It should be understood—at least by the Ely family—that a sermon of Rev. Richard Ely, of Saybrook, with other papers and memorials of him, were collected and prepared for insertion in Rev. Dr. Sprague's "Annals of the American Pulpit."

These were sent by mail, lost in transmission, and never reached his hands. Most of the papers could not be replaced, nor was their loss known till too late for publication.

It is deeply to be regretted that this should have caused the omission of a notice of this able man and prominent clergyman in the volumes of Dr. Sprague.

Copy of an Original Manuscript in the possession of Miss C. C. Ely, Binghamton, N. Y., called "The Solemn Act and Covenant of Richard Ely":

Eternal and ever blessed God! I desire to present myself before Thee with the deepest Humiliation and abasement of Soul; and to be sensible of my unworthiness who am such a sinful worm, to appear before the Holy Majesty of Heaven and Earth, Ye King of Kings and Lord of Lords, at any time and manner, but more especially upon such an occasion as this even to enter into a COVENANT Transaction with Thee. But the Scheme and Plan is thine own and of thine infinite Mercy and Condescension in and by thy son Jesus Christ. And I trust it is by thy Grace I am inclined to accept it. I come therefore and acknowledge myself to have been an extreme and more than common offender even from my youth up, and hope sensible of my own Inability to save myself, and with the humble Publican praying God be merciful to me a Sinner! (in and thro' Christ)! I come invited by him and Wholly trusting in his Righteousness; intreating ye for his sake thou wilt be merciful to my unrighteousness, and wilt no more remember my sins against me. Receive I intreat thee, thy devoted Creature who is now (I hope) convinced of thy Right to him and desires nothing so much as to be thine!

This day I desire with the utmost solemnity to surrender myself to Thee. I renounce all former Lords that have had Dominion over me. I consecrate to Thee all that I am and all that I have Both Soul and Body, my worldly Possessions, my Time, my Influence over others and to be all used for thy Glory, and resolutely employed in thy service and obedience to thy commands as long as thou continuest me in Life; with an ardent desire to continue thine, thro' all the endless Ages of Eternity! desiring ever to hold myself in an attentive posture to observe the first Intimations of thy will, and ready to spring forward with becoming zeal and joy to the immediate execution of it. To thy direction also, I resign myself and all I have to be disposed of by Thee in such a Manner, as thou (who acts by infinite Wisdom) shall see best. To Thee I leave the management of all Events, and desire to say, and think I can say without Reserve, Thy will be done and not mine; rejoicing with a Loyal Heart in Thine unlimited Government as what ought to be the Delight of the whole Rational Creation.

Use me O Lord as an instrument of thy service! Number me among thy People! Let me be washed in the Blood of Christ, thy dear Son! Let me be clothed with his Righteousness! Let me be sanctified in thy Spirit! Transform me more and more into thine Image! Impart to me thro' Him all needful Influences of thy purifying, cheering and comforting spirit! And let my Life be spent under thy Influences and in the Light of thy gracious countenance as my Father and my God! And let me when tempted to Evil remember that I have in this renounced my former Lords! These things I do humbly Promise and desire not in my own strength, but by and thro' the assistance of his Spirit whom

I have this Day taken to be my God. Earnestly desiring that I may never be left to my own strength and that I may be strengthened against every Temptation and carry the cross of Christ whithersoever he shall call me, with cheerfulness and resolution. And that when the hour of Death comes I may remember this thy COVENANT well ordered in all things and sure and that hereby looking upon God as Mine thro' Christ though every other Hope and Enjoyment is perishing I may have Joy and Comfort in that! And O my Heavenly Father do thou look Down upon thy languishing dying child, with pity, and remember it also! Put strength and confidence into my departing spirit! and receive it to the Abodes of them that sleep in Jesus, peacefully and joyfully to wait the accomplishment of thy Great Promise to all thy People, even that of a glorious Resurrection of Eternal Happiness in Thine Heavenly Presence! And if any surviving Friend or Person should, when I am in the Dust, meet with this memorial of my Solemn Transaction with thee, may he make the Engagement his own; and do Thou graciously admit him or her to partake in all the Blessings of THY COVENANT, thro' Jesus the Great Mediator of it; to whom with Thee, O Father, and thy Holy Spirit, be everlasting Praises ascribed by all the Multitude that are thus saved by thee and by all the other celestial spirits. A.M.E.N.

The above solemn Act was done this 28th day of August, A. D. 1755, in Northampton, which day was a day of provincial fasting, occasioned by the defeat of Genl. Braddock. And it is no sudden or rash thing, but long premeditated.

From the Hyde Genealogy we learn the following particulars as to the parents of Judge Matthew Griswold, who married Lydia Ely:

V. Gov. Matthew Griswold (490), born at Lyme, Conn., 25 March, 1714, the eldest son of John Griswold (73) and Hannah Lee of Lyme, was a grandson of Matthew Griswold and Phebe Hyde (10) of the third generation. He m. 11 Nov., 1743, his second cousin, Ursula Wolcott, b. 30 Oct., 1724, daughter of Gov. Roger Wolcott and Sarah Drake of Windsor. The father, brother, husband, son and the nephew of this Ursula Wolcott, were governors of the State of Connecticut. Her father was a major general and was the second in command at the siege and capture of Louisburgh. He was the youngest son of John Wolcott, b. in 1625 at Tolland in Somersetshire, who was the youngest son of Henry Wolcott and Elizabeth Sanders of Tolland, and came to New England, with his parents, in 1630. The mother of Gov. Roger Wolcott was Martha Pitkin, also born in England, a lady of great talents as well as beauty.

The following article, taken from the Genealogical Department of the Mail and Express of Jan. 28, 1899, gives some additional details as to the Wolcott ancestry:

Henry Wolcott, the emigrant, and wife, Matilda Cromwell; children were born in England. Both he and his wife died 1655. Had son Henry Wolcott 2d; married November 8, 1641, Sarah Newbury, daughter of Thomas Newbury and wife Jane. After the death of a brother, Christopher, he, Henry, had his father's homestead. He died 1680.

Christopher had no family and died 1662. His brother Simon had his place. Simon married first, a daughter of Aaron Cooke in 1657; [Joanna Cooke, who married, February 22, 1864, Samuel Porter, Jr., was not the daughter of Capt. Aaron Cooke (1), but probably the daughter of his son Aaron (2), whose daughter Joanna (3), was born July 10, 1667. Joanna (2), daughter of Aaron (1), was born in 1638, and married Simon, son of Henry and Elizabeth Wolcott.—C. H. W.—Extract from Mail and Express, Feb. 6, 1897]; Simon married second, Martha Pitkin, in 1661; had three sons and three daughters. Simon removed to Simsbury previous to King Philip's War. Then removed to the east side of the Great River.

George removed to Wethersfield.

Henry Wolcott 3d, son of Henry 2d, married October 12, 1664, Abiah Goffe, daughter of Edward Goffe, Esq., Cambridge. She was born April 1, 1647; died January 18, 1718; know of five children.

Elizabeth, born August 27, 1665, married January 5, 1686, Hon. Col. Mathew Allyn, Judge of the Supreme Court, Connecticut.

Elizabeth Wolcott Allyn had son, Capt. Peletiah Allyn, who married Mary Stoughton, daughter of Capt. Thomas Stoughton and his wife, Dorothy Talcott.

Further information from the Mail and Express, Feb. 11, 1899, is also of interest.

Sarah Newberry married, November 18, 1641, Henry (2) Wolcott; was a daughter of Thomas and Jane Newberry.

"Thomas was one of the earliest settlers and largest landed proprietors of Dorchester, Mass. In 1634 he became Freeman and Selectman. In 1635 he was appointed to oversee works at the Capitol; was early engaged in Connecticut enterprise; sold his Dorchester property and prepared to remove to Windsor, but his death in December, 1635, or January, 1636, prevented. His widow and children removed some time before 1639-40. The children of Mr. Thomas Newberry, being well descended, possessed of ample means and becoming connected by marriage with some of the first families of Windsor, naturally assumed an honorably prominent position in the Connecticut colony."—From Stiles's "Windsor."

"Henry (1) Wolcott, who emigrated from England was the second son of John Wolcott, of Tolland, in Somersetshire, England, and was baptized in the adjoining parish of Lydiard, St. Lawrence, December 6, 1578. He married, January 19, 1606, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Saunders, of Lydiard, St. Lawrence. She was baptized December 20, 1584. He came to New England about the year 1628, and in the year 1630 brought over his family to avoid the persecutions of those times against Dissenters. He was not an obscure adventurer, but held a fair position among the gentry of England, possessing an estate that yielded him a fine income. He was Freeman in Boston October 19, 1630. He removed to Windsor, and in 1637 was a member of the first Legislature of Connecticut. He was probably, after the pastor, the most distinguished man in Windsor. He died May 30, 1655. His widow died July 7, 1655."—From "Memorial of Henry Wolcott," by S. Wolcott, in which can be found a long account of Henry Wolcott and his descendants. It is at the Lenox Library. A. F.

Also in the issue of the Mail and Express of Jany. 2, 1897, a correspondent gives some facts as to the descendants of Henry Wolcott.

Mrs. Julia Perkins Ballard, née Pratt, No. 24256, the granddaughter of Hepzibah Ely, 242, writes that her grandmother Hepzibah, was born at Lyme, Conn., June 6 1745. Her father, Deacon Richard Ely, was a son of Richard Ely second, whose father, Richard, came from England to Lyme, the first of that name in this country.

Hepzibah was married May 13th, 1771, to John Pratt, of Colchester, Conn., who was born Dec. 14, 1740. His father was Daniel Pratt, born May 26th, 1710, and his grandfather was Joseph Pratt, born March 6, 1671, son of John Pratt, of Hartford, who came with his father, John Pratt, from England to Cambridge, Mass., and was a member of Rev. Thomas Hooker's church, and one of the company of about one hundred who, with their pastor, Mr. Hooker, walked from Cambridge to Hartford and laid the foundations of that city, one of whose streets still bears his name. He was for several years a representative in the First General Court of Hartford, and died there July 15, 1655.

In the spring of 1796, Mr. Pratt and his family left New England and went West. On the morning of June 16, 1796, the start was made, and the father read from the 14th chapter of John, until he came to the verse, "Arise, and let us go hence." There the book was closed, and the family left the house. The large front yard was well filled with friends and neighbors who had come to say what proved to be a last farewell.

The family reached Marietta, Ohio, about the middle of August, all in good health and spirits, but very soon their trials began. John, the eldest son, was taken sick with a fever which prevailed in the region, and in two weeks was laid in his grave. Anna, a sister of eighteen, was also very ill, and although her life was spared, she lived many years a confirmed invalid, being almost helpless. In the spring of 1797, as the land they had purchased of one thousand acres proved to be a desolate wilderness where it seemed impossible to go with a family, they moved to Vienna, a town on the Virginia shore, eight or ten miles below Marietta, where were some friends already settled from the East. Here they lived several years, cultivating rented ground, but at length having made some improvement on their own land (twelve miles from Athens, Ohio), and built a small house, they moved there in 1804.

David (the father of the writer of this sketch) was brave and ambititious. At one time, in clearing some ground, he worked alone for a fortnight, with only his dog and gun for company and saw but one human face during that time. But obliged to give up severe labor, he went, a stranger, to Chillicothe, Ohio, sixty miles from his home, reaching there on Saturday night at dusk. He enquired for the house of the Rev. Robert G. Wilson, the Presbyterian minister. He was kindly received, and made known his wish to obtain a school. In this he was promptly aided by the clergyman, and became very successful as a teacher, for four years, carrying home his earnings at the close of each term. His sister, Hepzibah, had obtained a school in Marietta, Ohio. At length, his father's health failing, it was necessary that he should give up his school and studies to remain at home. He succeeded in exchanging part of the land for a smaller farm near Athens, where, for the first time, the family enjoyed the privilege of regularly attending church and the children of attending school. The Rev. Jacob Lindley (father of Rev. Daniel Lindley, of the African mission), was then pastor of the church at Athens, and preceptor of the academy there. Through his kindness, David became an instructor there for several years, and has been spoken of with tender affection to the writer, by the returned missionary as his "earliest teacher."

In 1814 David was married to Julia Perkins, daughter of Dr. Eliphaz Perkins, from Connecticut. Dr. Perkins was born at Norwich, educated at Yale, married a sister of Dr. Ebenezer Fitch, first president of Williams College, and after living some years in Vergennes, Vt., removed with his family in 1799 to Marietta, Ohio.

The next year David's mother and his sister Phebe fell victims to a disease then prevailing through the Western country, and known as "the cold plague," but which was probably the same as cholera. The last words of his mother, as the writer remembers to have heard from her father, were, "Sing praises to God, sing praises,"—the faith that sustained under the trials of life brightening its triumphant close.

David and his wife then took charge of the family. Mr. John Pratt died, after three years of suffering, with palsy, a peaceful and happy death, June 5, 1817. When asked by a friend who witnessed these years of uncomplaining suffering if he did not long for release, his answer was, "The Lord's will be done; His time is the best time, and I am willing to wait for that." (The above account concerning Hepzibah Ely and her family is quoted from the Ely Reunion Pamphlet.)

243. David Ely, Lyme, Conn., b. 1749, d. 1816, son of Richard Ely and Phebe Hubbard, m. 1777, Hepsa Mills, Huntington, Conn., who was b. 1755, d. 1803, dau. of Elisha Mills and Mary DeForrest; m. 2nd Anna Tomlinson Curtis, Huntington, Conn., who was b. 1807, and d. 1849. Their children:—

1. Hepsa, b. Oct. 23, 1778, d. 1864, m. Sep. 17, 1801, Gold S. Silliman; died Jan. 22, 1864.
2. David, b. 1780, d. 1857, m. 1811, Priscilla Sturges Fairfield.
3. Elisha, b. 1782, d. 1846, m. 1815, Eloise Curtis.
4. Mary, b. 1785, d. 1871, m. John McGregor.
5. Isaac Mills, b. 1787, d. 1845.

Dr. Ely was zealous alike in his great mission and in the cause of his country. During the Revolutionary War there were many tories in his neighborhood, and he was threatened "that when the rebellion was put down he should be hung on an oak tree," which long flourished on the public square and near the meeting-house in which he preached. ("Annals of the American Pulpit," Vol. 2, p. 4.)

Dr. Ely married Miss Hepsa Mills, daughter of Elisha Mills, Esq., and a granddaughter of his colleague the Rev. Jedediah Mills. Mrs. Silliman, who was the eldest child of the marriage, was born in Huntington, October 23d, 1778, was married to Gold S. Silliman, Esq., September 17th, 1801, and died at Brooklyn, N. Y., 22d January, 1864, in the 86th year of her age.

Rev. David Ely, D. D., was born at Lyme, July 7, 1749, and was graduated at Yale College in 1769. He was licensed to preach the Gospel in October, 1771, and was ordained colleague pastor with Rev. Jedidiah Mills on Oct. 27, 1773, in Hungtington. He died Feby. 16, 1816, in the 77th year of his age and the 43rd of his ministry.

Rev. Thos. F. Davis, successor to Dr. Ely in the Huntington parish, has written a sketch of the Doctor.

Settled in the ministry just before the War of the Revolution, Dr. Ely participated in the anxieties and sacrifices of that momentous occasion. In the town, and in those adjoining, were many adherents of the British Crown. By one of these a threat was made that, when the rebellion was put down, the Doctor should be hung on an oak tree standing on the public square, near the meeting-house in which he preached.

Dr. Ely was eminently a prudent man. It being reported in a time of great political excitement that he had preached on political subjects in an adjoining parish, a visit was made to that place with the enquiry:

"Did Dr. Ely preach politics here?"

"Yes."

"What did he say?"

"Well, sir, if he did not preach politics, he prayed politics."

"What did he say?"

"'Say!' he said, 'though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not go unpunished.'"

Dr. Ely married Hepsa, daughter of Elisha Mills. They had five children, three sons and two daughters. All the sons were graduated at Yale College.

Mrs. Ely died September 29, 1803, aged 49 years.—Hist. Stratford, p. 997.

MEMBER OF ASSEMBLY, 1836, PRESIDENT OF THE MEDICAL SOCIETY OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, 1840. STATE SENATE 1840–1843

3. Elvira, b. 1833, d. 1835.
4. Foster, b. 1836, m. 1873 Sarah Olive Ely (Brewster), (131,111).
5. Frederick Gustavus, b. 1838, m. 1867 Matilda Caroline Boyer.
6. Gertrude Sumner, b. 1844, m. 1870 Geo. Willard Knowlton.
7. Theodore Newel, b. 1846, m. 1874 Henrietta V. S. Brandes.

Rev. Dr. Foster Ely, Rector of Grace Church, Lockport, N. Y., said: My father was Adriel, Jr. (1315); grandfather, Adriel (131); great-great-grandfather, William, the son of that Richard who, as has been said, came from England about the year 1650, and is the patron saint of his lineal descendants. The children of grandfather Adriel are Horace (1311), Betsey (1312), Sumner (1313), William Stowe (1314), and Adriel, Jr. (1315). Each of these had offspring who survived them. Horace lived here, in Lyme, and married Sarah Rogers, by whom he had five children. They have all gone to their long home. The eldest was William Horace (13,135), the father of Sarah Olive and Theodore Rogers. The former, it was my good fortune to marry, and she is here to-day, not by courtesy, but by right.

Theodore was a brave and accomplished naval officer. He was one of the engineers engaged in laying the first submarine cable, thus helping to make a "whispering gallery" of the old Atlantic; he was chief engineer of a man-of-war on the Pacific Coast when disabled by a fatal illness. He died at the early age of twenty-five years. Betsey (1312), the only daughter of Adriel, married a descendant of Lord Sterling. Of his four children, two survive. One of them is the wife of Marcellus Massey, President of the Watertown, Rome and Ogdensburgh Railroad. The third child of Adriel was Sumner (1313). He was a graduate of Yale, a physician of distinguished ability and extensive practice, and a man splendidly endowed with graces of mind and heart. He was commanding in person and of winning manners. His popularity may be inferred from the honors awarded in the sphere of his profession and of politics. He served in the State Senate of New York several terms, and as Senator was wise and honest. Of the five children who survive him two are able physicians, and one, Sumner Stowe, is a well-known lawyer of Brooklyn. William Stowe (1314), the fourth child of Adriel, was highly respected in social and business circles for character, integrity and energy. Recently two of his sons, William A. and Charles N. died. The former was a clergyman of the Episcopal Church. He was a fine scholar, faithful pastor, and sincere Christian. The latter was a banker, whose name was a synonym for honesty, truth, and ability. I come now to my father, Adriel, Jr. (1315), the fifth and last child of Adriel, son of Richard. He married Evelina, daughter of Judge Jabez Foster and Hannah Hungerford, and had seven children, of which five live. He was in character, intellect and influence a strong and good man. He held many public and private offices of trust; was the soul of honor, the patron of whatever was good, and a charitable giver.

The following newspaper items would seem to refer to a son of Benjamin Perkins:

The marriage of Mrs. Frances Hildt, daughter of the late Addison Gardiner Jerome, to Mr. Benjamin Perkins, of this city, was very quietly celebrated on Tuesday in the Church of the Holy Communion, Sixth avenue and Twentieth street. There was no one present at the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. J. Townsend Cole, but the members of the two families. Mrs. Hildt was given away by her brother, Mr. E. M. Jerome. There was no reception after the ceremony. The bride's daughter, Miss Julia Hildt, whose engagement to Mr. Conrad Knott, son of Judge Knott, of Washington, D. WORTHINGTON ELY.

By Mrs. E. S. Smith.

Worthington Ely, eldest son of Colonel John Ely, of Revolutionary fame, was born in Saybrook, Conn. in the year 1759.

Of his boyhood and early youth we have, unfortunately, few records beyond those which tell briefly of his energy and success in study, and his honorable standing at Yale College, of which he was a graduate; but in his nineteenth year he comes before us like a hero of romance. At this time (about the close of the year 1777) his gallant father had been captured by the British, and was held as a prisoner of war; and this brave son, "together with a few other friends, fitted out a vessel at their own expense, and manned her for the purpose of surprising and capturing a British force, with which to effect the exchange of Colonel Ely." As the result of this expedition, with the events which followed, are all matters of history, it is not our province to enlarge upon them here.

When the war was ended, and Colonel Ely returned to his family it was to meet with many sad discouragements. But he bore them all bravely, and derived much comfort and consolation from seeing how well his noble son had managed during his long absence. This youth, now somewhat relieved from the many cares and duties which had devolved upon him, was free to pursue the study of his chosen profession—that of medicine.

At twenty-eight he married Prudence Bushnell, of Saybrook, with whom he lived very happily. As the fortune he would otherwise have inherited from his father had all been spent in the service of the country, he felt it was best to seek a larger field of practice. About the time he was meditating this change there came accounts of terrible ravages made by yellow fever in the South. His philanthropic nature was touched at once and he determined to devote his time and skill to the sufferers. Making arrangements for the comfort of his family during his absence, and taking with him his body-servant, a faithful colored man, he went to the district where the fever raged most virulently, and for weeks devoted himself night and day to the care of the sick. His humane mission was blest, for he performed many wonderful cures, and alleviated the sufferings of all who came under his care. But he was at last stricken down himself, and as his system was much enfeebled by want of sleep and over-exertion it was a long time before even so fine a constitution as his could throw off the disease. During the many weeks he lay ill his money was all spent for the medicines and restoratives he required, and before he could start for home he was compelled to part with his faithful servant. Thus he returned to his family a sick and impoverished man.

But the cheerful, brave spirit was unbroken, and as soon as he was strong enough he began to carry out his plan for a change of residence. And now he made what we must always consider the great mistake of his life. Instead of going to some city or large town, where he could have found a proper field for his professional skill, he settled in an obscure and lonely region in Albany County, in the township of Coeymans, about four miles west of the Hudson River.

Of course, in such a neighborhood, and with such a practice, his home was necessarily an humble one, but it was brightened by the smiles of a fond and faithful wife and enlivened by the blooming faces of his lovely children. The eldest of these, Charlotte, a girl of remarkable beauty and talent, was her father's chief assistant.

In his forty-fourth year he was attacked by a serious illness. Friends and neighbors called it a neglected cold, but he knew it was the premature wearing out of an organism that, under happier circumstances, might have lasted nearly a century.

His brother Edward, an eminent lawyer, living in Goshen, some sixty miles away, must be notified. There were matters of the gravest import to be arranged between them. He had in his possession title deeds which, if properly used, might in the future not only place his family above want, but give them abundant wealth. He must get word to him, but how? Mail communications in those days were so slow and uncertain. Some special messenger must be sent. His wife could not be spared from his bedside and from her little children. There was no one but Charlotte, the eldest daughter.

He called her to his bedside and gave her instructions. She was to saddle the old horse, and ride all the way to Goshen. She was to take some food for her solitary dinner on the road, a little money (not enough to tempt highway robbers, who thank Heaven! were not so numerous in those days as in ours), to pay for her night's lodging at a house on the way, which the sick man carefully described. The next morning she was to start on again over a road she could "not possibly miss." At least, so her father said, though doubtless the poor man had many sad misgivings and anxieties about her safety.

The brave little girl set off on her lonely journey and reached her destination in safety. Once at her uncle's house, her difficulties were at an end. There she was petted, caressed and cared for in the most loving manner. But she could only rest a very short time. She must hasten, with her uncle, back to her father. That was his last injunction.

They made the journey as rapidly as possible, but alas! not in time. A little while before they reached his bedside the sick man breathed his last.

FIFTH GENERATION.

Edward Ely, the beloved brother, remained some time with the bereaved family consoling them as best he could, and attending to all matters necessary for their aid and comfort. Afterwards he exerted his skill and legal knowledge in earnest endeavors to secure the property to which Dr. Ely was entitled; but some informality in the papers rendered all his efforts fruitless. He was forced to accept the sad certainty that his brother, despite his laborious life, had died a poor man.

The little heroine of our sketch became a celebrated beauty, and her four sisters were also women of remarkable personal attractions. They had not the great educational advantages of our day, but their fine natural talents, quick intelligence and keen powers of observation enabled them to drink in knowledge as flowers drink the sunshine and the dew. They all married well and reared large families of children, who inherit, in many respects, the fine traits of their grandfather.

BY AN OLD NEW YORKER.

A LONG-FORGOTTEN SOCIETY LEADER AND HER FIFTH AVENUE FARM.

Walking along Fifth avenue, lately, beyond the Manhattan Club, the writer thought with mingled satisfaction and sadness, of the wonderful changes a comparatively short time has brought about in that section of the city.

Fifty years ago everybody who was anybody in New York knew, and almost everybody who knew liked, the Coventry Waddells. Mr. Coventry Waddell occupied a peculiar semi-political position, and was in confidential relations with the State Department at Washington. He was a very wealthy man for his era—probably worth half a million of dollars—and spent his income liberally.

In his time there was no Central Park, and Fifth avenue beyond Twenty-third street was more or less, generally more, "the country." Mrs. Waddell took a liking to a tract of land extending along Fifth avenue, between Thirty-seventh and Thirty-eighth streets, and her husband bought the site for her, paying about a tithe of what the land is worth to-day.

There was a large apple-tree in full blossom at the date when Mr. Waddell completed the purchase, and, while he and the real estate agent arranged matters, Mrs. Waddell threw herself down on the luxuriant grass under the tree and partook with a keen relish of some solid refreshments, which she had brought along with her. There was a wheat field on the tract, and Mrs. Waddell mentally resolved to cultivate the wheat and to get a barrel of flour out of it. And she did get several barrels, and with her own fair hands baked loaves of bread from her Fifth avenue crop. The purchase completed, and the wheat field and the apple-tree retained, Mr. Waddell sent for his architects and erected on his land, or, rather, his wife's land, one of the very finest and handsomest and cosiest and most delightful family mansions ever built in this city. It was really more artistically picturesque than any residence on the avenue to-day. Its towers commanded an unrivalled view. The Waddell place was a genuine "fancy farm" on Fifth avenue. There is no spot to compare with it in this respect at present, more's the pity!

This reminds one of the fact that the old Goelet mansion, so long known as the "farm near Union Square," with its trees, and chickens, and cows, has forever disappeared. And alas! with these old places much of the old-fashioned and sincere hospitality has disappeared also. Mrs. Waddell was a Miss Southwick, daughter of Jonathan Southwick, of New York city, and a grand-daughter of Worthington Ely. One of her ancestors had been known as "The" Worthington, and was one of the belles of the period. She was "the toast" of three seasons. Among her descendants were a well-known writer of the Goodrich family, "Peter Parley," and a popular mayor of New York city, the Hon. Smith Ely.

The History of the City of New York, by Mrs. Martha J. Lamb and Mrs. Burton Harrison, says (page 757):

Coventry Waddell, son of Henry and Eliza Daubiny Waddell, married Charlotte Augusta daughter of Jonathan Southwick of New York City, and granddaughter of Worthington Ely, whose father, Dr. John Ely, married Sarah Worthington, a great beauty, and sister to the mother of Governor John Cotton Smith. The Worthingtons were descended from Hugh Worthington, who held the lordship of Worthington under Edward IV. in 1474. The Elys settled in Lyme, Conn., about 1660, and the family has since been one of influence, many of its branches being among the substantial citizens of New York, not least of whom is our recent Mayor, Smith Ely.

From the Mail and Express, Nov. 28, 1896:

"I am the direct descendant of Peter Bronck, the son of Jonas. I have in my possession the remnant of the original patent, and the old house at Coxsackie.

"I know the history of all the Broncks, from Peter down, but I know very little of Jonas, whose history I would like.

"Who was he, where did he come from, what was his business in New York, what his rank or official relation, if any, to New York? It was stated in an article in the 'Post' some years ago that he was one of the founders of New Amsterdam?

"What is the foundation for this statement?

"My great-grandmother was a Wolcott. She married a Lay, and lived in Westbrook, Conn. Her daughter, Abigail Lay, married Dr. John Ely, son of Col. John Ely, of Saybrook, Conn.

"This Abigail Lay Ely had brothers, Zena Wolcott Lay, Robert Wolcott Lay, Josiah Wolcott Lay. Her sisters were Desire and Loxea. What I want to know is what Wolcott line she was in, who was her father, grandfather, etc., and who was the Lay she married?" A. B. L.

Abraham P. Ely, Esq., Rochester, says: I can recount some incidents that took place in this famous old North Quarter Schoolhouse sixty years ago that will seem harsh to children in these days.

As I have observed, these fathers believed in the Bible, and they used the Rod. This district was not prolific in productions except of children. In this they excelled any in the county. We used to number ninety scholars, wet or dry, hot or cold. On pleasant days, when they dressed up all the little ones, we numbered one hundred and nine. Among these scholars some were men in size, and one weighed two hundred pounds. They were factious, disturbers of the school, not disposed to bow obedience to any but physical force. On one occasion they were about assaulting the teacher. My brother, Alfred, a very small boy, became frightened and ran for Mr. Erastus Selden, near by. He quickly came to the rescue, and seizing the first riotous boy he met at the door gave him such a shaking as soon restored peace and quiet. The teacher, however, left, and was succeeded by Samuel Lee Selden, twenty-two years of age, then at home for a college vacation. He afterwards became an honored judge. The contumacious young man who received the shaking had been a playfellow of Mr. Selden and continued to attend his school. It was the custom for the scholars, as they passed out of the room, to face the teacher and make a bow. This turbulent youth passed out without turning or bowing. Mr. Selden called him back and made such an application of a square cherry ruler, which teachers used to carry, that enabled him to finish the term.

Note.—Samuel Lee Selden was born Oct. 12, 1800; son of Calvin Selden and Phebe Ely, daughter of Elijah Ely. Samuel Lee Selden is numbered 211,214 in this genealogy.

The Ely Reunion Pamphlet contains the copy of an application for a pension, made by the writer, the late John Ely of Philadelphia, Pa., grandfather of Colonel Brackett, and of Rev. William Ely of Philadelphia. John Ely, the writer of this paper, was born in 1758, and therefore was but little more than seventeen years old when he entered service. He was one of six brothers, sons of James Ely of Lyme (obit. 1766) and Dorcas (Andrews) Ely, his wife. James Ely was grandson of William Ely, eldest son of Richard Ely. All the sons of James Ely served for a longer or shorter time in the Army during the Revolution; his third son, Aaron, being killed at the battle of King's Bridge, N. Y., January 5, 1777. This paper is given as serving to show the spirit which animated the young men and even the boys in the days of Lexington and Concord. John Ely, after the conclusion of the war, came to Philadelphia, where he married and spent a long, honored and respected life, dying in August, 1847, in the ninetieth year of his age.

In 1786, John Ely married Elizabeth, daughter of Matthew Bennett and Sarah (Scattergood) Bennett; she died in December, 1797. In 1801 he left Philadelphia and resided for some years in the State of New York. Returning to Philadelphia in about ten years, where he continued to live for the rest of his life, John Ely, throughout his long life, took an active interest in all public affairs, often writing articles on political and other subjects of interest at the time for the old "United States Gazette." He was a warm personal friend of Hon. William Bingham, first United States Senator from Pennsylvania, who presented to Mr. Ely an original marble bust of Benjamin Franklin, which is now in the possession of Rev. William Ely of Germantown, Philadelphia.

It may interest many to know that John Ely took part in the work of the First Day Society, of Philadelphia, organized in 1791 to conduct schools on Sunday, after the example of the Robert Raikes's schools in England. Although composed largely of members of the Society of Friends, Bishop White was its first and only President for forty-five years. M. S. Beach, Esq.,

Dear Sir:—Your exceedingly kind letter of the 16th inst., with accompanying Ely records, are at hand, for which please accept many thanks. I send you a few items from my notes, but probably there is nothing new. Will send my pamphlet when printed. Of course I now know your family well, but never knew where the Ely connection was, but thought on the mother's side. My own relations with Wallingford you will see on opposite side of this sheet. Mr. Hugh Allen, of Brooklyn, my brother-in-law, you probably know.

I visited Wallingford, the nest of both our ancestors, for the first time last summer, but was unable to get much information as to Brenton Hall except that his house is standing in Meriden and that he owned a large tract of land. If you know of any one likely to know, please give me the name. His father's ancestry I have.

HALL PEDIGREE.

You must have given great attention to the Ely genealogy, and the arrangement appears to me quite ingenious and effective.

Thomas Griswold, born Feb. 15, 1719, married December 17, 1741, Susannah, daughter of Nathaniel Lynde, Jr., of Saybrook, Conn., and died July 16, 1770.

He was known as Ensign Thomas Griswold.

His wife died September 25, 1768. They both lie buried in the Duck River burying ground at Lyme.

One of the daughters, Lois, born 1747, married Samuel Mather (1552), and was the paternal grandmother of Mrs. Richard Sill Griswold, now of Lyme.

VI. Lois Griswold (2109), b. at Lyme, Conn., 1 Sept., 1747, third dau. of Thomas Griswold and Susanna Lynde, was a great granddaughter of Phebe Hyde (10) of the third generation. She m. 14 Nov., 1765, Samuel Mather, b. 22 Feb., 1745, at Lyme, eldest son of Richard Mather and Deborah Ely.

Samuel Mather and Lois Griswold, his wife, settled at Lyme, where he was one of the leading men of the town, and was a justice of the peace. She d. 17 Nov., 1804, at Lyme, where he d. 26 Mar., 1809. Their children were:

He grad. at West Point military academy in 1822, the second in his class, and was appointed a second lieutenant in the corps of engineers. Most of the time after he graduated and previous to the war with Mexico he was engaged in different parts of the U. S. as an engineer in the construction of military works. In the war with Mexico he served under General Taylor as chief engineer. He received the brevet of major for his conduct in the defense of Fort Brown, and the brevet of lieut. col. for his gallantry at the storming of Monterey in Sept., 1846, where he was severely wounded. He also received a brevet of colonel for his services in the battle of Buena Vista, in Feb., 1847. In May, 1853, he was appointed inspector-general, with the rank of colonel, which office he continued to hold until the 14th of May, 1861, when he was appointed a brigadier-general of the regular army. After the disastrous battles near Bull Run, under General Pope, in Aug., 1862, he was ordered to Washington as a member of the court of inquiry in relation to those battles. But upon his application for active service, he was appointed a major-general of volunteers, and ordered to report to Gen. McClellan, who gave him the command of the army corps which had been under the command of General Banks. In the sanguinary battle of Antietam on the 17th of Sept., 1862, he was mortally wounded while cheering on his corps to a brilliant but unsuccessful charge upon a part of the enemy's line, and died the next day. His wife survived him, and was living at Middletown in 1863. He was an officer of the Revolutionary Army, trusted by Washington, and beloved by his fellow officers for his calm and faithful courage and patriotic devotion.

In August, 1776, Captain Ezra Lee was selected by General Samuel H. Parsons, with the approval of General Washington, to affix an infernal machine called a "marine turtle," invented by one David Bushnell, to a British ship, the "Eagle," then in New York harbor.

The attempt was gallantly made, but was only partially successful, owing to the ship's thick copper sheathing.

Captain Lee remained in the water several hours, returned in safety to the Americans and was congratulated by General Washington, who afterwards employed him on secret service.

Not long after the attempt upon the "Eagle," Captain Lee essayed to blow up a British frigate, then stationed in the Hudson River, near Bloomingdale, with Bushnell's machine, but the attempt was discovered and failed of success.

Captain Lee served at Trenton, Brandywine and Monmouth.—Appleton's Cyclopedia, Vol. III., page 662.

Hermit Clark Had a Fortune Locked in His Old Chests.

Lyme, Conn., May 6, 1897.—Henry Clark, a hermit, who had lived for years in Lyme, died recently. To-day the appraisers examined his effects. They found two ancient chests in the attic of the house securely locked.

They were unable to find the keys to the huge locks, so they were broken open.

In a secret compartment in one of the oaken chests were found bank books representing deposits of $38,000. One of the books was issued by a New London bank fifty years ago, being one of the first books issued after the organization of the bank.

There were others on different banks in Norwich and New London, which showed deposits made by Mr. Clark more than twenty-five years ago.

The books represented no additions of interest, although deposits had been made at different times. There will be at least $2,000 of accrued interest to be added to the estate.

There are four heirs to the property—two brothers, Joel Clark, of Lyme, and Gurdon Clark, who lives somewhere in New York State. There are also two sons of a dead brother.

Mr. Clark's accumulations were made by hard labor and close economy.

The following extract from the Ely Reunion Pamphlet is interesting in connection with the record of Mr. William Coult. From this family have been handed down the Ely Tankard and Ring:

THE ELY TANKARD AND RING.

Nothing is so fascinating as mystery. These two relics point to a common origin, but what that origin was has hitherto baffled all investigation. Theories the most conflicting have been accepted; every theory involving a story of romance. The Tankard indicates great age. All sterling silver in England since the time of William and Mary has received the "tower mark." The law regarding this is very strict. The old Tankard does not bear this, or any other trade mark. Therefore, if it is English it must ante-date that time. Unlike the ring, it has descended in the female line.

Nathaniel Matson settled in Boston. His son, Nathaniel Matson, second, married, first, Ruth Roe; married, second, Joanna Ely, No. 10, daughter of William Ely. Their seventh child, No. 108, Abigail Matson married John Coult, of Lyme. His son, William Coult, married Nancy Denison. Their son, William Coult, No. 1081, was the husband of the Mrs. Coult who now owns the Tankard. The initials "A. M." on the Tankard stand for Abigail Matson, to whom the Tankard descended from her mother, Joanna (Ely) Matson.

1091. Elizabeth Williams, b. 1748, d. 1823, dau. of Deborah Matson and ——— Williams; m. Azariah Whittlesey, who was b. 1742, d. 1806. Their children:

1. William, b. 1773, d. 1806.
2. Azariah.
3. Almira.
4. Fanny.
5. Samuel.

2111. Samuel Cullick Ely, Somers, Conn., b. 1740, d. 1795, son of Samuel Ely and Hannah Marsh; m. Beulah Billings. Their children:

1. Dinah.
2. Beulah, b. 1765.
3. Malvina.
4. Samuel, b. 1774, d. 1814.

Josiah Gilbert Holland's "History of Western Massachusetts" states (Vol. I., Chap. XVI., page 231) that Samuel Ely was a thorn in the sides of the authorities during Shay's Rebellion in 1786. Mr. Ely was a clergyman, apparently of liberal ideas, and exerted a strong influence among his parishioners, but excited also bitter animosity among his opponents by his zeal, courage and independence.

Mr. Ely was arrested, but afterwards released, without the infliction of any penalty.

2112. Elijah Ely, second son of Samuel Ely and Hannah Marsh, born in 1743, married Hepzibah Lee in 1765. Elijah was a prominent shipping merchant, and lived on the north shore of an inlet of the Connecticut river which extends to the village of Hamburg, near Lyme. He lost his life in March, 1779, while going down in a small boat to Saybrook to meet a vessel whose arrival had been reported. His boat was upset, and he perished during the wintry night.

Chancellor Walworth's Hyde Genealogy contains a full account of the descendants of Elijah Ely, which we quote, as it gives some details not elsewhere found:

9. Charles Chauncey, b. Jan. 27, 1799, d. Sept. 15, 1887, m. July 25, 1829, Adeline Eliza Dana, of Hartford.

The Rev. Charles Chauncey Darling, 24519. married Adeline Eliza Dana, who was born June 12, 1798, at Boston. The marriage took place July 28, 1829, at Hartford, Rev. Joel Hawes, D. D., performing the ceremony, at the house of William Ely, who married the bride's Aunt Clarissa (May Davis).

May 19, 1867, Rev. Charles C. Darling removed to the Presbytery of New York, and was ordained for special work in connection with the Fourth Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Adeline Eliza Dana was the daughter of William and Eliza Dana of Boston. Miss Dana was baptised by the Rev. Dr. Lathrop, July 2, 1798.

Losing her parents at an early age, she found a home with her Aunt Clarissa May Ely, of Hartford, youngest sister of her mother, and daughter of Major Robert Davis of Boston.

She died at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Sept. 11, 1882. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Drs. Peter Stryker and Ireneus Prime. See New York Observer, Oct. 12, 1882; N. Y. Evangelist, Oct. 19, 1882.

Doctor Darling was of royal descent; the connection is given in Pedigree XLVII. of the "Genealogy of American Families of Royal Descent." The descent is through Edward I., King of England, and his first wife.

TOMBSTONE OF CAPTAIN RICHARD LORD
NEW LONDON, CONNECTICUT

FIFTH GENERATION.

We present on the opposite page a fac-simile of a tombstone, supposed to be the oldest in the State of Connecticut, east of the Connecticut River and which is found in the old burying-ground at New London.

It commemorates one of the brothers Lord, from whom nearly all of that now frequent name are descended; the sixth Richard, in lineal descent from this one, is now (1854) a citizen of Lyme, Conn.

The words on the stone are easily deciphered and quite clear, excepting the word "paroxymies." This probably refers to some kind of social paroxysms or disputes which this worthy Chaplain "composed"—that is, arranged or settled.

He appears from the records, to have been an umpire or peacemaker, as well as "the starre of our Cavallrie."

The wife of Richard Lord was Sarah Graves, who died in 1676:

Their children:

1. Richard, b. 1636; married Mary Smith, daughter of Henry and Ann Pychon Smith, of Springfield.
2. Sarah, b. 1638; married Rev. Jos. Haynes.
3. Dorothy, b. 1640; married John Ingersoll, of Hartford.

Sarah married Rev. Joseph Haynes, son of Governor Haynes, and had four children, one of whom—Sarah, born 1673—married Rev. James Pierpont, pastor 1st Church of New Haven.

Her daughter, Abigail, married Rev. Joseph Noyes.

Their daughter, Abigail Noyes, married Judge Thomas Darling of New Haven.

From the Mail and Express, November 19, 1898, we learn that Thomas Lord was registered on the 29th of April, 1635, from the port of London to New England and embarked on the "Elizabeth and Ann" for New England. Thomas Lord, born about 1585; married about 1610 Dorothy ———. First settled in Newton, Cambridge, Mass., where his eldest son Richard, born in 1611, had already established himself. In 1636-37 Thomas Lord's family were of that large company which was led by Rev. Thomas Hooker from Massachusetts to form a new settlement on the Connecticut River. Thomas Lord thus became one of the first settlers of Hartford. He lived on the "North Side" fronting Mill River—a near neighbor of Gov. Haynes, Rev. Mr. Hooker and others of the prominent inhabitants. Thomas Lord was a merchant and mill owner; the time and place of his burial is unknown. His widow, Dorothy, died in 1675, at the age of 86. Her will, dated February 8, 1669, is now on file among the probate records in the office of the Secretary of State at Hartford. The seal which Dorothy Lord affixed to this will shows the coat of arms which "doubtless had been her husband's." The children of Thomas and Dorothy Lord were:

1. Richard, born in England about 1611. Died, 1662. Married Sarah Graves, of Cambridge.
2. Thomas Lord, born in England about 1619.
3. Anne Lord, born in England about 1620. Married Thomas Stanton.
4. William Lord, born in England about 1623.
5. John Lord, born in England about 1625.

6. Robert Lord, born in England about 1627.
7. Amye Lord, born in England about 1629.
8. Dorothy Lord, born in England about 1631.

The above is taken chiefly from Prof. Salisbury's "Family Histories and Genealogies." Thomas Stanton is registered among a list of passengers to sail for Virginia from England in 1635. It is probable this was the Thomas Stanton of New England. He became skillful in knowledge of the Indian language and rendered invaluable services as interpreter in the Pequot war. In 1638 the General Court of Connecticut apppointed him as stated Indian interpreter at a salary of £10 per annum. He married at Hartford in 1637 Anna Lord. He was the first man who joined William Cheesebrough in the settlement of Stonington, Conn. He moved his family to Stonington in 1656. The children of Thomas and Ann Stanton were: Thomas, Mary, John, Hannah, Joseph, Daniel, Dorothy, Robert, Sarah, Samuel.—From History of First Congregational Church, Stonington, Conn., and History of New London, Conn.

From the Mail and Express of March 27, 1897, it appears that the Richard Lord referred to on the old Connecticut Monument was probably a grandson of the Col. Richard Lord, who died in 1662.

Abigail Warren, who married Richard Lord, of Hartford, Conn., was the daughter of John Warren, of Boston, Mass., and of Elizabeth, his third wife. She (Abigail) was born May 10, 1676.—(Goodwin's Gen. Notes, p. 349. Savage, Vol. IV., pp. 424-25.) C. S. W.

From the Mail and Express of Feby. 20, 1897, we take the following enquiry as to the marriage of Richard Lord:

Information wanted first of the ancestry of John Warren (of Boston?), who married successively Deborah Wilson, Elizabeth Combs and Elizabeth Crow, who was the mother of Abigail Warren, who married Richard Lord (3), of Hartford.

This John Warren died 1677? Was he a descendant of the Mayflower Pilgrim?

2. The ancestry of Elizabeth Combs, second (?) wife of John Warren (of Boston?) F. H. L.

The Mail and Express, April 24, 1897, gave the following item in regard to John Warren:

John Warren and Deborah Wilson are ancestors of mine. I have learned very little of them. John was a tobacconist, or cardmaker. Savage says was early of Exeter, there married, October 21, 1650, Deborah Wilson, who died June 26, 1668. He died July, 1677. They had a daughter, Sarah, who married Stephen Garnet. Sarah died aged 101. See history of the town of Hingham.

2452. Phebe Ely, second daughter of Rev. Richard Ely (245) and Jerusha Sheldon, was born Nov. 20, 1760.

She married Rev. Ozias Eells, of Barkhampsted, Conn.

Children of Rev. Ozias Eells and Phebe Ely:

a. First child died an infant.
b. Electa, b. Jan. 4, 1791; d. 1793.

3. Richard, b. Feb. 23, 1799.
4. Phebe, b. Feb. 3, 1803.
5. William Edward, b. Oct. 5, 1805.

2454. Jerusha Ely was the third daughter of Rev. Richard Ely and Jerusha Sheldon. She was born Feby. 13, 1764, and died Oct. 22, 1805. Dr. Abel Catlin, of Litchfield, Conn., married Jerusha Ely, Oct. 10, 1790. There is no record of any children.

2455. Doctor Richard Ely, of Saybrook, Conn., son of Rev. Richard Ely and Jerusha Sheldon, was born Friday, June 28, 1765; was fitted for Yale College by his father. He graduated in 1785, and soon after married Miss Eunice Bliss, of Wilbraham, Mass. Wilbraham was set off from Springfield and incorporated as a town in 1793. Doctor Ely was the second of four Richards who died in the Richard Ely house at Chester—died 1816.

Mrs. Ely was born Feb. 5, 1769, and died April 16, 1851.

Children of Richard Ely and Eunice Bliss:

1. William, b. June 27, 1792; d. Nov. 2, 1850; m. May 5, 1820, Harriet Whiting, of Hartford.
2. Eliza Maria, b. May 8, 1794; m. Elihu Ely, M. D., of Binghamton, N. Y.
3. Richard, b. Aug. 5, 1798; m. Sept. 12, 1829, Mary Caroline Buck, of Rome, N. Y.
4. Clarissa Eunice, b. May 1, 1801.
5. Catherine Bliss, b. July 24, 1803; m. May 27, 1839, Chas. McKinney, of Binghamton, N. Y.

This is the point of connection between the families of Ely and Bliss. Eunice Bliss was a daughter of Oliver Bliss and Catherine Brewer. Oliver was the grandson of Thomas Bliss of England.

The Bliss Family emigrated from Braintree, England. Thomas Bliss and wife, Margaret, had five sons:

1. Thomas, m. Margaret ———.
2. Nathaniel, m. Catherine Chapin, daughter of Deacon Samuel Chapin and wife, Cicely, of Roxbury, 1638, and Westfield, Conn., 1660.
3. Lawrence.
4. Samuel, m. Mary Leonard.

Mercy Bliss, daughter of Samuel Bliss and Mary Leonard, married Dec. 30, 1703; Deacon John Ely, born Jany. 28, 1678, son of Samuel Ely.

Deacon John Ely is designated as Number 15 in the Ely Genealogy, descendants of Nathaniel Ely by Heman Ely.

5. John.

(Copied from Mrs. Eunice Ely's Bible by Elihu Ely, Jr., May 10, 1834.)

Thomas and Margaret Bliss had a son, Abel, born 1709, died April 30, 1763, who married Jemima Chapin. Mr. Bliss resided at Wilbraham, Mass., and Miss Chapin at Chicopee, Mass. previous to their marriage. She died Jan. 9, 1772, aged 67.

Their children:

Oliver, born Dec. 1, 1736; died April 6, 1805; married March 8, 1759, Catherine Brewer, born 1738, died Aug. 23, 1823.

Abel, born Oct. 16, 1738.

Jeremiah, born Oct. 23, 1740. (Old style date; changed to new in September, 1752.)

Silas, born April 26, 1743.

Levi, born May 18, 1745.

Oliver Bliss and Catherine Brewer, married March 8, 1759. Catherine Brewer was born June 8, 1738.

Their children:

Achsah, b. Mar. 13, 1760; d. June, 1837; m. Rev. Henry Ely.
Mary, b. Feb. 4, 1762; d. July 22, 1825; m. July 25, 1782, Joel Hayes.
Catherine, b. April 24, 1764.
Jemima, b. July 9, 1766.
Eunice, b. Feb. 5, 1769; d. April 16, 1851; m. 1791, Dr. Richard Ely.
Lois, b. March 20, 1771; d. Aug. 30, 1786.
Oliver, b. Nov. 11, 1773; d. Sept. 19, 1824.

John, b. Aug. 9, 1779; m. Apr. 13, 1817, Harriet B. Merrick.

The parents of Katherine Brewer, who married Oliver Bliss, were Rev. Daniel Brewer and Katherine Chauncey. Daniel Brewer was born in Roxbury, Mass., March, 1667, and was a son of Daniel Brewer, said to have been born in England. Rev. Daniel Brewer married, Aug. 23, 1689, Katherine Chauncey, eldest daughter of Rev. Nathaniel Chauncey. She was born at Windsor, Conn., Jan. 12, 1676, baptised June 16, 1676, and died May 15, 1754, aged 79 years.

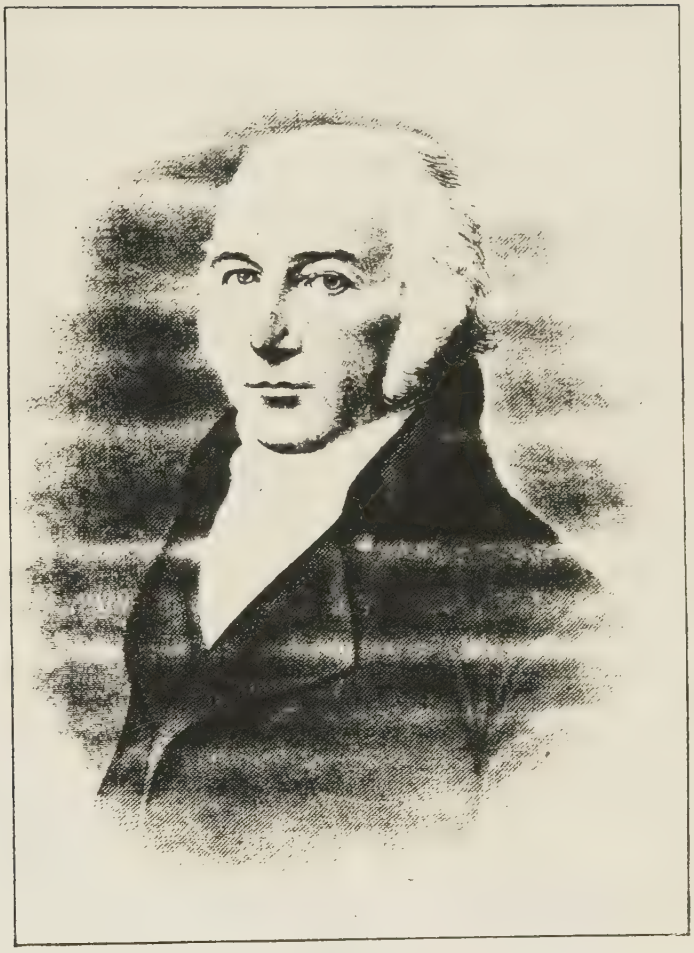
Rev. Daniel Brewer was officiating at Springfield, Mass., at the time of the marriage of his daughter to Oliver Bliss.

Eunice, daughter of Rev. Daniel Brewer, married Rev. Thomas Breck, the successor of her father. They had four children. She died in 1767, aged 60 years.

Richard Ely, M. D., of Chester, Conn., was born in North Bristol, now North Madison, Conn., June 28, 1765. Here he spent his youth in habits of industry and was fitted by his father, Rev. Richard Ely, to enter Yale College, where he graduated in 1785.

He then studied medicine with Dr. John Noyes, of Lyme, Conn., and received a very handsome certificate from his able preceptor, dated June 9, 1786.

He commenced practice in North Killingworth, Conn., where he resided several years. September 4, 1791, he married Eunice Bliss, daughter of Oliver Bliss, of North Wilbraham, Mass.



WILLIAM ELY
(SON OF REV. RICH. ELY)
HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT

His two eldest children were born in North Killingworth. He removed to North Wilbraham, where he remained but a year, owing to the state of his health. This was greatly regretted, not only by himself, but by the people, who declared it was the greatest loss they ever experienced.

He practiced his profession in Centre Brook until about 1805, when he removed to another section of the town of Saybrook, called Chester.

His father, advanced in years, removed with him to this new home, ever after residing under the same roof.

Dr. Ely was treasurer of the Connecticut Medical Society the last three years of his life. He was elected a Fellow sixteen times in twenty-four years. He died April 27, 1816, of a fever brought on by overwork and exposure. He shared the confidence and respect of the profession and the public. He had a large consultation practice in the adjoining towns, his rides extending to the east side of the Connecticut River. An eminent brother physician remarked of him, "He never knew a physician who could get at a correct diagnosis so soon as Dr. Ely." He represented his town in the Legislature once, after his removal to Chester, but then decided that such duties were incompatible with those of his profession.

In his Christian character he adorned the religion he professed, and was the strong staff upon which his beloved pastor (Rev. Samuel Mills) leaned with confidence for support.

2456. William Ely, youngest son of Rev. Richard Ely, 245, and Jerusha Sheldon, was born Jan. 10, 1767, at Guilford, Conn., and married July 4, 1811, Miss Clarissa May Davis, of Hartford, Conn., where his widow and two daughters have resided since his death.

Children of William and Clarissa May Davis:

1. Mary Davis, b. June 1, 1812, d. young.
2. Clarissa, b. Jan. 1, 1814, m. July 3, 1831, David C. Collins, of Hartford.
3. William Davis, b. Jun. 16, 1815, m. Apr. 25, 1854, Anne Crawford Allen, of Providence, R. I.
4. Mary Davis, b. Jan. 2, 1817, d. unm. Nov. 22, 1892.
5. Richard Sheldon, b. May 25, 1818, d. Mar. 7, 1894, m., 1st, Sept. 17, 1849, Lucinda Morgan, of New York; m. 2d, April18 , 1872, Caroline P. Ingersoll, of Springfield, Mass.
6. Robert Davis, b. June 3, 1822; d. Mar. 4, 1826.
7. Charlotte Maria, b. Jun. 14, 1829, unm.

Mr. Ely graduated from Yale College in the class of 1787, and after leaving college studied medicine for a time, but soon relinquished it to engage in commercial enterprises, and acquired a fortune as a shipping merchant in the India trade.

William Ely was a man of handsome and commanding person, and of accomplished and elegant manners. He was cultivated by the study of books, and still more highly by the observation of men and familiarity with the polished society of different countries.

He built a ship of the largest class then employed, and went in her to the East Indies, as an owner and supercargo. With his usual energy, to lose no time, he studied navigation on various voyages and made himself master of the science and of the practice as well.

He also made himself so familiar with the Dutch language, during his various residences in Holland and her East India colonies, that he spoke it with the facility and accuracy of a native Hollander. This language was the more important at that period, as the Dutch were almost the only great commercial nation of Europe which could maintain a practical neutrality, and so engross a large portion of its most valuable commerce.

How soon the knowledge of navigation, acquired during the leisure of the long sailing voyages, was to become a deliverance to him and all who sailed with him, he little anticipated. Yet, on one of these voyages, overtaken by a terrific "cyclone," the ship was brought into the greatest peril and nigh to being wrecked.

So terrible was the storm that the captain and officers of the ship gave her up for lost, renounced their commands, and desired him to save the ship if it were in his power.

Clear-headed and self-possessed, in this dreadful emergency he did not despair. He took the responsibility, inspired the crew by his own example with new hope and courage, assumed and kept the command, finished the voyage, and carried the ship, with her large and valuable cargo, safely into port.

From that day he made a resolution that he would not own nor venture his interests in a ship which he did not himself command; and his action on the occasion which led to this resolve affords but a single illustration of the superb moral and physical courage which in him were striking traits which characterized his life.

His various enterprises proving successful, and having laid the foundation of a fortune, handsome at least for those days, he retired in a great degree from active business and settled in Hartford, Conn.

There he married, in 1811, Clarissa May Davis, daughter of Major Robert Davis,* of Boston, a woman whose personal beauty was only equalled by the loveliness of her character, and whose devotion to her family and cheerful interest in society made her remarkably attractive even at the advanced age to which she lived.

Wholly indifferent to public office, Mr. Ely was a decided Federalist in his politics, but would accept no appointment unless he deemed it his duty as a citizen and saw an opportunity of doing some direct and positive good to the community.

In a similar spirit he constantly availed himself of his medical knowledge to aid by advice and assistance the suffering poor around him.

* Major of artillery in the Revolution; in service at the "siege of Boston," and an active member of "The Boston Tea Party." His resemblance to Washington was so striking that he was often mistaken for him. When the troops followed the retreating British to the outlet of the harbor, he sent to his wife, by special messenger, the earliest news of their final departure, written on part of a "barrel-head," the only stationery at hand.

He was a merchant of Boston, brother of Hon. Caleb Davis (Speaker of the House of Representatives, Massachusetts, 1780, and delegate from Boston to the Massachusetts Constitutional Convention in 1787), and of Brigadier General Amasa Davis. All the brothers resided in Boston, and were members of the "Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts."

MONUMENT OF WILLIAM ELY

HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT

Mr. Ely died Feb. 21, 1847, and Mrs. Ely died May 7, 1882.

Miss Davis' sister, Eliza, married William Dana, of Boston. Miniatures of Mr. and Mrs. William Dana, by Malbone, are in the possession of their grandson, General Charles W. Darling, of Utica.

Their daughter Clarissa, 24562, married David Chittenden Collins, who was a son of Alexander and Elizabeth (Mathinson) Collins. He was born at Middletown, Conn., Feb. 3, 1805, and was a wealthy manufacturer, in honor of whom Collinsville, Conn., was named. After living some time in New York he finally removed to New Haven, Conn., and established his family and residence there, where his widow and children remain. He died at his residence, on Hillhouse Avenue, August 10, 1861.

Mrs. Collins, the widow, resides at New Haven, with three daughters, Clara, Edith and Marion, wife of Godfrey Dunscombe, Esq. An only son, Charles, died several years ago. Mary died young.

William Davis Ely, 24563, resides in Providence, R. I.

Mary Davis Ely, 24564, was born January 2, 1817, and Nov. 22, 1892, she died, unmarried. She was educated by Miss Beecher and Mrs. Stowe, and was a favorite pupil of the latter, their mutual attachment continuing until her death.

She was a woman of unusual intellect and brilliancy in conversation; capable, courageous and persevering in what she undertook. Her devotion to and success in the "Art School" of Hartford illustrated this. As its President she devoted to it her later years, and was Honorary President at her decease.

One of the most brilliant and intellectual women of Connecticut thus writes of her: "The last time I saw her she held unimpaired that abounding vivacity and lively spirit that had always made her one of the most delightful companions to me. I felt as if I had breathed in oxygen after an interview with her, and so she lives in my memory."

Charlotte Maria Ely was born June 14, 1829. She remains unmarried, and still resides in the family mansion at Hartford, where her mother and sister Mary, during their lives, resided with her. She was named after the Misses Charlotte and Maria DeWolf, of Bristol, R. I., whose sister her uncle Robert Davis married.

DEATH OF MRS. WILLIAM ELY.

One of the Oldest Citizens of Hartford.

Mrs. William Ely died yesterday afternoon at her home, No. 668 Main street, and in her death one of the sweetest natures and loveliest souls passes from Hartford, where she has been so long known and loved, and where her memory will be cherished for many years to come. Mrs. Ely was between ninety and ninety-one years old, but until a fall a few weeks ago rendered her helpless she has been out among her friends, retaining and manifesting to the end her interest in them. She received a number of calls on New Year's Day, and so late as the end of February went to New Haven and attended the wedding of her granddaughter, Mrs. Jonathan Edwards.

Mrs. Ely came with her mother to Hartford to live with relatives here when only a young girl scarcely ten years old, and has lived here ever since, being therefore one of the oldest inhabitants of the city. She married Mr. William Ely, who graduated from Yale College in 1787, as his father before him had done in 1754. Mr. Ely was a retired merchant, who had made the trip around the world as supercargo more than once. He belonged to the Lyme family of that name. Mr. Ely was a sagacious man of business, and to his good judgment in "locating" the lands granted to the deaf and dumb asylum that institution is indebted for a valuable property. He owned and lived upon a large estate in the north part of the city, of which the Ely place is now a small part. It extended eastward below the foot of Windsor street and included what is now Ely and Winthrop streets. He died in 1847.

The first Ely residence was the double wooden house next north of the present residence, but about 1832 the present homestead was put up. It has been Mrs. Ely's home for fifty years, and there she has maintained through her long life the gracious old-time hospitality which is so fast dying out of modern society, but which has helped to make her house one of the pleasantest social centres in the city.

Mrs. Ely leaves three daughters and two sons—Mrs. Clarissa Collins, of New Haven, widow of Mr. David C. Collins; Misses Mary and Charlotte Ely, of this city, and Messrs. William D. Ely, of Providence, and Richard S. Ely, of New York City.

2458. Huldah Ely, the youngest child of Rev. Richard Ely and Jerusha She don, was born July 26, 1772. Huldah married Uriah Hayden, Nov. 4, 1792.

Mr. Hayden died in 1801, and the widow married Rev. Aaron Hovey, Sept. 9, 1802. Mr. Hayden's only sister married Nathaniel L. Griswold, of New York, founder of the shipping house of N. L. Griswold & Co.

Rev. Mr. Hovey was called to the ministry of the Second Ecclesiastical Society of Saybrook, and ordained as the pastor Sept., 1804, acting as the colleague of the then aged Rev. Richard Ely.

Children of Uriah Hayden and Huldah Ely:

1. Electa, b. Oct. 24, 1793.
2. Prudence Amelia, b. Oct. 15, 1795, d. 1880, m. 1815 Capt. H. J. Champlin.

The "Herald" of Jan. 21, 1899, publishes the following obituary of General S. E. Marvin. The Editor has made some inquiries with a view to learn the ancestry of General Marvin.

GENERAL S. E. MARVIN DEAD.

President of Albany Savings Institution, Who Passed Away in This City Suffered from Kidney Disease.

General Selden E. Marvin, of Albany, died on Thursday, at the Hotel Roland, in this city, it is said, from acute Bright's disease. He had been a sufferer from kidney trouble for several years and had been failing for several months.

General Marvin was sixty-three years old, and was born in Jamestown, N. Y. He studied law, but abandoned it for business. He was appointed adjutant of the 112th New York volunteers in 1862, serving in that capacity and as assistant adjutant-general of Foster's brigade and Army of Southern Virginia through the Peninsula and Charleston campaigns.

He was appointed paymaster of the United States volunteers in 1863 in the Army of the Potomac, resigning to accept the post of paymaster of New York on Governor Fenton's staff. He subsequently became Governor Fenton's adjutant-general.

General Marvin in 1868 engaged in the banking business in this city as a member of the firm of Morgan, Kern & Marvin. He organized the Albany and Rensselaer Iron and Steel Company in 1875 and became a director and its secretary and treasurer.

He was at the time of his death president of the Hudson River Telephone Company and the Albany Savings Institution, treasurer of All Saints' Cathedral, and a member of the State Board of Charities. His widow, two sons and two daughters survive him.

It seems highly probable that General Marvin was a great-grandson of Colonel Samuel Selden of the Revolutionary Army, and was a grand-nephew of Phebe Marvin, who married Seth Ely, 2462. The grandfather of General Marvin was Selden Marvin, who married (first) Charlotte Pratt.

Their son, Judge Richard Pratt Marvin, married Isabella Newland. Their children:

1. Selden Erastus, d. Jun. 19, 1899, m. Katherine Langdon Parker.
2. Sarah Jane, m. Eric L. Hall.
3. Davis Newland (deceased), m. Julia Ormes (deceased).
4. Mary Elizabeth, m. B. F. Goodrich (deceased).
5. William R, d. s. p.
6. Robert Newland, m. Elizabeth ———.
7. Richard Pratt, m. Jane Miller; d. Dec., '98.
8. Isabella, d. unm.

2463. Lydia Ely, Lyme, Conn., b. 1766, d. 1853, dau. of Seth Ely and Lydia Reynolds; m. 1788 Matthew Griswold, who was b. 1760, d. 1842, son of Matthew Griswold and Ursula Wolcott (dau. of Governor Wolcott, and great-granddaughter of Henry Wolcott). No children.

Matthew Griswold, born 1760, and who married Lydia Ely, 2463, was brother to Roger, member of Congress from Connecticut, who in March, 1798, publicly chastised Matthew Lyon, M. C., from New Hampshire, in his seat in the House in return for an insult put upon him by the Vermonter, for which the House had refused to expel Mr. Lyon, by a strict party vote.

The Mail and Express of June 10, 1897, contains in the Genealogical and Historical Department the following mention of a Sarah Wolcott, who may have been a daughter of Henry Wolcott:

William Clark (son of Thomas, supposed to be mate of the Mayflower), born 1639, married Sarah Wolcott, of Plymouth, March 1, 1659. He was deputy in 1674, 1680 and 1681. William Clark and Sarah Wolcott had a son, Thomas, born in 1660. After the death of his wife, Sarah, Mr. Clark married as his second wife Harriet Griswold March 17, 1678, and had a son, William, born June 7, 1682, who moved from Lyme to Derby, Conn., in 1735, and there married Harriet ———, born August 2, 1697.

In the records of Derby he is called "Merchant, 1748."

Their children were:

Eliz., born September 24, ——; married Joseph Hull, May 3, 1750.
Susannah, born May 18, 1734; married Richard Watrous.
Lucy, born December 13, 1736; married Isaac Smith.

Charity born March 26, 1752.

Children of Joseph Hull and Eliz. Clark, of Derby: William, Shelden, Eliz., Lucy, Susan and three others. A. B. E.

FIFTH GENERATION.

Some account of Matthew Griswold and his wife, Phebe Hyde, has already been given, as our readers will doubtless remember, on pages 41 and 60. Some repetition here seems unavoidable to preserve the continuity of the narrative and elucidate the family connection. Where several intermarriages between families have occurred it is hoped that repetition may be pardoned for the sake of clearness.

"Matthew Griswold removed to Saybrook on being appointed Agent of Governor Fenwick. He was a Deputy of the General Court, 1654-1667-1668. He became an original proprietor of Lyme, which was set off from Saybrook. He was a man of large wealth and landed estate.

"His seat was 'Black Hall,' where he died in 1698. He was buried at Saybrook. His wife survived him only a few years."

There is a receipt, dated April 1, 1679, registered at Saybrook for £7 sterling paid M.Griswold " in payt. for tombstone of Lady Alice Boteler (Lady Fenwick), late of Saybrook." Mag. of Amer. Hist., 1884, Vol. XI.

P. 222, of the same work, gives a letter of Governor Griswold to Roger Sherman, June 27, 1778.

P. 223, Letter from same to Governor Trumbull, Aug. 3, 1779.

P. 227, Excellent letter from Oliver Wolcott, brother-in-law to Governor Griswold to the Governor, Nov. 22, 1788.

Matthew Griswold, 2nd, born 1653, married Phœbe Hyde, May 21, 1683. His letters to her are recorded (Mag. Amer. Hist., pages 138, etc.), and also his letter to Rev. Cotton Mather, dated Nov. 8, 1712, from Lyme, as to what had befallen his oldest son in a naval engagement near the Island of Jamaica, he being thrown by his own fault among the hazards of war of the Spanish Succession.

John Griswold, son of Matthew Griswold and Phœbe Hyde, was born December, 1690; married Hannah Lee.

The children are given on page 109.

Matthew Griswold, born at Lyme, March 25, 1714, eldest child of John and Hannah (Lee) Griswold), married, October 11, 1743, Miss Ursula Wolcott, daughter of Hon. Roger Wolcott, former Governor of Connecticut. In 1751 he was elected representative to the General Assembly, and was chosen a number of years successively; in 1755 he was nominated for and in 1759 was elected to the Council of the State. In 1766 he was appointed one of the Judges of the Superior Court, and in 1769 was elected Lieut.-Governor, with which office was connected that of Chief Justice of State.

In 1784 he was chosen Governor, and in 1786 retired from public life until the adoption of the Constitution of the United States by the Convention of the State in 1788, when he was called to officiate as President of that body. He died April 28, 1799.

His funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Lathrop Rockwell, of Lyme. Governor Matthew Griswold and his wife are buried in the Duck River burying-ground at Lyme.

Their children were:

1. John.
2. Matthew, b. April 17, 1760.

FIFTH GENERATION.

Rev. Elias P. Ely (24952), son of Deacon Richard and Mary Ely, was born in North Lyme, December 31st, 1808. He died at the age of twenty-five years and was interred in the Ely burying-ground at Lyme. Yet, counting by what he accomplished, his life was not short. While we should call him still a boy in age he became an academic teacher in Haddam, Conn. Afterward, while teaching a classical school in Berlin, Conn., he passed easily into the senior class at Washington (now Trinity) College, Hartford, where he graduated with honor. The same year he received the degree of A. B. from Yale.

His success in teaching did not divert him from the ministry, which he kept always in view. In March, 1832, he became a student at Princeton Theological Seminary four months after the session had begun. He mastered Latin, Greek and Hebrew, read most of the languages of modern Europe, and had progressed in Chaldaic and Syriac, with a missionary's career in view. He was an eloquent writer, and his address to his fellow-students upon "Independence of Thought" was published in the "Biblical Repository" at the suggestion of Professor Hodge.

In October, 1833, he was licensed to preach, but his health declined, and he was obliged to leave the Seminary. Still he continued his ministerial labors in North Lyme, Essex, Old Lyme and in Baltimore. During the summer of 1834 he supplied the pulpit in West Chester, Pa.

The family felt his death a grievous bereavement, but the record of his life stands a noble legacy to children's children.

Rev. Mr. Colton, of Lyme, preached his funeral sermon from the text: "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness."

2431. Hepsa Ely, Huntington, Conn., b. 1778, d. 1864, dau. of David Ely and Hepsa Mills; m. 1801 Gold Sellick Silliman, Newport, R. I.

(Prof. Silliman refers for further details to Hon. B. D. Silliman and family, Pierrepont and Clinton Sts., Brooklyn. Prof. S., New Haven, has record and is descendant.)

Dr. Ely married Miss Hepsa Mills, daughter of Elisha Mills, Esq., and a granddaughter of his colleague, the Rev. Jedediah Mills. Mrs. Silliman, who was their eldest child, was born in Huntington October 23, 1778, was married to Gold S. Silliman, Esq., September 17, 1801, and died at Brooklyn, N. Y., 22 January, 1864, in the 86th year of her age.

Her husband, Mr. Gold S. Silliman, and his brother, the late Professor Benjamin Silliman of New Haven (both of whom were graduated at Yale College in 1796), were sons of General Gold Selleck Silliman, of Fairfield, Conn. (a graduate of Yale College in 1752), who did good and active service in the Revo lutionary War. He was Attorney for the Crown prior to that period, and after the war served his fellow-citizens as a magistrate, representative, and State's attorney. He was a brave, prudent and efficient officer, and was highly esteemed in private life as a neighbor, gentleman and Christian. ("Hollister's Hist. of Conn.," vol. 2, p. 654.)

General Silliman was a son of Judge Ebenezer Silliman, who was graduated at Yale College in 1727, was Speaker of the General Assembly from 1736 to 1739, from which date he was for twenty-eight years a member of the Council, or upper house of the Legislature. At the end of that time he was again elected to the Assembly, of which he was again the Speaker in 1773 and 1774. He was also annually elected a Judge of the Superior Court, for twenty-three years, besides being a Judge of the Probate Court, Judge of the County Court, and Colonial Auditor, and held various other public trusts. For a period of over forty-five years he was almost constantly in public life. He was, says his epitaph, "distinguished by a clear understanding, a sedate mind and dignity of deportment, and was well versed in jurisprudence, learned in the law and religiously upright." (2d Hollister, 653.)

Mrs. Hepsa Ely Silliman was a student from her earliest years.

Mrs. Sigourney mentions in her work, entitled "Past Meridian," p. 268, in an article on Mrs. Silliman's character and writings, that:

* * * "Her contributions to the 'American Journal of Science,' during a long series of years, were numerous and important. Among them her articles entitled 'Vitality of Matter,' in vol. 15th; 'Polar Explorations,' vol. 16th; 'Geology of the Arctic Regions,' and 'Malaria,' vol. 17th, and 'The Causes of the Aurora Borealis,' vol. 19th, have gained the marked attention of profound minds. Many valued emanations from her pen on moral and patriotic subjects, distinguished by power and pathos, have appeared from time to time in our various periodicals. Her paper on 'Aerolites' is a remarkable production, eminent for clearness of style, closeness of argument, and originality of theory. Its appendix contains a chronology of aerolites, commencing with the fall of a meteoric stone at Crete 1,407 years before the Christian era. This was published in Europe, and is the only one of her productions to which her name is affixed, which was done in compliance with the earnest solicitation of friends. Of an exceedingly interesting treatise on the 'Fur Trade and Fur-Bearing Animals,' which, or a great part of it, was copied in one of the Edinburgh magazines without reference to its source, she pleasantly remarks in a letter to a friend:

"'As I do not write for fame, it did not disturb me that this should have been published in 'Blackwood' without acknowledgment, making it appear as original in that journal. Indeed, I was not a little pleased that it should be so well thought of.'

"Essays embodying great research she dedicated simply to the diffusion of knowledge, personal ambition having no share in her intellectual element. Singularly free was her whole nature from selfishness or desire of display." * * *

It is worthy of remark that the paper on aerolites, to which Mrs. Sigourney alludes, was written after its author had passed fourscore years.

The esteem in which she was held, and the sorrow caused by her death, were strikingly manifested by notices in the public journals; by the large attendance at the funeral; and by the character of those present. The funeral sermon was preached January 27, 1864, by the Rev. A. A. Willits, at the First Reformed Dutch Church, in Brooklyn.

The Honorable B. D. Silliman, of 31 Nassau St., New York City, a son of the late Gold S. Silliman and Hepsa Ely, furnishes, under date of Dec. 7, 1898, the following family record, which, coming from a gentleman then over ninety-three years of age, is of considerable interest:

Mr. Editor:

Dear Sir:—My delay in sending the enclosed must have seemed strange to you. It was caused by my mislaying your note and thereby losing your address.

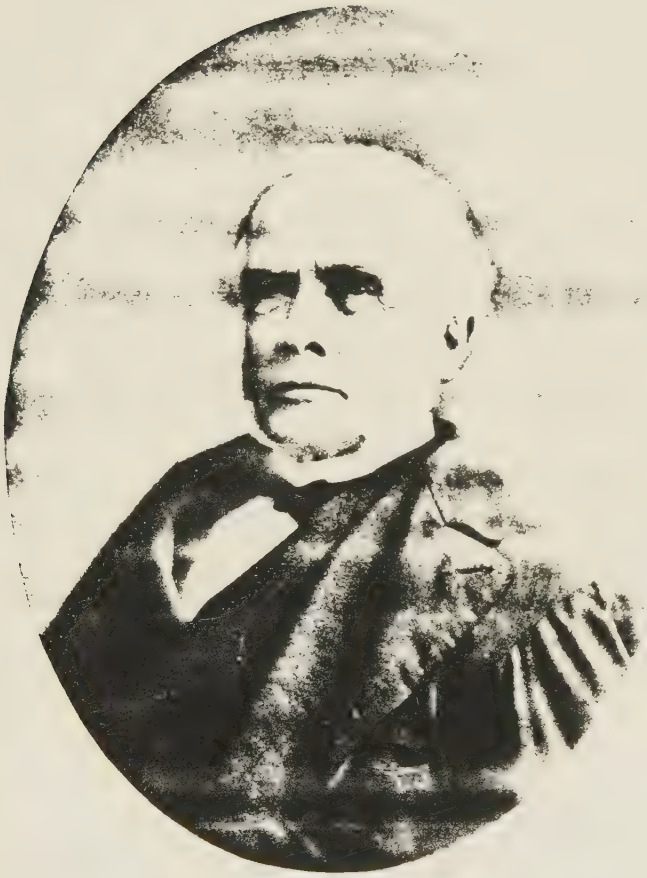
I have prepared by extracts from the family Bible the genealogical statements you wish, and now send them herewith.

I am glad to know that you intend to prepare a statement of the Ely genealogy, and am anxious to know how full you are able to make it.

I cannot make a satisfactory table of the genealogy of my father's family prior to that of his grandfather, Judge Ebenezer Silliman, though I suppose that the materials exist as far back as Daniel Silliman, of Fairfield, about 1680 or 1690. By aid of some guessing we go back to Daniel Sillimandi, who, with his family, emigrated from Lucca, in Italy, in 1500 to Geneva (where they dropped the di), and still exist in Switzlerland under the name of Silliman as we spell it. My uncle, the late Professor Silliman, of Yale College, visited the Rev. Francis Julius Silliman, of Cote aux Fées, in Switzerland, in 18—, and records his visit in his "Visit to Europe in 1851," Vol. 2, page 247.

I am, dear sir, truly yours,

B. D. SILLIMAN.



HON. B. D. SILLIMAN

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

Apropos of Mr. Silliman we give the following newspaper extract as to his property corner of Broadway and Wall Street:

The Price Mr. Silliman Refused for His Narrow Lot, Corner Broadway and Wall Street.

Four hundred dollars a square foot, or $50,000 per running foot, has been offered for the corner lot on Broadway, at the southerly side of Wall street. In other words, $1,200,000 was offered for the premises and lot No. 86 Broadway, twenty-four feet wide.

This is the highest price ever offered per square foot for land in North America. The offer was refused. Benjamin D. Silliman, the owner, did not wish to sell, and he thought that if he did the property was worth $500 a square foot.

The highest previous price ever reported for real estate in the metropolis was offered and accepted for the property No. 13 and 15 Nassau street, at the northwest corner of Pine street. John H. Searles, the Sugar Trust magnate, paid $250 a square foot for this land last year. The two lots are larger than the Silliman plot on Broadway, yet Mr. Searles did not have to give as much for both as is asked for the tiny lot opposite Trinity Church.

Mr. Silliman, the owner of the $1,200,000 lot, will celebrate his ninety-fifth birthday on September 14 next. He is the oldest living graduate of Yale. He received his diploma in June, 1824. To him the old spot at the corner of our two busiest streets is an heirloom. He does not wish any one else to own it.

He has an office at No. 31 Nassau street, near by, and a beautiful home in Brooklyn; but the Wall street corner is the apple of his eye. Not long ago his fellow-townspeople presented him with a marble bust of himself, and hailed him as "Brooklyn's First Citizen," now that the venerable J. S. T. Stranahan is dead. But Mr. Silliman would have been even more gratified if they had made a combined offer of ten millions for his pet city lot and he could have replied:

"You're very generous, but I don't want to sell it."

The following article relative to Mr. Silliman, from the pen of Lavinia Hart, appeared in the New York "World," April 29, 1900:

Benjamin D. Silliman has returned to the active practice of the law.

Mr. Silliman will be ninety-five years old next September, and will soon celebrate the seventy-first anniversary of his admittance to the bar.

In all the history of professions and statesmanship there is no case akin to this, except it be that of Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, the world-famed diplomat of England, who at the age of ninety-two was called from his retirement to settle the complications resultant from the Russo-Turkish war.

But Mr. Silliman has broken that record by three years, and though he is nearing the century post, he is advancing with as brisk a tread as he had at the half or the quarter.

Mr. Silliman says:

"In the days when I was admitted to the bar the whole judicial force of the State was only a corporal's guard compared with that of to-day. The Supreme Court consisted of three Judges, John Savage being the Chief Justice, and Jacob Sutherland and William L. Marcy the Associate Justices. They held four general terms annually, at Albany in January and October, in this city in May and at Utica in July. The special terms were also held in Albany.

"It makes me shiver, even here in the comfort of my office, with the warm spring sunshine flooding in, when I think of those stage-coach and stage-sleigh day-and-night winter journeys through the snowdrifts, and often on the upper part of the river itself, when the ice was thick enough to bear the weight. And with an occasional capsize, for stage-drivers were not always members of temperance societies.

"Yet those old-time journeys to the courts were not wholly unpleasant. Perhaps they were accountable in part for that close fraternity that existed between members of the profession, which in some ways seems to have waned in these latter years. Those were the days of extreme courtesy, of a certain old-time eloquence which the rush and turmoil of life had not made superfluous. There was more of stateliness and reserve and formality than prevail at this day, and the bearing of lawyers toward one another contained more of the punctillio generally imputed to the days of duelling. Two of the learned Judges then on the bench in this city had been wounded in duels. Three members of the bar of that time occur to me who had killed their adversaries, and others who had been engaged in such affairs. But compulsion is not now, if it ever was, essential to courtesy.

"I think of all the men of the bar of olden time Aaron Burr made the most impression on me. When I was admitted he was the only eminent lawyer of the time. His appearance was remarkable. He was small of stature, slender, yet very formal and reserved in bearing. His eyes were keen and penetrating, his hair straight and stroked back, tied in a queue behind, and whether in the court-room, on the street or elsewhere, he always appealed to me as a man who was isolated and alone.

"Once I called on Aaron Burr with Dr. Hosack, who was the surgeon in his duel with Alexander Hamilton. His grace and elegance of manner and the ease and interest of his conversation, though tainted with a touch of cynicism, impressed me deeply.

TRIBUTE TO CHANCELLOR KENT.

"Chancellor Kent, with whom I had the honor and happiness to pass my clerkship as a student, was one of the grandest men the profession has ever known. When he ceased to be his memory remained with me as an example, and I have striven always to emulate his splendid character.

"When Chancellor Kent was admitted to the bar in 1785 there was not a solitary volume of reports of any court in this country. Now there are thousands of volumes of reports of this State alone, not to speak of those from all the other States. From this you may judge that the study of the law to-day is a very different undertaking from the holiday journeys and calling of our classic predecessors.

"There was less of law to be learned then, and more time to learn it. We were not in such a hurry then, and our libraries could almost stand on our mantels.

"Those were the days of eloquence, and such men as John Wells and Thomas Addis Emmett reached the summit of the profession, because their ability as orators was added to learning and logic.

"Our predecessors had few, if any, cases involving such grave questions and vast amounts as those which are now of every-day occurrence.

"In 1829 there were about 495 lawyers in this city; to-day there are more than 8,000.

"The fact that there are briefless barristers does not mean that there isn't work enough to go around.

"The present day with its gigantic business interests, its great corporations and unlimited commerce, calls young men to the bar with an urgency never known before.

"To the well-intentioned young man who selects the law as his profession it will be the means of building up his character. In no calling in life is the standard higher, of duty, of fidelity, of truth, of honor. Its ethics exact these virtues and often instil them where otherwise they would merely have been planted.

"I like to see the young men come into the profession, and I know of nothing that fills me with keener interest, or gives me more heartfelt satisfaction, than to see one of them reaching to that roomy, topmost pinnacle, where the honors given and received by profession and professional are a splendid illustration of the reciprocity theory."

13105. Epaphras Cook Ely was born at his father's residence, on Lombard St., now Trinity Place, New York, April 15, 1795. Moses Ely, the father, had taken a contract connected with the erection of Trinity Church, and for convenience occupied a residence in that vicinity. Epaphras inherited a portion of the family estate at Livingston and continued to hold it until his death, when it came to his children, who still retain it and make the old homestead their summer residence.

Epaphras Cook Ely when still a lad went with his brother Moses to engage in the tanning business near Newburgh, New York.

Soon after the war of 1812 broke out, and Moses Ely was called upon to serve in the militia for the national defense.

As Moses could ill afford to leave his family and his business, Epaphras volunteered to enter the army in his brother's stead, and was ordered with his regiment to Staten Island. A large force had been drawn to this point to repel an anticipated attack of the English.

Epaphras was a member of a Regiment of Detailed Militia in the Infantry Branch of the United States service. The Regiment was commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Michael Smith, and Epaphras Ely's name appears upon the roster of Captain Benjamin Horton's Company.

The troops were dismissed to their homes after a brief service, however, without having been attacked, the operations of the enemy having been carried on in another direction.

After the war Epaphras was for a time engaged in the tanning business at Esopus, N. Y.

In 1822 he married Julia Ann Kitchell, of Hanover, N. J., daughter of Ambrose Kitchell and Elizabeth Mulford. The family removed to New York City, Oct., 1825, and resided first in Stone Street, between William and Broad Streets, and afterwards in Duane Street, between Church and Chapel Streets, the latter now West Broadway.

Children of Epaphras Cook Ely and Julia Ann Kitchell:

4. Edwin Augustus, b. Aug. 15, 1836.
5. Maria Louise, b. June 2, 1846, m. Oct. 14, 1868, George Burritt Vanderpoel.

Mr. Ely engaged in the hide and leather business, first with Moses Ring (13102), under the firm-name of Ring & Ely, in Ferry St., and, on the retirement of Mr. Ring, continued in business on his own account until his death.

Mr. Ely died in 1864, and is interred in the Ely Cemetery at Livingston, N. J., where his wife is also buried.

He was a member of the Presbyterian Church, at one time attending Dr. Edwin F. Hatfield's church; afterwards attended in Second Ave., corner Fourteenth St., during the ministry of Dr. Asa D. Smith; and later was a member of Dr. William Adams' congregation, Madison Square Presbyterian Church.

Julia Ann Kitchell, of Hanover Neck, N. J., was born in 1800 and died in March, 1864, at her residence, 132 East Twenty-third St., southwest corner of Lexington Ave., New York City.

Ambrose Kitchell Ely, 47 West 57th St., New York, eldest son of Epaphras Cook Ely and Julia Ann Kitchell, was born at Livingston, Essex County, New Jersey, on the Ely Homestead Farm, January 31, 1823.

He first engaged in mercantile pursuits as an assistant to his father in the hide and leather business in Ferry St., New York, and after familiarizing himself with the business accepted a position with Messrs. Lapham, Corse & Co., at 18 Ferry St. Some years later he became a member of the firm of Thorne, Watson & Co., and remained with that firm during ten years.

Since his retirement from the firm of Thorne, Watson & Co., Mr. Ely has continued in business on his own account at 103 Gold St., corner of Frankfort St., New York.

Smith Ely, Jr., 47 West 57th St., New York, son of Epaphras Cook Ely and Julia Ann Kitchell, was born at the residence of his maternal grandfather, Ambrose Kitchell, in Hanover, Morris County, New Jersey, in 1825.

He was educated for the bar, studied law in the office of Frederic de Peyster, graduated from the University Law School, and was admitted to practice in 1846, but never practiced his profession, preferring to enter mercantile pursuits, in which he has been actively engaged in New York City for many years, being a member of the hide and leather trade.

Mr. Ely has always been a consistent Democrat. He was elected School Trustee in 1856, State Senator in 1857 (being the first Democrat ever elected from his district), and Member of the Board of Supervisors of the City and County of New York in 1860, retaining the position until the Board was abolished in July, 1870.

Mr. Ely was Commissioner of Public Instruction in 1873 and 1874; was a member of the 42nd Congress and of the 44th Congress from the 6th District of New York, when he served as Chairman of the House Committee on Expenditures of the Treasury Department.

In 1876, Mr. Ely was elected Mayor of New York City by a majority of fifty-six thousand over General Dix, the Republican candidate for Mayor. Mayor Ely's administration was marked by a wise and strict economy, and in each of the years of his term the net amount of the city debt was reduced, as well as the annual tax levy.

In 1895 ex-Mayor Ely was appointed Commissioner of the Department of Public Parks and Places in and for the City and County of New York.

Aaron Kitchell, grandfather of Julia Ann Kitchell, was born in 1744; died June 25, 1820; married, 1st, Phebe Farrand, born 1743, died March 12, 1807. He married a second wife, but they had no children.

The children of Aaron Kitchell and Phebe Farrand were:

Farrand, b. March 9, 1769, d. June 4, 1818, m. Esther Mulford, b. 1769, d. Dec. 16, 1842.

Aaron Kitchell was one of the patriot leaders in all that period of doubt and strife that preceded, attended and followed the War of the Revolution. He began life in the humble calling of blacksmith, but in a few years secured a prosperous business, and rose to a position of wide influence and esteem.

He was among the very earliest volunteers in the Continental Army, but he was soon found capable of larger service than in the field, and was put upon the Commission of Forfeited Estates and dealt with the Tories far and near.

After the close of the war he was for some years in the State Senate. In 1799 he was elected to Congress, and was re-elected continuously until 1807. He was then chosen U. S. Senator, and served four years in that capacity, until continued ill-health compelled him to resign.

Aaron Kitchell is described as a tall, spare, athletic person, who pined in the uncongenial life at Washington, and longed to return to his simple Hanover home. He would never accept office again, and was happier, he claimed, in going back from the Senate to the anvil than in going from the anvil to the Senate.

His old business occupied the rest of his long and honored life, and yielded him easily what little it took to make such a man rich.

This memorial is over his grave in Hanover churchyard:

"He was a man of sound, vigorous and discriminating mind;
Of affections warm, steady, charitable;
Of genius bright, active and penetrating;
Of industry vigorous and enterprising;
Of temper mild and resolute;
Of manner plain;
Of religion, a firm believer in Christ, and died in full assurance of a happy reward.
He was an active, faithful and zealous advocate of the freedom of his country, and for thirty-six years was a member in the State and National Councils.

Thus sleeps the man whom bounteous Heaven
Hath all the gifts of nature given;
Sound in judgment, with religious mind,
To his Saviour his breath resigned."

Mr. Kitchell was a zealous adherent of Jefferson, for whose election he labored strenuously and whom he supported against Burr in the long balloting of the two Houses of Congress that finally gave Jefferson the prize.

An instance is given of his deft handling of all matters, small or large. At a time when nearly all Morris County went crazed with an epidemic superstition in the famous "Morristown Ghost" affair, he almost alone kept his head in the general panic. He came to the haunted spot with "Old Hagar," his favorite five-foot and three-inch barrel gun, and proposed as a test to try a shot at his ghostship anywhere within ten rods.

The bare proposal seems to have put an end to the wretched delusion.

He left England Apr. 26, 1639, with a company of Puritan refugees, led by the Rev. Henry Whitfield, in the first vessel that anchored in the harbor of Quinnipiac, now New Haven, Conn.

In 1666 he removed to Newark with his son Samuel; the settlement ranged itself along what are now Broad, Market, Mulberry and Washington streets. The lots of Robert and Samuel Kitchell appear on the chart of the original town. Samuel's six acres fronted on the Lower Green, or Parade Ground, which to-day blesses all beholders of the beautiful park of Newark. Robert's six acres lay southeast of Samuel's, cornering upon it. So the lot fell to them Feb. 6, 1667, Robert drawing No. 12 and Samuel No. 15.

MONUMENT OF EPAPHRAS C. ELY
ELY CEMETERY, LIVINGSTON, NEW JERSEY

"In that year he purchased the property at No. 36 Broad St. and 32 New St. for business purposes, and continued in its occupation for thirteen years, when he formed a partnership with his brother-in-law, C. Bartlett, at No. 71 Fulton St. and No. 73 Beekman St., under the firm name of C. Bartlett & S. Ely, which continued for over thirty years.

"In 1837, he purchased a city residence at No. 714 Broadway, opposite Washington Place, which still remains (1884), and attracts the attention of passers-by by the contrast which it presents to the surrounding buildings. It is of white marble, with a Grecian portico, resting on mammoth marble pillars, and at the time it was constructed was the finest residence in the city.

"Mr. Ely for several years resided on Staten Island, near New Brighton, and during this period was elected to the office of County Supervisor and Member of Assembly, the only public positions he ever held. He took little active part in politics, but devoted himself earnestly to his business, and his reputation as a merchant was very high. In 1870, Mr. Ely became interested in copper mines, and was made President of the Vermont Copper Company, and removed to Ely, Vermont, where he resided until his death.

"The funeral was held on Wednesday, Aug. 5, 1884, at the place of his birth, Livingston, N. J., the summer residence of his nephews, Ambrose K. Ely and ex-Mayor Smith Ely, of New York.

"Mr. Smith Ely was of an old New England family, being the sixth in lineal descent from Richard Ely, the Cromwellian, who removed from Plymouth, England, to Lyme, Conn., in 1666.

"Richard Ely's wife was Elizabeth Fenwick, sister to the Colonel Fenwick who received from the British Crown a grant of the territory which is now the State of Connecticut.

"The Colonel's wife, Lady Fenwick, who was so distinguished in Colonial Annals, died and was buried at Saybrook, Conn.

"Notwithstanding his advanced age, Mr. Smith Ely retained his mental faculties unimpaired, and enjoyed excellent physical health until the hour of his death.

"He died suddenly, and apparently without pain, of heart failure, while dressing for dinner."

THE COLONNADE HOUSES ON BROADWAY—FORMER RESIDENCE OF SMITH ELY

From PELLETREAU'S EARLY NEW YORK HOUSES

These two houses stood directly opposite Washington Place and, with the exception of the Goelet house, were the last stylish residences on Broadway.

On June 1, 1833 Elisha Bloomer "hatter" purchased these two lots for $15,600 and upon them he erected two houses exactly alike and called them the Colonnade Houses. They were Nos. 714 and 716 Broadway. He sold house No. 714 to Smith Ely, a very prominent citizen, for $30,000, who made an agreement that "whereas the two houses are built in such style and manner as to present an entire front of great beauty and elegance and the marring and defacing, or alteration of either might depreciate the other it is agreed that neither be changed without the consent of the owner of the other."

DEATHS.

ELY—In this city, July 1, 1884, Sarah Olive, wife of Foster Ely, D. D.

Friends are invited to attend the funeral from her late residence, 184 West Genesee St., Saturday, July 5, at 2.30 P. M. Interment private.

(From the Syracuse Journal, Thursday Evening, July 3, 1884.)

Sarah Olive Ely, daughter of William Horace and Mary C. Ely, of Brownville, Jefferson County, New York, in her sixteenth year married Samuel C. Brewster, one of the most prominent and influential citizens of this city. Introduced to the highest social circles, she soon became their brightest ornament, her extraordinary powers of mind and heart and her natural graces making her at once a leader. Her hospitable reception of the Right Rev. Bishop Huntington, when he took up his residence here, was an event to be remembered, and was characteristic of the old-time hospitality she was wont to dispense with open doors. Subsequent to the death of Mr. Brewster she was, on the 20th of February, 1873, united in marriage with Rev. Foster Ely, D. D., her second cousin, then rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Newport, Ky., and now rector of Grace Church, Lockport, N. Y. In both these cities, where, after her marriage, the major portion of her time was passed, she quickly assumed the same high social position she had ever enjoyed in Syracuse, modified and brought into truer harmony with her natural instincts by the position accorded her as a clergyman's wife.

Mrs. Ely's life, devoted as it was to religious work, to charitable enterprises, to social obligations, was nevertheless pre-eminently literary, in accordance with her natural tastes and ample opportunities. Though graduating at a first-class seminary, she considered her education as yet hardly begun. Accordingly, even after her marriage, she diligently pursued her favorite studies and until confined to her chamber by the long and painful illness that ended her earthly life she was devoted to literature.

Of her poems we recall, among others, "Twilight Musing," "Typographical Errors of My First Poem," "Welcome Home" (addressed and read to the 149th New York Volunteers), "Song of the Summer Birds," "Ruth," "Not Knowing," "No," "Alone" (suggested by the untimely death of her only brother, Theodore R. Ely, an accomplished officer of the United States Navy). The introductory verse of "Alone" reads:

"The river ran gold with the light on its breast,
And the waves went eddying by,
As the wooing sun kissed the lips of the West,
Gilding the throne where my love sought rest
Under the evening sky.
Now sadly alone by the river I stray,
For my love has left me this many a day,
Left me to droop and to die."

Not caring for public recognition, most of her poems were given to the press over a nom de plume. Verse after verse she penned for no other reason than that she loved the muse. The authorship of two of her best sonnets has been claimed by another.

As a prose writer, her style is clear and terse. It is the garb of beautiful and elevated thoughts. She seldom wrote without a definite aim. Many an able article on the living issues of the day has she anonymously written to influence public opinion. For many years as secretary of the "Syracuse Home Association" it devolved upon her to write a great deal, and it is not too much to say that her brilliant imagery rendered attractive even the dry details embodied in the reports of this benevolent institution.

To the exertions of Mrs. Ely—then Mrs. Samuel C. Brewster—the Home Association is largely indebted for its present edifice. Syracuse papers placed their columns at her service; and earnest, touching appeals were read from all the city pulpits.

But her most pretentious work, a novel now about ready for publication, will particularly show her excellence as a prose writer. It gives her rich fancy greater range among the varied topics familiar to her cultivated mind.

Lydia Ely has established for herself a reputation for charity and good works recognized throughout the United States, and while it is unnecessary that we enumerate here even the more prominent beneficences with which she has actively been associated, yet the notice of her name cannot fail to suggest the latest of her public enterprises.

The Soldiers' Monument at Milwaukee, Wis., has been entirely erected from funds collected by Lydia Ely.

The sum of $30,000, raised by her unaided efforts, was completed in October, 1899, by the sale to Captain Pabst of her autograph book for $8,000. The volume contains 150 pounds of autographs mixed with some of the brightest things in the way of quotation. Autographs of artists, dramatists and statesmen mingle with those of scholars and ecclesiastics, and all with some appropriate sentiment.

President Cleveland and his Cabinet, President McKinley and his Cabinet, U. S. Supreme Court Judges, U. S. Circuit Court Judges, 54th and 55th Congresses, the Army and Navy, and U. S. Civil List, form no inconsiderable part of this mighty work, which is of the greatest interest and value and reflects infinite credit on the skill and patient industry of Lydia Ely.

SKETCH OF GOVERNOR WOLCOTT OF MASSACHUSETTS,

Whose Father was J. Huntington Wolcott, a son of Frederick Wolcott by His First Wife.

Roger Wolcott is a descendant of a distinguished ancestry. His great-great-grandfather was Roger Wolcott, Governor of Connecticut, and second in command in the famous expedition which captured Louisburg in 1745. His great-grandfather, Oliver Wolcott, was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, major-general in the American Revolution, and Governor of Connecticut at the time of his death. His grandfather was Frederick Wolcott, for more than thirty years judge of probate in Connecticut, who, twice refusing a nomination as Governor of Connecticut, actively aided to elect to that position his brother, who had previously served as Secretary of the Treasury in the Cabinets of Washington and John Adams. J. Huntington Wolcott, his father, was born at Litchfield, Conn., August 29, 1804. At an early age he removed to Boston, where he entered the employ of A. & A. Lawrence & Co., merchants. While yet a young man he was made a partner in the firm. This house took a leading part in the development of the great manufacturing and commercial enterprises of New England. Roger Wolcott was born in Boston, July 13, 1847, and was graduated at Harvard in 1870, being orator of his class. Choosing law for a profession, he was graduated at Harvard Law School in 1874. In 1877-79 he served in the Common Council of Boston, and in 1882-4 sat in the State House of Representatives. In 1892 and again in 1893, 1894, and 1895 he was elected Lieutenant-Governor of Massachusetts. Mr. Wolcott was married in 1874 to Miss Edith Prescott, a descendant of Colonel William Prescott, of Bunker Hill fame, and a granddaughter of William H. Prescott, the historian. On the death of Governor Greenhalge, in March last, Lieutenant-Governor Wolcott, by virtue of his office, became acting Governor. Mr. Wolcott is a lawyer, with an office in Boston. He is a Republican in politics, but in 1884 he voted for Grover Cleveland.

The N. Y. Herald of August 2, 1900 announces the acceptance by Gov. Wolcott of the post of Ambassador to Italy tendered him by President McKinley, to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of General Draper.

Samuel Griswold Goodrich has achieved so prominent a place in literature as to be entitled in a family genealogy to something more than the mere mention of his name.

The Genealogy of the Goodrich Family by Lafayette Wallace Case, M. D., page 221, etc., gives a very interesting account of this eminent writer, and from it we quote briefly:

"Samuel Griswold Goodrich (Samuel 5, Elizur 4, David 3, David 2, William 1), was born in Ridgefield, Conn., August 19, 1793. At fifteen years of age he left his home to earn his living in Danbury Conn., and, while faithful to his duties, pursued his studies as best he could, and with such zeal that midnight study told upon his health and impaired his sight for life. In 1811 he worked in Hartford, where he joined a literary society and enjoyed the helpful friendship of Miss Huntley, afterward Mrs. Sigourney. In 1812 he had a taste of war, his company of artillery being ordered to New London, where some British ships lay in the offing; but he saw no real fighting. At the time of the famous Hartford Convention he lived with his uncle, Governor Chauncey Goodrich, then Mayor, and knew and studied the brilliant circle of men surrounding the Governor.

"In 1818 he married and settled in Hartford as a publisher, where he saw the dawn of American literature. He now began to write short stories for children.

"In 1823 he went to Europe for the benefit of his health. On his return he settled in Boston and wrote his first Parley Book, 'Tales of the Sea,' the success of which may be said to have been equalled only by that of the volumes which followed it. He often wrote fourteen hours a day, much of this by dictation to his wife, she seated in the light, he behind a screen, in constant fear of blindness. This labor brought on heart trouble, and in 1832 he again visited Europe for advice.

"He carried very flattering letters of introduction on this journey. Oliver Wolcott, Governor of Connecticut, spoke of him in the highest terms. John Quincy Adams sent him three letters, Dewitt Clinton presented him to John Jacob Astor, Timothy Pitkin to Richard Rust, and, later, Daniel Webster to Lord Derby.

"He speedily became a favorite in English society, and received much attention from Sir Walter Scott, the Lockharts, Mary Howitt, Lady Blessington, and others.

"In 1829 he commenced in Boston the publication of an annual, entitled 'The Token, or Atlantic Souvenir,' and to this many distinguished authors contributed, among them Nathaniel Hawthorne, who was then just beginning his literary career and whose merits were recognized by Mr. Goodrich.

"In his 'Recollections of a Life Time,' Mr. Goodrich states that he had been the author or editor of one hundred and seventy volumes.

"Charles Sumner once said that at the bottom of a Cornish mine he saw two books; one was the Bible, and the other was 'Peter Parley's Tales of the Sea.'

"At the time of Mr. Goodrich's death some eight million copies of his books had been sold, and since that time probably a million more have been printed.

"Mr. Goodrich was a good public speaker and debater. He represented his district in the Massachusetts Legislature in 1836, and took a prominent part in the presidential campaign of 1840. He was made U. S. Consul to Paris in 1851 by President Fillmore.

"Mr. Goodrich returned from Europe in 1855 and purchased a house in New York, where he lived for several years, spending his summers in a quaint old red brick mansion in Southbury, Conn.

"He died suddenly at his home in Ninth St., New York City, May 9, 1860, at the age of sixty-seven. His remains were buried at Southbury on the following Sunday.

"He married, first, in January, 1818, Adeline Gratia, daughter of Stephen Rowe Bradley, for sixteen years United States Senator from Vermont. She died in June, 1822. Mr. Goodrich married, second, in January, 1826, Mary Booth, daughter of a prominent merchant in Boston. She died in 1868.

S. C. Goodrich was certainly a pioneer in juvenile literature. I heard him say, laughing, that his attention was turned in that direction by seeing the advertisement of books "adapted to children and persons of the meanest capacity!"

BRONCK FAMILY NOTES.

Jonas Bronck was the emigrant to this country and settled near Albany, where he purchased land of the Indians, Jan. 13, 1662. Pieter Bronck, his son, was granted a patent for land at Coxsackie, in Greene County, New York, known as the "Bronck Patent." A residue of this estate is now in possession of his descendant, Mrs. Adelaide Ely Bronck Lampman.

Pieter Bronck left his estate to his son Jan, who married Commerje Leendertse, daughter of Leendert Philipse Conyn. His will is dated Sep. 9, 1738, and was proved Oct. 6, 1743. He was a lieutenant in 1709; Justice of the Peace for Albany in 1728.

His son, Jan Leendertse Bronck, married Elsje Van Buren. He was captain of militia in 1740, and was made major of the 11th Regt. Oct. 20, 1775, by act of the Provincial Congress.

Jan had but one child, viz.:

Leonard, b. May 11, 1751, d. Apr. 22, 1828; m. Jan. 11, 1796, Tryntje (or Catherine) Vandenburg, daughter of Robert Vandenburg and Elbertje Van Buren. He was member of Assembly, 1786 to 1798; State Senator, 1800. Children:

Leonard, b. June 29, 1797, m. Maria, daughter of John Ely, M. D.; Leonard d. Feb. 3, 1872. Children:

1. Edwin Ely, b. ———, d. s. June 22, 1861.
2. Leonard, b. ———, d. s. July 23, 1854.
3. Adelaide, b. ———; m. Dec. 5, 1871, Rev. Lewis, son of Obadiah Lampman and Elizabeth Vandenburg.

Leonard Bronck graduated at Union College in 1820, studied law, and was admitted to the bar soon after.

His son, Edwin Ely, graduated at Williams College, in 1850; was admitted to the bar in 1852; died June 22, 1861.

—Hist. Greene Co., N. Y., pp. 254 and 423.

It is thought that the State of New York adopted the coat-of-arms of Jonas Bronck with some slight modification.

OLD COXSACKIE HOUSE.

Time has dealt gently with the old stone house of the Bronck Patent, standing in the Coxsackie Valley, surrounded by a thousand acres of the original patent.

Old as it is, over two centuries, it bears little evidence of the ceaseless wear of wind, sun and storm, but appears as if it still might stand through coming ages.

The brick addition, looked upon as quite modern, bears the date of 1738, and forms part of the individual history attached to every homestead that has remained in a family. The bricks, brought from Holland, kept up the love for that country, inherited through the wife of Jonas Bronck, the emigrant, even if traits of character must be attributed to Jonas himself from his Swedish nationality.

The "Mail and Express" of Jany. 9, 1897, informs us more fully as to the history of Jonas Bronck:

No. 1,190 (Answer).—Jonas Bronck is many times referred to in the various histories of New Amsterdam, and always in terms of respect. He arrived at Manhattan Island early in July, 1639, on the ship Fire of Troy, with his family and servants. Bronck was from Copenhagen, and left there for Amsterdam. His family originated in Sweden, where it has long been known. He became "Seigneur," or first proprietor, of a large tract of land lying just north of the Harlem River, where he built a very substantial stone house. In this he had a fine library, filled with treatises, in Danish and Latin, on law, history and divinity. While he held no offices in the government, this was due to a personal inclination, and not to lack of ability.

BRONCK HOUSE AT COXSACKIE, NEW YORK
PROPERTY OF MRS. ADELAIDE ELY BRONCK LAMPMAN
FROM THE MAIL & EXPRESS, APR. 23, 1898

He was a cultivated gentleman, far above the ordinary type of colonist, and it is probable he would have figured prominently in State affairs had his life been spared, but he died in April, 1663, deeply lamented by all in the colony. His widow, who was Antonia Slaghburn, married the noted Arendt van Curler, of Rensselaerwyck, and died at Schenectady, December 19, 1676. His son, Peter Jonassen Bronck, in 1696 received the patent for the land at Coxsackie, and what remains of the Bronck Patent is now owned by Mrs. Adelaide Ely Bronck Lampman. D. R. E. C.

County of Galveston.

I, Louisa Ely Caplen (née Edwards), of Galveston County, Texas, do by these presents certify that I am a daughter and heir-at-law of Gershom Edwards, deceased, who resided during his lifetime in the State of New York. I had only one sister, whose name was Mary Ann Edwards, she and I being the only children of the said Gershom Edwards, deceased. Our mother's name was Jerusha Hallock. (Jerusha was daughter of Lois Ely.) Our father had brothers, among whom I remember Henry, William, and Dr. B. Benjamin Edwards, who married a Miss Nancy S. Jackson, of Bloomingdale, New York. Our father had four sisters, viz.: Ann Edwards, who married a gentleman by the name of Warner. She had one son. The next sister of my father was named Abbie Edwards. She married a gentleman by the name of Skidmore. She afterwards married for her second husband Judge Mathews. His next sister, Jerusha Edwards, married William Lewis and had several children. They lived on Howard Street, New York, when I was a child. Our father had another sister, Mary Edwards, who married a gentleman by the name of Cook. Her daughter was named Harriet Cook, who married, I think, in New York.

Our father, Gershom Edwards, was born on Long Island, New York, and kept store there during the Revolutionary War. My uncle William, my father's brother, lived in the village of Verona, Utica, in those days. Our father had no sons, so Mary Ann Edwards and I, Louisa Ely Edwards, now Caplen, were his only children and heirs-at-law. Our father's brother Henry died at sea. William had several children, viz.: Jerome, Robert, and William, and I think two daughters. My sister, Mary Ann, and I are the grand-daughters of Lois Ely of Lyme, Connecticut, at the old Ely landing. Our father and mother died in New York.

Witness my hand at Galveston, Texas, this 3rd day of June, A. D., 1891.

(Signed.) LOUISA ELY CAPLEN.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 3rd day of June, A. D., 1891.

Witness my hand and official seal at Galveston, Texas, the day and year last above written.

Mr. Editor:

It is more than probable that the Henry Edwards (who was lost at sea) is the intermentioned Henry, and to whom it is more than likely that George III. gave the 99-year lease of the millions of property, on account of the nobility of the family, covering from Stewart's to beyond Wall St. and Trinity Church; value, $300,000,000. Extract from letter of Abraham P. Ely, Ely Reunion Pamphlet, page 94, containing a reference to Samuel Selden Warner:

This famous old North Quarter Schoolhouse (although I have not the exact date) must have been erected a hundred and fifty, perhaps nearly two hundred years ago. It was taken down a few years since, removed, and rebuilt about one hundred and fifty rods south. If the studs and rafters of this building could talk they would reveal many incidents interesting for a memorial publication. I venture to assert that no schoolhouse in the land has sent out more men and women of ability, worth of character, and religious influence. Hundreds of Beckwiths, Elys, Lords, Perkins, Sterlings, received their first instruction here.

I do not find that any of the children of that old generation have surpassed their fathers in ability, or in those traits of character which go to make good and valuable citizens.

Another fact may be noted. The sons who remained at home and died upon the ancestral acres were the superior members of these large families. This fact is no disparagement to those fathers whose children shall assemble upon this occasion from the East, West, North or South. During one season, I remember, there was much disorder in the school. The next winter Mr. Samuel Selden Warner was employed. He was a large, powerful man, and had the reputation of a good and severe teacher. These large boys no sooner showed disobedience of rules than Mr. Warner sent two lads into the woods for hickory rods. They returned with half a dozen, too long to wield under the ceiling of the room. These were curtailed to six feet, toughened in the ashes, and then applied with a vigor I never witnessed before or since. This whipping ended the disturbance.

I wish it distinctly understood that no Ely boys were among these naughty rioters.

Appleton's Cyclopædia of American Biography has the following notice of Ezra S. Ely, which is sufficiently interesting to be quoted in full:

Ezra Stiles Ely was born in Lebanon, Conn., June 13, 1786, and died in Philadelphia, June 18, 1861. He graduated at Yale College in 1803, studied theology with his father, Rev. Zebulon Ely, and was ordained pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Colchester, Conn., in 1806.

He was next chaplain of the New York City Hospital; subsequently pastor of the Pine Street Church, Philadelphia until 1844, and of the North Liberties Church in that city until 1851, when he had a paralytic stroke.

He undertook to establish a college in Missouri in 1834, but the effort was not entirely successful in his hands.

He was one of the founders and trustees of Jefferson Medical College, and donated the lot and erected the building for that institution. He was active in works of benevolence, giving during his life about $50,000 to various institutions, including Jefferson Medical College and Marion College, Mo.

Washington College, Tenn., gave him the degree of D. D. He was the author of many valuable and well-known religious works and works of instruction and explanation in regard to the Scriptures.

When he resigned his pastorate, he took up his residence at Easthampton, Mass.

The Whiting Family is one of the oldest and most respected of New Haven families. The following item is quoted from the Genealogy of the Ingersolls, of Hampshire, by Lieut. Charles Stedman Ripley, U. S. N.:

"Jared, born June 3, 1722, son of Mr. Jonathan Ingersoll, and Sarah, his wife, married Hannah Whiting of New Haven, daughter of the Hon. Joseph Whiting of New Haven, August 1, 1743. Col. Whiting was a son of Rev. John Whiting, fourth minister of Hartford, Conn., and Phebe, his wife, daughter of Thomas Gregson of New Haven, and grandson of Hon. William Whiting,' one of the first settlers of New Haven.

"Jared Ingersoll and his wife, Hannah Whiting, had two children, James and Jared. The latter graduated at Yale College in 1766, and was an eminent lawyer of Philadelphia, member of Congress, and of the Convention which framed the Constitution. In 1812 he was the Federal candidate for the Vice-Presidency; resigned the office of Attorney-General of Pennsylvania in 1816; died Oct. 31, 1822, aged seventy-three; was at that time Judge of the United States District Court of Pennsylvania."

After living for some time in New York, David Collins finally removed to New Haven, Conn., and established his family and residence there, where his widow and children still reside. He died at his home on Hillhouse Avenue, August 10, 1861.

Mr. and Mrs. Collins had five children, Clara Ely, Mary, Edith, Charles Henry, and Marion, of whom the three former were born at Hartford, Marion at New York, and Charles at New Haven.

Mrs. Collins resides at New Haven, with three daughters—Clara, Edith, and Marion, wife of Godfrey Dunscombe, Esq. Charles, the only son, died several years ago. Mary died, at the age of 11 years, at her father's residence in Lafayette Place, New York.

Marion Ely, youngest daughter of David Collins and Clarissa Ely, married, Feb. 28, 1882, Jonathan Edwards, M. D., of New Haven, son of Jonathan Edwards and Maria Champion. He graduated from Yale College in 1863, and also, in 1867, from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City. He died at New Haven, July 19, 1886.

Dr. Jonathan Edwards was the fifth in descent from the Rev. Jonathan Edwards of Northampton, the distinguished theologian and metaphysician.

His widow married, May 8, 1890, Godfrey Dunscombe, of New York, who was born at Quebec, Canada.

Marion, youngest daughter of David Collins and Clarissa Ely, married (2) Godfrey Dunscomb, Esq., of New York City, eldest son of John William Dunscomb and Caroline Birche Durnford, daughter of General Elias Durnford, Royal Engineer, of Tunbridge Wells, England.

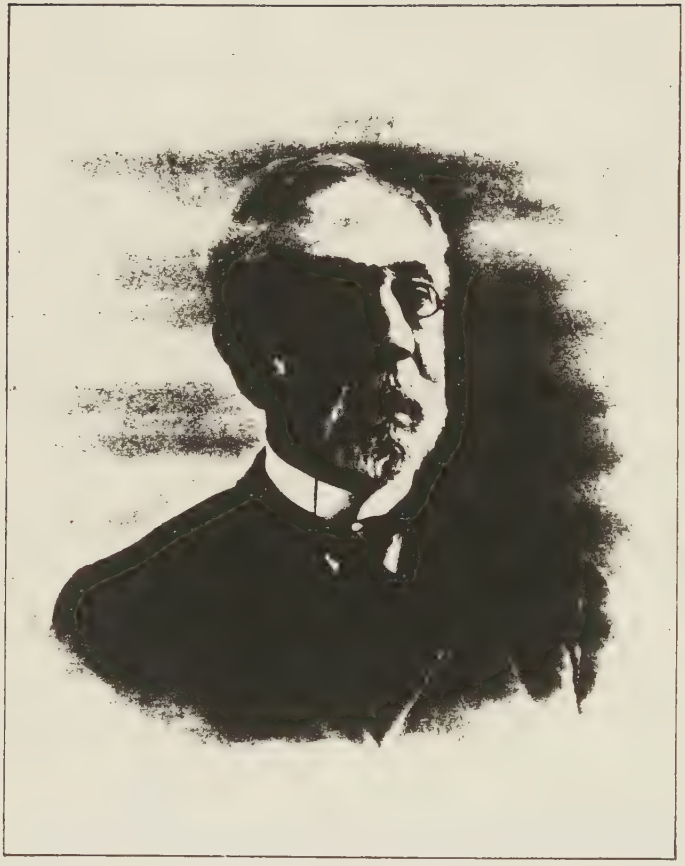
His father was Collector of the Port of Quebec, appointed by the Queen, and held the place for thirty-three years, till pensioned.



WILLIAM D. ELY
PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND

SIXTH GENERATION.

The father of John W. Dunscomb was Mr. John Dunscomb, of Bermuda, and later of Newfoundland, where he built the old Cathedral at St. Johns (now burned). In it was his large Memorial Chancel window. St. Johns (the town) was named for him. He was a man of great wealth and generosity. A photograph of this window is preserved in the family, with the memorial inscription, indicating the love and veneration in which his memory was held.

24563. William Davis Ely, eldest son of William (2456) and Clarissa May (Davis) Ely, was born at Hartford, June 16, 1815. He graduated at Yale College in 1836, and, later, was recalled to officiate as tutor there. He attended several post-graduate courses at the professional schools, and studied law at the New Haven Law School, under Judges Daggett and Hitchcock. After a year of travel in Europe, he was admitted to practice in the Courts of Connecticut, Nov. 7, 1843.

On March 5, 1847, on motion of Hon. Roger S. Baldwin, then Senator, he was admitted as an Attorney and Counsellor, in the Supreme Court of the United States at Washington, D. C.

He was engaged principally in railroad practice and affairs.

He married, April 25, 1854, Anne Crawford Allen, daughter of Hon. Zachariah Allen, LL.D., of Providence, R. I., and Eliza Harriet Arnold, his wife.

Their children:

1. Harriet Allen, b. Feb. 26, 1855, d. Apr. 26, 1862.
2. William, b. June 17, 1858, m. July 24, 1894, Cora Codman.

Miss Anne Crawford Allen was a lineal descendant (in the 15th generation) from Raoul Bernon, founder of the La Rochelle branch of the Bernon family, a younger branch of the House of Burgundy.* Gabriel Bernon, the distinguished Huguenot, on the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, took refuge in England. Thence, in 1688, he emigrated to America, bringing, at his own charge, more than forty compatriot refugees to found Oxford, in Massachusetts, where he had bought a large plantation. He resided some years in Boston. Later, he went to Newport, R. I., and finally to Providence.

Arnold's History of Rhode Island says that "to his devotion, persevering piety, and untiring zeal, the first three Episcopal churches of Rhode Island owe their origin." He died in Providence in 1736 at the age of ninety-two years, and was buried beneath his pew in St. John's Episcopal Church, where his tomb is still to be seen.

His family was a stay and a support of the Huguenot cause in La Rochelle, both before and after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes.

*See Rev. C. W. Baird's "Huguenot Emigration to America," in vert. "Bernon."

Mrs. Ely was born in Providence, June 9, 1818, and died there, at Mr. Ely's residence, Oct. 15, 1888.

Harriet Allen, daughter of William D. Ely and Anne Crawford Allen, was born at Hartford, Feb. 26, 1855, and died at Providence, April 26, 1862. A beautiful portrait of her, painted by Staigg, is in Mr. Ely's possession.

William Ely, son of William D. Ely and Anne Crawford Allen, was born at Providence, June 17, 1858. He graduated in the scientific department of Brown University, June, 1878, and spent the following year (1878-9) attending the post-graduate course of the Scientific School of Yale University at New Haven, where his father, grandfather, and great-grandfather had graduated.

July 24, 1894, he married, at St. Paul's Church, Brookline, Mass., Miss Cora Codman, only daughter of James M. Codman and Henrietta Gray (Sargent) Codman, his wife.

Miss Codman was born in Brookline, Mass., June 12, 1874. They reside in Providence.

24565. Richard Sheldon Ely, second son of William Ely (2456) and Clarissa May Davis, was born May 25, 1818. He died at his residence on Fifth Avenue, New York, March 7, 1894.

When only 17 years old he came to New York and was connected with the importing house of "St. Felix." In the great fire of 1835, Mr. Ely succeeded, single-handed, in saving the books and accounts of the firm. Thus, all their insurance and other claims were settled promptly and without difficulty. Later, he engaged in the business on his own account, and during eight years resided in Paris.

September 17, 1849, he married (1) Lucinda Morgan, daughter of Matthew Morgan and Lucinda Lee, of New York City.

After living some time in Paris, in 1853 he engaged in the banking and shipping business, and went to Liverpool, where he remained for six years. While there, from 1853 to 1859, he was elected President of the American Chamber of Commerce in that city. In 1860 he withdrew from active business and returned to America, purchasing a beautiful country seat, called Deercliff, at Avon, Conn., as a residence. It is situated on the mountain near Hartford. Though Avon was his residence, he spent a large portion of his time at his dwelling house, on Fifth Avenue, New York.

After the death of his first wife, Mr. Ely married, April 18, 1872, (2) Caroline Phelps Ingersoll, a daughter of Major Edward Ingersoll, who for many years was on duty at the United States Armory in Springfield, Mary Emeline Ely, eldest daughter of Deacon Richard and Mary Ely, was born in North Lyme, Conn., Nov. 15th, 1810. Died in Satara, in Western India, June 3d, 1856.

The death of her brother Elias (No. 24953) was to her an overwhelming sorrow. The desire of her heart had long been to accompany him as a missionary to some distant country.

In 1852 she removed to Chicago to join her immediate family. A time came, however, when she was released from her duty as a daughter. Providence seemed again to beckon her to missionary work.

On August 15th, 1854, she was married to Rev. S. B. Munger. The September following she sailed (the first missionary from the Second Presbyterian Church of Chicago) for India.

She landed joyfully in Bombay, having suffered on the voyage with grievous seasickness. With ardor she entered upon her Christian work, deeply pained with the degradation in which she found the women of India. For nineteen months she labored to convey to these debased sisters the blessings of Christianity. In the spring of 1856 she was seized with an illness that, after a month of intense physical suffering, terminated her life.

She met death with such songs of victory her sick room was said to be "like an outer court of the mansions of the blest."

The following faultless rhymes are from the pen of the talented writer, Mrs. Julia P. Ballard, of Easton, Penn.:

THE ELY REUNION.

In this hallowed retreat where we gather to-day,
Though far from the homestead we've wandered away,
With words of true welcome for grave and for gay
We'll forget the long years we have all been astray;
And, as children returned to the home of one mother,
With heart and with hand we will greet one another.

From homes in the east, and from far western plains,
Where "He who transplanted" still kindly "sustains;"*
The home-call has thrilled through our blood-blended veins,
And we hasten to-day to the home of one mother
To re-link golden chains as we greet one another.

We come with true hearts and our children we bring
To the noble old State to which fondly we cling;
Of whose splendor of government proudly we sing.
In the days when a Winthrop our charter could bring;

(Though its fate seemed to hang on the Governor's ring,
Which his ancestor had as a gift from the king!)
And which sheltered us long with its broad spreading wing;
To this royal old State, to this home of one mother,
We hasten to-day to embrace one another.

And we'll listen in silence while hovering near
Are those we would honor by gathering here;
Who rejoice in affection that holds them still dear,
And which royally triumphs o'er time and o'er fear;
As they call to Re-union in that blessed sphere
Where love is eternal, and life is all clear;
Where the children all safe in the home of one mother,
In the land of the Ransomed shall meet one another.

* "Qui transtulit sustinet." The motto of Connecticut.

BENJAMIN—PIERSON.

Marriage of a greatgrandson of William Halsey and Maria Ogilvie.

The marriage of Miss Sara Louise, daughter of Mrs. Julia Baker Pierson, to Mr. William Halsey Benjamin, occurred on Thursday evening June 23rd, at 8:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's mother, Morristown. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Albert I. White.

The bride was married in travelling gown, and the ceremony was witnessed by nineteen guests.

The flowers were beautiful, consisting of palms, ferns, red begonias, hydrangeas and daisies, and the corner of the room where the bridal party stood was banked to the ceiling with ferns, palms and hydrangeas. The bride came in on arm of groom, there being no attendants. Miss Hecht, of Jersey City Heights, played the "Bridal Chorus" from Wagner's Lohengrin, and after the ceremony Mendelssohn's wedding march.

Among the presents was a quantity of old silver, the gift of the bride's mother; one piece of which was nearly 200 years old, engraved with a crest bearing the motto, "Tandem Vincitin." On account of the serious illness of Peter O. Halsey, grandfather of the groom, the wedding trip was postponed.—Madison Eagle, July 1, 1898.

DEATH OF MRS. HALSEY.

She Used to Live in Columbia Street and Look Out on the East River.

Mrs. Maria Ogilvie Halsey, the widow of William Halsey and daughter of Judge Peter Ogilvie, who was a resident of this city over a hundred and fifty years ago, died at Afton, Morris county, N. J., on Tuesday, a week ago, aged 102 years. Her mother's maiden name was Ann De Witt. Mrs. Halsey was born in this city on Oct. 3, 1793, and during her childhood and early womanhood was an attendant at the First Presbyterian Church, which at that time stood in Wall street between Nassau street and Broadway. She was baptized there on Nov. 2, 1793. At the time of her birth the family lived in a handsome house in Liberty street, and afterward they moved uptown; that is, to the corner of Broadway and Murray street.

They had a large summer residence bounded on three sides by Sheriff, Delancey, and Columbia streets, where they afterward lived permanently. This property is still in possession of the family, and, though large sums were offered for it repeatedly, Mrs. Halsey always refused to part with it. During the latter years of her life Mrs. Halsey talked often of her life in the old Columbia street house. The view from the house to the East River was at that time entirely unobstructed, and when the tide was unusually high the water frequently came up to the house Mrs. Halsey loved to tell of how she sat on her father's piazza and saw the captured British ship Macedonian brought up from the lower bay and towed into the Navy Yard.

Mrs. Halsey's marriage occurred in 1814. Her husband also was a New Yorker. He died at Hanover, N. J., Dec. 3, 1878. They lived in this city at the corner of East Broadway and Gouverneur street up to 1875, when they moved to New Jersey and took up a permanent residence in Morris county

Mrs. Halsey was a woman of great force of character, and she retained her mental faculties up to the time of her death. She inherited a large amount of property, a great deal of which she di ided among her children during her lifetime. She also gave largely to charities. Sne had five children, Dr. William Halsey, of Caldwell, N. J.; Peter O. Halsey, of Hanover; Isaac Halsey, of this city, who died in 1889, leaving one son, Edward H. Halsey; Maria, the wife of the late William H. Ogilvie who died in 1887, leaving two children, the late Mrs. Ida Ingersoll and Clinton Ogilvie, the landscape painter; and Mrs. Annie O. Hunter, who died at Caldwell, N. J., in 1887, leaving one son, Charles Wilfred Hunter.

Mrs. Halsey was buried at Hanover. She leaves an estate valued at $300,000. The executors are ex-Mayor Halsey, of Morristown, N. J., and ex-Mayor Smith Ely, of this city.—New York Sun, Dec. 11, 1895.

We quote from "The Central Baptist" of St. Louis, June 24, 1897, the following on the death of Brother Ely:

Lewis B. Ely was born in Frankfort, Ky., in May, 1825, and was therefore a little more than 72 years old when he died. At the age of 13 he came with his parents to Carroll Co., Mo., where the rest of his life has been spent. At the age of 16 he was converted and united with the Carrollton Baptist Church, of which he has been a member for 56 years. He lived a life that shined with increasing radiance all the way to the end. His heart grew riper and carried more of heaven's sunshine as the days went on. Some men are endowed with one or two gifts which enable them to attain success in a particular calling but do not fit them for other places. Brother Ely was a well rounded man. As a hired boy in a store he made himself capable of becoming a partner and a proprietor. He prospered in the management of a large business without becoming sordid or worldly. He allowed nothing secular to overshadow or suppress his religious life. He was so deeply in love with life and duty, and right doing was so thoroughly the habit of his life that it was the easiest and most natural thing for him to do good. Long since he passed the point where he had to hold a debate with his will when questions of duty presented themselves. His heart never grew old. He loved children, and was the loved superintendent of his church Sunday-school for more than 20 years, giving it up only because a larger work for the Lord called him from home. For a number of years he was President of the Missouri Baptist Sunday School Convention and greatly promoted its interests. He always carried in his pockets beautiful cards with wholesome mottoes, giving them out to old and young, selecting those which wisely fitted each case. Since its formation he has been moderator of the Missouri Valley Association, and has helped it into an efficient organization. Three times he was moderator of the General Association, and was Vice President of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Perhaps the largest service he has rendered the denomination in an official way and the world at large was through his connection with William Jewell College. It was in honor of his splendid service that the Ely Hall was erected some years ago, and by it his name will be perpetuated in the college life.

Some years ago he prepared the Berean Bible Readings, and at his own expense he published and gave out thousands of these little tracts.

Bro. Ely was a good and great man. His goodness made him great. His heart was tender, his impulses were pure, his motives were energetic and his aspirations were noble. He was an inspiration to young and old alike, and was every man's friend. No man has ever lived among Missouri Baptists who filled so important a place in our denominational life, who touched with a helping hand so many of our enterprises or who impressed himself so thoroughly upon all people. Every Baptist home in Missouri was open to his coming, and every hand was glad to grasp his. There is universal mourning over his death, and he will be sadly missed in all our gatherings and councils. On Wednesday afternoon of this week he is to be laid to rest at his home in Carrollton.

The following notice appeared in the New York papers on the occasion of Mr. Ely's sudden death:

Frank Ely, of the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Company of St. Louis, Mo., died of pneumonia at the Murray Hall Hotel in this city early on Friday morning. He was forty-seven years old, was born in Kentucky, and was brought up by his brother, of the firm of Hill & Ely, at Carrollton, Mo. He then went to St. Louis, where he entered the employ of the firm of Crow & McCreary, dry goods merchants, as a clerk. The name of the firm was subsequently changed to that of Crow, Hargadine & Co. Mr. Ely married a niece of Senator McCreary, and was admitted to membership in the firm. Later Mr. Walker was taken into partnership, and the firm became Ely, Walker & Co. In 1886, Mr. Ely reorganized the firm into a corporation, under its present name, and it has been regarded as the leading dry goods establishment in that city.

Mr. Ely came to this city three weeks ago and was suddenly seized with a chill while at dinner. His wife was telegraphed for and immediately came on and nursed him. He seemed to rally, but suffered a relapse. He leaves a widow and five children. His remains were taken on Friday evening to St. Louis, and the funeral will take place this afternoon from the Third Baptist Church there. The dead merchant was a cousin of ex-Mayor Ely of New York, and his elder brother, Louis B. Ely, is the Vice-President of the American Baptist Missionary Society.

OBITUARY.—Mr. Frank Ely, president of the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Company, of St. Louis, Mo., died at the Murray Hill Hotel this morning (Friday), at 1:45 o'clock. He had been sick since Jan. 22 of pneumonia. His wife arrived on the 25th ult. and nursed him tenderly and carefully to the end. She left with the remains for St. Louis at 6 P. M., the same day, accompanied by some relatives. Many of Mr. Ely's personal friends volunteered to go to St. Louis with the remains, but the offer was declined. Mr. Ely was one of the most widely known and most respected merchants holding business connections with this city, and his death cast a deep gloom over the market. Mr. Ely was about 47 years of age. He started in business in 1864 with the firm of Crow, McCreary & Co., afterwards Crow, Hargadine & Co., into which firm he was admitted as a partner and remained up to the present time, his firm uniting with Mr. Walker, under the name of Ely, Walker & Co., which was changed into a corporation in 1886, under the present title. They were doing a large and steadily increasing business, and enjoying reputation second to none for prosperity and business integrity.—New York "Times," Sunday, Feb. 16, 1890.

Mrs. Ambrose E. Kitchell, who died last week in New York at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ward, 47 West Eleventh St., was a life-long resident of this vicinity. She had been ill a few days with pneumonia, and her death was a great shock to a large circle of friends. Her husband, who was one of the first commuters on the Morris & Essex road, and one of the oldest merchants in "The Swamp," died a few years ago, and her only son died suddenly shortly after. Mrs. Ward is the sole surviving child. Mr. and Mrs. Kitchell bought and built on the property now owned by T. A. Stemmler, Esq. Since selling that their home has been with Mrs. Kitchell's brothers, the Messrs. Meeker. Mrs. Kitchell was a member of the Presbyterian Church of Madison, and a woman of most noble and unselfish character.

The following article from the N. Y. Herald, of Tuesday, Sept. 27, 1898, will have an interest to the friends of Dr. Lampman:

BIG CHURCH BELL WRECKS PIPE ORGAN.

James Tyler, colored, sexton of the High Street Presbyterian Church, in Newark, went into the belfry on Sunday night and began to ring the bell for the evening service. A few seconds later the bell, which weighs 1,505 pounds, crashed from its hangings and fell through the belfry loft and into the big pipe organ just under it. The rope was jerked out of the sexton's hands and he was flung violently to one side. He was struck on the back by a heavy beam and rendered helpless. The Rev. Dr. Lampman and others who were in the church ran to his assistance and took him down stairs.

The bell lay in a mass of organ pipes, plaster and broken timbers. Just what caused the accident could not be determined. It may have been due to rusted and broken bolts or to a broken belt on which the bell swung in its frame, or to both.

The bell fell nearly fifty feet. How much damage was done had not been decided last night, as the organ will have to be thoroughly overhauled. It was to be replaced by a handsome organ in a few days, and had already been sold. The bell, which had hung in the church since its dedication in 1852, was not injured in the fall. Arrangements were made for its immediate rehanging.

"When the bell fell," said Dr. Lampman to me, "the sound was like that of an explosion. There were few persons in the auditorium, but in the Sunday school room there was a meeting of young people. A few minutes later the falling of the bell would have probably resulted seriously, as the choir would have been in the choir loft. Sexton Tyler is not dangerously hurt."—"Herald," Tuesday, Sept. 27, 1898.

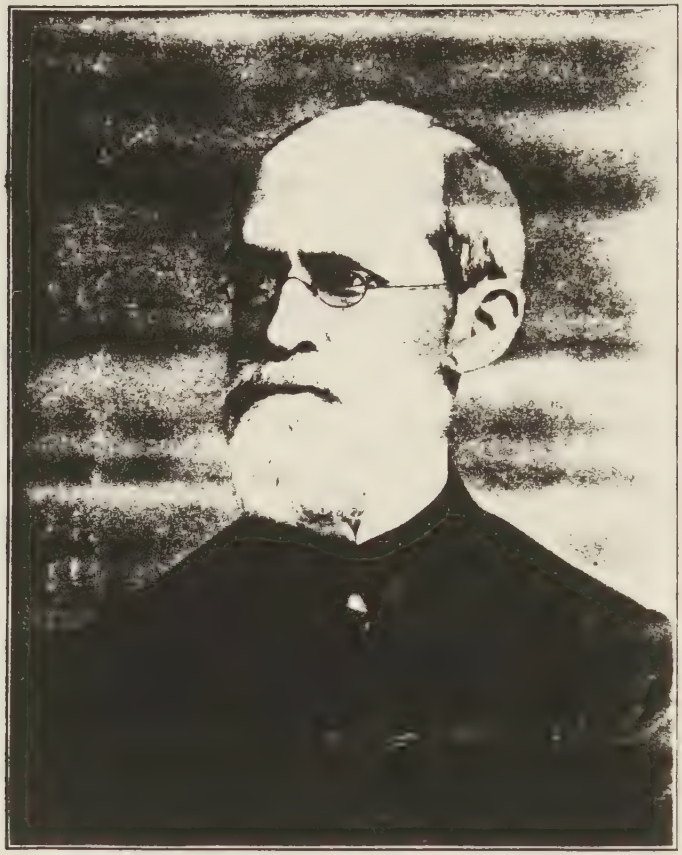
Hymn by Mrs. Eliza Bready, of Germantown, Philadelphia:

Two centuries since or more,
To this New England shore,
Our Fathers came;
With hearts and hands all true,
Bringing from old to new,
Faith, love, and hope, to view
The land we claim.

Since that eventful day
To us so far away,
What change has come!
From bleak New England's shore
To all the country o'er,
North, West, and South, yea more
Our kindred roam.

The Ely name is found
Through all the country round—
Faithful and true;
And now to-day we meet
Pilgrims with willing feet,
To hold some converse sweet,
With old and new.

God grant our country peace,
And let it never cease
Forevermore.



REV. WILLIAM ELY, D.D.
PHILADELPHIA, PENNSYLVANIA

Give us the children's glory,
The Fathers wise and hoary,
Promised in sacred story,
In days of yore.

152918. Rev. Dr. William Ely, son of John Ely, 15291, and Margaret Strutenburg Lee, was b. in Philadelphia, June 4, 1831; was educated in Philadelphia, and studied theology at the General Theological Seminary, New York.

He was ordained Deacon by the late Bishop Alonzo Potter, October 5, 1856; and Priest, Feb. 7, 1858, by the same Prelate.

It was to Dr. Ely that the entire Ely family looked and upon him they depended to prepare and publish the Family Annals arranged for at the Ely Reunion in 1878. Dr. Ely gave much attention to the work and labored faithfully for its accomplishment until failing eyesight forced him to abandon the enterprise to which he has brought so much zeal and intelligent care.

Though Dr. Ely was not permitted to complete the task undertaken by him, much of what we now present to our readers is the result of his labor, and we owe to him a debt of lasting gratitude for his unselfish and untiring exertions. The honorary degree of D.D. was conferred upon Mr. Ely by the University of Pennsylvania at the Commencement in June, 1895.

WANTS THE COLON SAVED.

Patriot Says Cost of Raising Her Is a Minor Consideration.

To the Editor of the Herald:

Your editorial in regard to saving the Cristobal Colon must meet with a hearty amen all over this great country of ours. That public sentiment demands that this fine armored cruiser, which is even now, after almost a year's sojourn on the rocky shore of Cuba, structurally intact, be raised and added to our navy is apparent to all.

What if it does cost more than a new ship? We can build a better boat for the same money, like enough, but we cannot built a Cristobal Colon. The value of this first-class armored cruiser to us could not be given in dollars and cents. The opinion seems to prevail generally that with money and brains at our command in any quantity that might be required we can save this ship if we only get about it.

Morrison Remick Waite was born at Lyme, Nov. 9, 1816; graduated at Yale in 1837; married, September 21, 1840, Amelia C. Warner.

He commenced the study of law in the office of his eminent father, afterwards Chief Justice of Connecticut; but was soon drawn to the West, and at Maumee City, in Ohio, where he studied in the office of Samuel M. Young; he was admitted to the bar in 1839, and formed a partnership with his former preceptor.

In 1850 this firm was removed to Toledo, and three years later Mr. Waite associated a brother with himself, a partnership which continued until he was appointed Chief Justice.

Mr. Waite served as a member of the Legislature of Ohio in 1849 and 1850.

In 1873-4 he presided over a convention for the revision of the Constitution of Ohio, having been nominated as a member by both the great political parties.

In 1871 he was appointed, with Caleb Cushing and William Maxwell Evarts as his colleagues (the latter a college classmate), one of the arbitrators on the part of the United States, under the treaty of Washington, to meet distinguished men from Great Britain, at Geneva, for the settlement of claims for depredations by the Confederate cruiser "Alabama."

In the discharge of this duty Mr. Waite attracted great attention, won the applause of the country and the warm approval of the Government, as well as the esteem of his English associates.

The nomination of Mr. Waite to be Chief Justice was unanimously confirmed in the Senate of the United States.

Chief Justice Waite passed many summers of his later years at Lyme.

On the day of his funeral at Toledo the national flag was hung at half-mast in Lyme, the church bell tolled, and there was a large gathering of his friends and relatives in the old parish church to honor his memory. The young pastor, Rev. Benjamin W. Bacon, made an eloquent address on the occasion.

4. Emma Goble, b. 1862.

Miss Emma Goble Lathrop, official historian of the New York Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is one of the youngest members to hold office, but one whose intelligence and capability qualify her for such distinction. Miss Lathrop is not without experience; in her present home and native city, Newark, N. J., she has filled the positions of secretary and treasurer to the Girls' Friendly Society for nine years, secretary and president of the Woman's Auxiliary of Trinity Church Parish, treasurer of the St. Catherine's Guild of St. Barnabas Hospital, and manager of several of Newark's charitable institutions which her grandparents were instrumental in founding. Miss Lathrop traces her lineage back through many generations of famous progenitors on both sides. Her maternal ancestors were among the early settlers of New Jersey, among them John Ogden, who received patent in 1664 for the purchase of Elizabethtown, and who in 1673 was schout (virtually governor) for six East New Jersey towns. His great-granddaughter married Dr. Caleb Halsted, and on the occasion of General Lafayette's second visit to America, in 1824, under the escort of Dr. Halsted's son-in-law, Brigadier-General Isaac Andruss, the great French hero personally called upon Dr. Halsted at his home near Morristown, in recognition of his services to the French troops during the Revolution. General Andruss's son, Caleb Halsted Andruss, was a graduate of Princeton College, and a Judge in the Court of Common Pleas, and filled other civil and military offices. He married Emma Sutherland Goble, of Huguenot parentage, whose father was an officer in the war of independence. Their daughter, Mary Augusta, married Mr. Charles Lathrop, who was the father of the present historian of the New York City Chapter. On her father's side Miss Lathrop's ancestors were equally prominent, and numbered members from the old colonial Aldens, Brewsters, Fullers, and Elys.—Home Journal, Jan. 15, 1896.

Charles Chauncey Darling, who was graduated at Yale College and at Princeton Theological Seminary, and having entered the ministry subsequently made his residence in New York.

On the 21st of December, 1857, General Darling married Angeline E., second daughter of Jacob A. Robertson, a wealthy and highly respected citizen of New York. His father was Archibald Robertson, the Scotch artist who painted from life the celebrated miniatures on ivory of General and Martha Washington, during the time when he was sojourning as a guest in the family of the "First President." His brothers were Andrew J., Alexander H. (who at the time of his decease was grand master of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the State of New York), and Anthony L., surrogate of New York in 1848 and chief justice of the Superior Court in 1860-69. A sister of these brothers married Henry Winslow, founder of the banking house bearing his name. Another sister married Robert N. Tinson, of England, and well known as a resident of New York city. General Darling has no children to inherit the honor of a good name, but his fondness for the little ones makes him always a favorite with them.

General Darling is a "Son of the Revolution" by reason of his being a great-grandson of General Robert Davis, of the artillery branch of the service under General Washington. He is also a member of the American Historical Association and of the New York genealogical and Biographical Society; Fellow of the Society of Science, Letters, and Art, London, England, and associate member of the Victoria Institute; honorary member of the Chautauqua Society of History and Natural Science, New York; Waterloo Historical Society, New York; New Jersey Historical Society, Alabama Historical Society, Mississippi Historical Society, Iowa Historical Society, and Alaska Historical Society, and corresponding member of the American Ethnological Society, Academy of Anthropology, American Numismatic and Archæological Society, Buffalo Historical Society, and the Cayuga County Historical Society, all of New York. In the State of Maine he is in the same manner connected with the Bangor Historical Society; in New Hampshire with the Historical Society of Concord; in Vermont with the Middlebury Historical Society; in Massachusetts with the New England Historic-Genealogical Society, the Dedham Historical Society, the Old Colony Historical Society, and the Ipswich Historical Society; in Rhode Island with the Newport Historical Society; in Connecticut with the Connecticut Historical Society, the New Haven Colony Historical Society, the Fairfield County Historical Society, and the Saugatuck Historical Society; in Ohio with the State Archæological and Historical Society, and the Western Reserve Historical Society; in Pennsylvania with the Numismatic and Antiquarian Society, the Linnean Historical and Scientific Society, and the

We have neither space nor opportunity to set forth in full the characteristics of those whose names and record we chronicle, but a little extract like the following, from the N. Y. Tribune, of July 17, 1900, lets in a ray of sunshine on individual character and brings before us a cheering and inspiring thought of S. Mills Ely, the merchant philanthropist of Binghamton, N. Y.:

"There were seven different companies of children who went away yesterday. The first consisted of twelve boys, who started early in the morning for Binghamton, N. Y., where S. Mills Ely has invited them to spend two weeks at his observatory, which has been fitted up for the special enjoyment of boys. It stands on the top of a high hill, and a few hours of the air there are enough to make a Fresh Air boy happy and healthy for months. Mr. Ely has for several years conducted this kindly charity."

The following newspaper extract is quoted because of its mention of Mr. Baxter Sayre:

New York Herald, Friday, January 22, 1897.

CITY'S FIRST TEACHER DEAD.

MRS. PHOEBE OSBORNE, WHO HAD CHARGE OF THE FIRST SCHOOL HERE.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 21, 1897.—Mrs. Phoebe A. Osborne, a teacher in the first public school started in the city of New York, died yesterday.

Mrs. Osborne was born March 14, 1812, and had lived in Chicago since 1873. In 1830 Anson G. Phelps, William E. Dodge, Arthur Tappan and Baxter Sayre started a charity public school in New York. Mrs. Osborne and her sister, young girls, were the teachers in the school. In 1836 the City Council of New York concluded that public schools were a good thing and founded two schools to take the place of the charity school. One school was for boys and the other for girls, Mrs. Osborne and her sister being retained as teachers. In this way Mrs. Osborne became identified with the founding of the public school system in New York.

Those interested in the Sayre family will appreciate the following extract, thought it is not possibly of special pertinence to the Ely Genealogy:

Post, January 11, 1899.

EMILIUS KITCHELL SAYRE.

Emilius Kitchell Sayre died at his residence at Monticello, Mo., yesterday. He was born at Bottle Hill, now Madison, N. J., on March 20, 1810. He was the oldest living graduate of Amherst College, having graduated there in 1812. On leaving college he was appointed professor of mathematics at the old Washingon Institute, New York city. He studied law at Transylvania University, Lexington, Ky., 1831-33; admitted to the Kentucky bar 1833; practised in several Circuit Courts in central Kentucky, Court of Appeals, and federal courts, 1833-53. In 1853 he retired from practice, and settled on a 4,000-acre estate in Missouri, where he resided until the time of his death.

He was a delegate to the Missouri State Constitutional Convention in 1846. He married, June 30, 1844, Elizabeth Stanford, daughter of Elijah Pierson, a prominent New York merchant. (4) Ellis Cook.

Opposite the water mill east of Southampton, in a small old burying ground, is a grave-stone marked:

Here lies the body of Mrs. Temperrance Cook, wife of
(4) Mr. Ellis Cook
Who died Dec. 9, 1723,
In ye 19th year of her age.

The deceased was probably the first wife of Ellis Cook, who removed to New Jersey.

The will of (3) Abiel Cook (the Abiell Cook, Jr., of 1698) is recorded in the Surrogate's Office, New York City, Liber 13, page 391. It is dated at Southampton, April 3, 1740, and was proved June 18, of the same year. In the will he names his children:

Ellis.	Phebe.	Susanna.	Matthew.
Abiel.	Zebulon.	Samuel.	Elemuel.
Abigail.	Anna.

Ellis (4) was the executor of the will.

Abiel mentions in his will his "husbandry tools" and was a farmer.

On the 22nd of June, 1747, Ellis Cook (4), husbandman, bought of Cornelius Drake, of Hanover, N. J., a farm of 110 acres," lying on the south side of the road to the old iron works," and extending from Passaic River 62 chains westerly.

This lot had been sold by James Ball and Sarah Ball, and it was bounded on the south by John Canfield, and meadow belonging to Caleb Ball, and the west by Mrs. Wheeler's land.

In the Hanover burying ground is a small gravestone marked:

Here lyes ye body of Mary, wife of Ellis Cooke
Dec'd April 19, 1754
Aged 38 years

Here lyes ye Body of John Williams
Dec'd Feb. 8, 1755, in the 77th year of his age.

EIGHTH GENERATION.

In a paper dated March 12, 1751, John Williams, of Hanover, Cordwainer, gives to his daughter, Mary Cook, wife of (4) Ellis Cook, a tract of land estimated at 40 acres, with the dwelling upon it, after the decease of his wife and himself. In case of her death it was to be given to her five sons, "the eldest named William to have a double portion of the same." This lot was bounded east by Passaic River, west by the Lane, or Road, north by John Ball's land and south by Henry Burnet.

Witnesses, Justus Burnet, William Dixon.

In Book F, Wills, page 404, in the office of Secretary of State, at Trenton, is recorded the will of (4) Ellis Cook.

It is dated March 11, 1756, and was proved Aug. 31 of the same year. He names his sons:

(5) Williams. (5) Ellis. (5) Jonathan.
(5) Epaphras. (5) John.

Witnesses, Jonathan Squier.
Thomas Bigelow.
William Dixon.

The occasion for the will at this time is said to have been the drafting or enlistment of his sons Epaphras and John in the Jersey Regiment which, under Colonel Schuyler, was sent to Oswego.

He accompanied his sons and was killed on the way out. The sons returned in safety.

In the cemetery of the Presbyterian Church at Hanover, N. J., stands this monument:

Sacred to the Memory of Ellis Cook, a Captain in the Revolutionary Army,
who died A. D. 1832,
and to his Wife,
Who died A. D. 1825, erected by their descendants, 1860.

The will gave the property in Hanover to Williams and Ellis, and legacies to the other sons.

Williams sold out his share to Ellis, and much of the land is still held by descendants of the latter.

(5) Williams, son of Ellis, was twice married and had sons (6) Ellis, and (6) Williams by his first wife and (6) Calvin by the second wife. He is said to have died at Troy, N. J.

Ellis' son Williams married Isabella ——, and had one son, Samuel, who lived in Vermont, and daughters Sarah and Martha. Samuel had sons Martindale and James. Martindale had a son Raymond, now living in Hoboken. Sarah was the 1st wife of Cyrus Ball, in Hanover, and left three sons; Martha was 2nd wife of Cyrus Ball and also had three sons; she afterward married Phineas Beach and had one daughter.

Williams, second son of Williams, married and lived in Vermont; had no children.

Calvin and two sisters lived in Troy, N. J.; no further record.

(1) Ellis Cook, the earliest of the family of whom any trace has been found, was a resident of Southampton, Long Island.

The settlement was made in 1640 by Edward Howell and others, a company formed in Lynn, Mass. They were English, and it is said Mr. Howell came from Southampton, England.

Ellis Cook's name first appears on the town records in 1644. His village lot was on the east side of Main Street, and the second one south of the Meeting House. He afterward lived near the water-mill on the road to Bridgehampton. There is no record of his age, or death, or place of burial. His will is on record in the Surrogate's office, New York City. It is dated Sept. 5, 1663, though it was not recorded until July 17, 1679, and he probably did not die until about that time. From the will we learn that he had children: John, Martha, Ellis, Elizabeth and Mary, and one other afterward named Abiel. None of these children were of age when the will was made, but a grave-stone on the west side of Mecox's Bay marks the grave of Ellis Cook, the son mentioned in the will, who died in 1706, aged 44 years.

The will mentions his carpenter's tools, and property in the village, and also on Mecox's Bay. He makes his wife, Martha, his executrix, and his "brothers, John Cooper and Thomas Cooper, Overseers" of his property. In his will his name is spelled Cooke, but he made his mark and did not sign, and the name is spelled everywhere in the town records, Cook.

In the Southampton rate lists for 1683, the names of widow Martha Cooke, and of John Cooke (2) appear, and we may infer that the latter was then of age.

In 1690 the names of Martha Cook and Abiell Cook (2), the widow and son of Ellis Cook, appear in a deed of some property to them.

In 1698, a list of all the inhabitants in Southampton was made out. It is printed in the Documentary History of New York. In this appear in one group:

(3) John Cook, Jr.
(3) Ellias Cook.
(3) Obadiah Cook.
(3) Elijah Cook.

In another group:

(3) Abiell Cook, Jr.
(3) Josiah Cook.

And in another place:

(2) Ellis Cook.

In the list of ffeamales in one group are:

ffrances Cooke.
ffrances Cooke, Jr.

In another are Elisabeth Cooke, Susannah Cooke. And in another, separated from the last only by the name of Hanah Shaw, are the names of Elisabeth Cook and Martha Cook.

OBITUARY.

MAJOR JAMES CLARENCE POST.

Major James Clarence Post, of the United States Engineers, died suddenly yesterday at the home of his father-in-law, John T. Pultz, No. 71 West Fifty-second Street. Major Post was born in New York on July 30, 1844, and graduated from the United States Military Academy on June 23, 1865. He was made captain Oct. 10, 1871, and major Sept. 16, 1886.

In the early part of his career he served on artillery duty at the Military Academy and in the garrison at Little Rock, Ark., where for the first six months of 1866 he acted as ordnance officer of the Department of Arkansas. Then he was transferred to the engineers. In 1867 he was assistant engineer in the improvement of Boston Harbor, Mass. He was also assistant engineer in the construction of the defenses of Hampton Roads, Va.; Charleston Harbor, S. C.; Savannah, Ga., and of the river and harbor improvements in South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, from May, 1874, to November, 1882.

For two years succeeding this Major Post was in temporary charge as engineer of this same district. He was also appointed consulting engineer of the National Board of Health on the South Atlantic coast, and was subsequently in charge of the improvements of the Kentucky, Tradewater, Big Sandy, Guyandotte and Little Kanawha rivers. During 1890 he was attached to the United States Legation at London.

Journal of Jan. 25, 1896.

THE LATE MAJOR POST.

Portland, Ore., Jan. 9. 1896.

To the Editor of the Army and Navy Journal.

The telegraphic news of the sudden death Monday night in New York City, of Major J. C. Post, U. S. Engrs., was a great shock to his many friends at Vancouver Barracks and in this city, where he had a large circle of friends. He was possessed of such a fine physique and seemed in such robust and perfect health when he left this city a few weeks ago for New York, that the announcement of his death in the press dispatches was all the greater surprise. He was stationed here for about two years as Engineer Officer of the 13th Lighthouse District, and in charge of the large jetty at the mouth of the Columbia River, which was completed under his supervision, and the extensive works at the Cascade Locks, on the Columbia, which will be finished in a few months, and in the discharge of these duties was brought into contact with the principal commercial men of Portland, with whom he was a universal favorite. The great regret of his sudden death has been universal, and the most sincere sympathy is expressed for his widow. Besides having a most kindly heart, Major Post possessed great affability and a courtly manner, which made him many friends. He went to great trouble to assist poor men with needy families when their cases were brought to his notice. He was extremely sociable and ever "given to hospitality." Above all things he was conscientious and faithful in the discharge of his duty. The great flood in the Columbia River, June, 1894, the highest water ever known here, found him at his post protecting his works at the Cascade Locks. At that point, the gorge of the Columbia, the water rose, June 6, nearly sixty feet above low-water mark. It seemed impossible to stem the roaring tide, and some of his assistant engineers believed nothing could prevent the destruction of the work and the loss of many thousands of dollars. Major Post was equal to the emergency, however, and worked all night, we were informed, with relays of workmen and sandbags to save the great work of which he was in charge, with success as the result. A board of the most distinguished officers of the Engineer Corps, consisting of Gen. Craighill, Col. Mendell and Major Marshall, subsequently examined the Cascade Locks and commended him highly for his faithful and energetic work during the flood, of which he had reason to be proud. C. A. McCauley, Maj. and Q. M.

The only child of Major Post and Anne Pultz, named Clarence Ely Post, was born December 30, 1895, and died suddenly at Narragansett Pier, R. I., on Saturday, July 22, 1899.

The funeral services were held at St. Thomas' Church, 5th Ave. and 53rd St., on Wednesday, July 26, at half-past two o'clock P. M. The interment was at West Point.

MRS. E. ELY-GODDARD'S DEATH.

A cable dispatch from Nice received by Mr. Lloyd Aspinwall, her brother-in-law, yesterday, stated that the death of Mrs. Ely-Goddard was due to gastritis, from which she had suffered for only a brief period. Mrs. Lloyd Aspinwall and Mrs. Goddard's little daughter were with her at the time of her death. Mr. Goddard was in this city. Yesterday her son by her first husband, who is at school at Croton, was brought to New York by his uncle, Mr. Whitney.

Mrs. Goddard was one of the four Sutton sisters, all famous for their beauty and accomplishments. They were the daughters of Cornelius K. Sutton, who was a partner in the shipping business with A. C. Kingsland, once Mayor of New York. Their mother was the daughter of Dudley S. Gregory, of Jersey City. The young ladies were all educated abroad.

The eldest daughter is now Mrs. Henry J. Goodwin, of No. 507 Madison Ave. Her daughter is married to Mr. John Bloodgood. The second daughter of Cornelius K. Sutton was married to Mr. Staunton Whitney, senior member of the firm of Whitney Brothers, of Boston and Calcutta. Mr. Whitney died some years ago, leaving a handsome fortune in trust for his two children, a boy and a girl, respectively fourteen and thirteen years of age. Subsequently the widow married Mr. Ely Goddard, who is a relative of ex-Mayor Smith Ely, of this city.

The third daughter married Mr. Walter Floyd Crosby, and is living in Westchester County. The fourth daughter is Mrs. Lloyd Aspinwall, who, as the cable despatch from Nice says, has been appointed guardian of Mrs. Ely-Goddard's two children. All four daughters have been very prominent and popular in society in this city and in Newport.

Mr. Lloyd Aspinwall was with his wife and Mrs. Goddard until last month, when he returned to New York. He yesterday arranged for the transportation of the body to New York, and will rejoin his wife in Europe during next month, or the month after. Mr. Ely-Goddard, who was much prostrated by the sad intelligence, sails to-day to bring home his wife's remains.

Their friends will be interested in the following little article relative to the old Ward homestead:

The old landmarks are passing away, but modern instinct and progressive interest in the history of our country is not allowing the hand of time to alter or level them without a protest against their sinking into oblivion.'

The genealogical column has been filled with Wards, making their claim for New Jersey ancestry, involving the Cranes, 'Ogdens, Kitchells, etc., but the search for a lineage which gives them through the Baldwins, of Milford, Conn. (an eastern descent), has only just begun.

John Ward, one of the party who went fromWethersfield, Conn., in 1666, and laid out the city of Newark, had a son John to his credit, who married Abigail Kitchell, granddaughter of the Rev. Abraham Pierson, the loved pastor of this pioneer band, born in Newark, England, and in whose honor the place was named.

John Ward, Jr., fulfilled all the demands of the times, "built a two and a half story frame house, that stands at the corner of Central Ave, and Summit St., Newark, N. J.," so substantially that decay alone will not cause its removal, although it is credited with being the oldest structure in the city.

Some thirty years ago the Ward homestead stood in the midst of an open farm, proud in its exclusiveness—and the ownership of five large rooms on the first floor, the old-time way of living when the parents slept near everything, both for protection and convenience, gathering around them the young children, those not needing absolute physical care gladly availing themselves of "the two good-sized bedrooms on the second floor with old-fashioned fire-places," not so immediately under parental supervision.

"Mr. James Ward gives the house as having been in the Ward family for more than one hundred and seventy-five years."

Apparently, General Washington had years of life beyond all calculation, counting the number of breakfasts he ate in various places, but this old homestead puts forth its claim that "when Washington retreated with his army toward Trenton, he was followed at a respectful distance by the British army, a detachment of which passed through the upper portion of Newark and camped one night near the Ward homestead." No Ward ever refused hospitality to friend or foe, still there is no plea I can find for the Father of his Country having honored the homestead with his presence that night.

Here Moses, the father of Gov. Marcus L. Ward was born, and it is needless to say many succeeding generations.

The sectional beginning of a family in 1666 certainly bespeaks for them a collateral relation with most, if not all, of the families who "sat down" near them during that century.

From Mail and Express, July 23, 1898.

The late Elias S. Ward used to say he made his start in business by killing two quail. He was hunting with a New York business man near his home in Morris County when he made the shot. His companion praised it warmly, as showing alertness and accuracy, and the impression and the resultant talk led to an offer to take Mr. Ward into his office, establishing mutually satisfactory relations which continued several years.—Call.

The following sketch of Captain Hamilton, from the Waterbury History, was prepared by the Rev. Dr. Anderson, who knew the captain intimately:

David Boughton Hamilton, son of David and Deborah (Boughton) Hamilton, was born in Danbury, October 19, 1824. He is descended in the sixth generation from "William Hamilton, gentleman," who was born in Scotland in 1647, lived on Cape Cod, Mass., and in Rhode Island, and afterwards settled in the northern part of Danbury on the borders of the wilderness, and died there at the age of 102 years. David was educated at the Danbury Academy, and spent a few months at the select school of N. B. Clark, of Hartford. From 1841 to 1843 he was teacher in Hartford and in Wethersfield, and afterwards entered upon a course of study for the ministry, from which he turned aside to study law. Having decided that he preferred business to a profession, he engaged in various business ventures in Hartford and Albany, N. Y., but in 1851 became a clerk in the Hartford post-office.

In the spring of 1853, when the Rogers Brothers organized a company for the manufacture of silver-plated ware, he became their salesman, and in 1858, when Asa and Simeon Rogers came to Waterbury to establish the firm of Rogers & Brother he came with them, and since that time has been a resident of this city and identified with that concern. His active connection with the plated-ware industry has been only twice interrupted in forty-two years, when he visited California in 1856 for the benefit of his health, and during his service in the war for the Union. His military record, as given in Dr. Anderson's "History of the Soldiers' Monument in Waterbury, Conn.," (page 13 note), is as follows:

"David B. Hamilton entered the service in 1861. On the memorable 19th of April, in that year, he was in Baltimore, just after the attack upon the Union soldiers. The next day he was in Washington, and enlisted in the company of volunteers raised for the defense of the capital by Colonel Cassius M. Clay. In a week or two he returned to Waterbury by way of Annapolis, enlisted for active service, and was soon afterwards commissioned as first lieutenant in the Fifth Regiment of Connecticut Volunteers. He was promoted to be captain in 1862, and was honorably discharged for disability, January 10, 1863."

Mr. Hamilton was secretary of Rogers & Brother from its incorporation until 1865, when he was elected treasurer of the company. Since 1878 he has been president as well as treasurer. He has been president of the Manufacturers' National Bank since its incorporation in 1881, of the Waterbury Lumber and Coal Company since its reorganization in 1883, and of the Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company from 1891 to 1894. He is director of various manufacturing concerns throughout the State, including the William Rogers Manufacturing Company of Hartford, the Meriden Britannia Company, and the Bridgeport Brass Company.

On May 6, 1847, Mr. Hamilton married Mary Anna, daughter of S. Rogers, of Hartford. She died May 22, 1859, leaving one son, Charles Alfred. On June 9, 1863, he married Mary Elizabeth, daughter of William Birely, of Frederick, Md., with whom he became acquainted during his army life while on "detached service" under General Banks. She died August 27, 1870, leaving two children, Lewis Birely and Katharine. Lewis was born June 7, 1864, is a graduate of Yale and a civil engineer. On September 6, 1871, Captain Hamilton married Isabel Lord, daughter of John Griswold Ely, of Lyme. The only child of their marriage is Paul, who was born September 1, 1873, and is a graduate of Yale (Sheffield Scientific School).

by the Rogers Locomotive Works, New Jersey, prior to the outbreak of the Rebellion in 1861.

When war was declared, Mr. Ely returned home and enlisted in Company A, First Regiment Conn. Volunteers, April 22, 1861.

Mr. Ely was commissioned Captain and A. D. C. May 28, 1861, and on the 4th of Septmber, 1861, was promoted to the Lieutenant Colonelcy of the Sixth Regiment Conn. Volunteers.

July 24, 1862, Mr. Ely was promoted to the rank of Colonel, and was commissioned to command the Eighteenth Regiment Conn. Volunteers.

On June 13, 1863, at Winchester, Colonel Ely commanded the Second Brigade under Melroy, and was taken prisoner while advancing in a charge of the brigade on the Port Royal Turnpike. His sword was returned to him or battlefield by General Walker, Jackson's brigade, it having been shattered by a cannon ball in the charge. Was prisoner in Libby Prison from June, 1863, till paroled and exchanged, March 24, 1864.

General Ely was one of the men who dug the tunnel out of Libby Prison, and is believed to be the only Connecticut man who escaped through it. Was recaptured forty-two miles away, only half a mile from the Union forces, and returned, barefoot and half-clad, to a dungeon; 17th May, 1864, was relieved of parole and rejoined the army.

Colonel Ely commanded the Second Brigade, Second Division, Nineteenth Army Corps, at the battle of Piedmont, June 4, 1864.

In advancing on Lynchburg, June 18, 1864, Colonel Ely was disabled by a wound in his throat and forced to retire.

First Bull Run, Port Royal, Fort Pulaski, Winchester 2d, 3d, Piedmont, Lynchburg, Snickers Gap, Martinsburg and Berryville.

General Ely has been for some years treasurer of Falls and of Shetucket Cotton Mills of Norwich, Conn.

In the death of Mrs. Augusta Greene Ely, wife of General William Grosvenor Ely, which took place last evening at her home, 207 Broadway, we part with the last survivor of a family circle which was once the social centre of this community. From her father, William P. Greene, she inherited much more than a name honorably distinguished in the business and municipal affairs of the city; she inherited also, in a large measure, the personal qualities that made him the leader that he was in works of beneficence to the public. In the daughter, indeed, the noble passion for patriotic service was restricted in its exercise to less conspicuous lines of working; but it was not less noble and energetic. And presently the time came on when patriotic womanhood, with no sacrifice of tenderness and gentleness and modesty, but rather by virtue of all these, was to be given a noble part to play. At the outbreak of the great war, the brilliant young society leader devoted herself, with all her talents and social advantages, to those labors for the soldiers departing, or in the field, or returning from the field, in which patriotic women throughout the land eagerly engaged, but in which, it is no vain boasting to say, the women of Norwich were pre-eminent. One fact of this service deserves to be put on record. She was the first to set the example in Connecticut, soon to be followed by others, of employing, at her own cost and charges, a substitute who should serve as her representative in the army. The grateful work of Decoration day will be imperfectly done if there are not some flowers to fall upon the recent grave of so true a patriot.

GENERAL WILLIAM G. ELY

It was the appropriate sequel of these years of patriotic service when she was married to one of those Norwich soldiers, whose distinguished service in the army has been followed by successful work in civil life. From this time the current of her life has flowed in the less conspicuous channels of domestic duty as wife, mother, friend and neighbor. How loving and fruitful a life it has been there are many to tell, in the church where she was a worshiper, and in the social and literary circles of which she was an ornament. But it is most of all in the home, of which her presence was the light and soul, that her memory is to be cherished. It is there that "her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

DANIEL CADY EATON.

Daniel Cady Eaton, Professor of Botany in Yale University, died at his home in New Haven, on June 29th.

His grandfather was that pioneer of American science, Professor Amos Eaton, who perhaps more than any other one man stimulated the study of natural history in this country during the second and third decades of this century.

Several of his children were educated in scientific pursuits. One son, Amos B. Eaton, although sharing the scientific tastes of the other children, was trained for the army, and graduated at West Point in 1826.

General Eaton married Mrs. Elizabeth Selden Spencer, who also was of old New England stock, and Daniel Cady Eaton, the subject of this sketch, was born at Fort Gratiot, in Michigan, September 12th, 1834. In the changes incident to the military duties of the father, the family, during the youth of the son, had no very permanent place of abode. The mother was a sister of the eminent jurists, Samuel L. Selden and Henry R. Selden, of Rochester, N. Y., and she lived in that city during a part of his boyhood. Later, he was for a while a student in the Rensselaer Institute at Troy, and still later in General Russell's Military School at New Haven.

He entered Yale College in 1853, and was graduated in 1857, having among his classmates an unusual number of persons who have since become eminent as professors in colleges. He was already a zealous student in Botany, and published his first paper on "Three New Ferns from California and Oregon" in this journal in 1856, while a junior in college.

After graduation he studied Botany with Professor Gray at Harvard for three years, and in 1860 received the degree of B. S. in that institution and that of M. A. in course of Yale.

In July, 1864, he was elected Professor of Botany at Yale at the same time with the writer of this sketch.

He appeared in his usual good health until last year. While botanizing for mosses, and particularly sphagna, in the White Mountains, in the summer vacation, a malady before unsuspected began to acutely manifest itself. Although the disease was very painful, he did some botanical work in the autumn, but he attempted no college work after the Christmas recess. He endured his sufferings with Christian resignation, and passed away with the college year, two days after Commencement.

He married, in 1866, Miss Caroline Ketcham, of New York. One son was taken from them when nearly fifteen years of age. His wife, and a daughter and a son survive him. WILLIAM H. BREWER.

The ancestry of both Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Riley is fully traced out, both in the paternal and maternal branches. Mr. Riley has kindly furnished much information, of which the following is an abstract:

John Riley, born in 1580, came to America in 1633, and settled in Weathersfield, Conn. His son Jonathan, b. 1657, was father of Stephen, father of John, b. 1737, father of James Riley, b. in 1765, who married Esther Goodrich, and who died in 1847, leaving a son, Horace Riley, born 1798, died in 1842, who married Grace Sands Hudson, and who was the father of Robert Hudson Riley, born 1836, who married Elizabeth Burnet.

HERBERT SPENCER'S RIVAL.

Richard T. Ely is a deep thinker. It is said by those who know that he thinks deeper than any man in this country. He was a professor in Johns Hopkins University, where he lectured on sociology, social economics and kindred subjects. When not lecturing he is either thinking or writing. He has published a number of books to prove with how little wisdom the world is governed. He contributes freely to the magazines and reviews. One of the last subjects he discussed was the State ownership of railways. Well informed Americans—but that may be merely patriotic prejudice—believe he thinks harder, deeper and more continuously than Herbert Spencer. His reputation is international.

COLLEGE PROFESSORS DRILL.

Prof. Ely's deep interest in social and economic problems have not dampened his patriotism and the spirit of his revolutionary ancestors has not been quenched beneath the accumulated learning of years of study.

The following item manifests his willingness to do duty during the late war with Spain:

MADISON, Wis., Wednesday.—Dr. Richard T. Ely, head of the Department of History and Political Economy in the University of Wisconsin, joined a volunteer company formed of the Wisconsin University faculty to-day. The company numbers sixty, being chiefly young instructors.

Dr. Ely, being the smallest man, was placed at the foot of the ranks. Five students' companies of volunteers are drilling.—New York Herald, Thursday, April 29, 1898.

CAMP—QUINBY.

St. Bartholomew's Church was again yesterday the scene of a pretty wedding, when Miss Candace Ellen Quinby and Mr. Hugh Nesbitt Camp were married. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brewer Quinby, of Lakeport, N. H., and a niece of Brigadier General R. N. Batchelder, the recently retired Quartermaster General of the United States Army. The bridegroom is a son of the late Hugh N. Camp, of this city. The bride was richly gowned in white satin, trimmed with point lace, and a point lace veil. She carried lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaids, all classmates of the bride at a Farmington (Conn.) school, were Miss Julie Fay Bradley, of New York; Miss Harmony Twicheld, of Hartford; Miss Sarah Clark and Miss Sallie Whitney, of New Haven; Miss Eleanor Campbell, of Milwaukee; Miss Edith Howe, of Philadelphia, and Miss Elizabeth Sage, of Albany, and they wore gowns and hats of pale yellow and carried bouquets of white lilacs.

Mr. Frederic Potts Moore attended the groom, and the ushers were Messrs. Frederic E. Camp, George H. Moore, Charles H. Seymour, Walter Owen, Howard M. Kirkland, and Henry C. Quinby.

After the ceremony there was a small reception for the bridal party and immediate relatives at the Waldorf-Astoria.—N. Y. Herald, April 15, 1898.

TRUTH ABOUT MR. SAYRE.

To the Editor of the Herald:

David A. Sayre, the founder of the Sayre Institute, in Kentucky, was spoken of in the Herald a few days ago as an "illiterate Scotchman."

David A. Sayre was not "a Scotchman," nor was he "illiterate." As a poor boy, the youngest of ten children, he left his New Jersey home and went to Kentucky in 1811 to seek his fortune. He has pointed out to the writer the very milestone where he sat before going into Lexington, like Whittington, before entering London.

Lexington was then "the Athens of the West"—the seat of Transylvania University—a centre of culture, schools and polished society, the favorite summer home of wealthy Southern families whose winters were spent on their plantations. No wonder the poor New Jersey boy seemed obscure and the training of his village academy seemed small.

Mr. Sayre's grandfather was Deacon John Sayre, of Long Island. The Herald recently published a picture of the Sayre homestead, the first house built on Long Island. His father was Deacon Ephraim Sayre, of Bottle Hill—now Madison—N. J. His house was the headquarters of General Wayne when our Revolutionary army was quartered in New Jersey.

Mr. Sayre's influence was not felt among business men only. During the long period of his residence in Lexington his office was the resort of the most eminent citizens, and his associations were with Clay, Crittenden, Wickliffe, Morehead, Woolley and a host of others.

In his will he "commends the Sayre Institute to the good and wise of the community." Let us hope they may find some way to build it anew.

VIEW OF THE MANOR HOUSE AT UTTERBY, THE ANCIENT HOME OF THE ELYES

In conclusion, it may not be unsuitable for the editor to add a few words of general review. There is, it is true, no precedent for such a course, and one authority is on record as directly opposed to it. Sam Weller, when preparing his valentine, explained that his idea of the best form of literary composition was to conclude with what his honored father characterized as a "sudden pull-up," because the reader would wish there was more of it, and to produce this effect exhibits the great art of the author.

The Ely Ancestry has been a work begun with interest, pursued with pleasure, and relinquished with regret, for appreciation of any worthy subject grows as it is studied. Much labor has been bestowed upon it which the editor would have hesitated to undertake had he borne in mind the words of the Apostle Paul, recorded in the [illegible] Epistle to Titus, third chapter, ninth verse:

"But avoid foolish questions and genealogies, for they are unprofitable and vain."

And also in the Epistle to Timothy, first chapter, fourth verse:

"Neither give heed to fables and endless genealogies, which minister questions, rather than godly edifying."

Like good advice in general, that of St. Paul has been unheeded and has failed to avert the evil of which it gives warning, yet so far as possible we have avoided "fables" and trust the record may not give rise to many questions.

Our record is neither complete nor satisfactory, but like all human achievements, it is halting and imperfect. No doubt there have been thousands of descendants of Richard Ely whose names even are not known to us, who yet have lived worthy lives, and filled an honored place in their day and generation. In regard to those whose record we have obtained, it is in a majority of instances simply a name and date. Of the individual life, work or history, of all that could give interest to the figures and clothe the dry bones of genealogical data with the living personality of human interest, we know nothing.

Yet, freely admitting all omissions and imperfections, enough remains of that which is known to us to enable the editor to say, and it may come with a better grace from him, as not being a descendant of Richard Ely, that the record is a most creditable one.

We have no means of knowing what were the hopes and ambitions of Richard Ely for the future of the family he established in the New World, but he probably builded better than he knew when he planted the name of Ely in this Western Hemisphere, and if, at the opening of the twentieth century, it is permitted him to review the results of the two hundred and fifty years of family history since the origin of the little settlement of Lyme, it would seem that he has abundant cause for thankfulness.

The grateful words of the Patriarch Jacob come to mind when one considers the wonderful increase in numbers and material possessions from Richard Ely, the emigrant of 1660, to the great host of Elys, his descendants, now established in every State in the Union:

"With my staff in my hand I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become two bands."

In every department of human usefulness the Elys have worthily contributed to the building of the nation. They have erected seminaries, endowed hospitals, established schools, built churches, founded colleges and libraries. Their public and private charities have been without stint. They have taken part in the counsels of the Nation, have helped to frame and to interpret its laws, and, in an executive capacity, have ably administered them. In no crisis of the country's history have they spared life or treasure. Both have been generously expended in the service of their country. There have been few battlefields of the French and Indian War, of the Revolutionary struggle, or of our great civil conflict where some of the Elys have not taken part, often at the cost of life.

Among those recorded we have heroes of every battlefield from Louisburgh to Santiago; and while many Elys have worn the "red badge of courage," others have exhibited the no less worthy "ornament of a meek and quiet spirit." In numbers they have been respectable; in character, reputable; in attainments, enviable. May this record long preserve the memory of the honored dead and stimulate to worthy living the future descendants of Richard Ely.

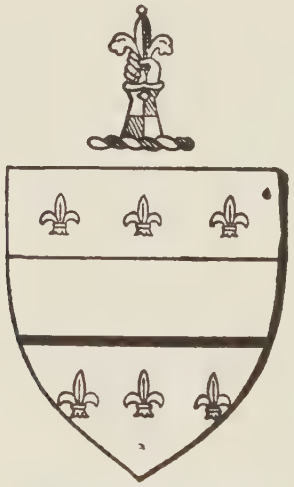
And generations pass, as they have passed,
A troop of shadows moving with the sun;
Thousands of times has the old tale been told—
The world belongs to those who come the last.

THE ELYES OF LINCOLNSHIRE.

Everything connected with the Elyes in the Mother Country is of interest, and may assist in tracing the history of the family.

L. C. R. Norris-Elye, Esq., of Utterby, England, in response to a letter from the editor, sends a copy of his coat of arms, which is almost identical with that of the American Elys.



The description is as follows:

Crest. Cubit arm erect, vested ar. holding in hand ppr. a fleur-de-lis sa.

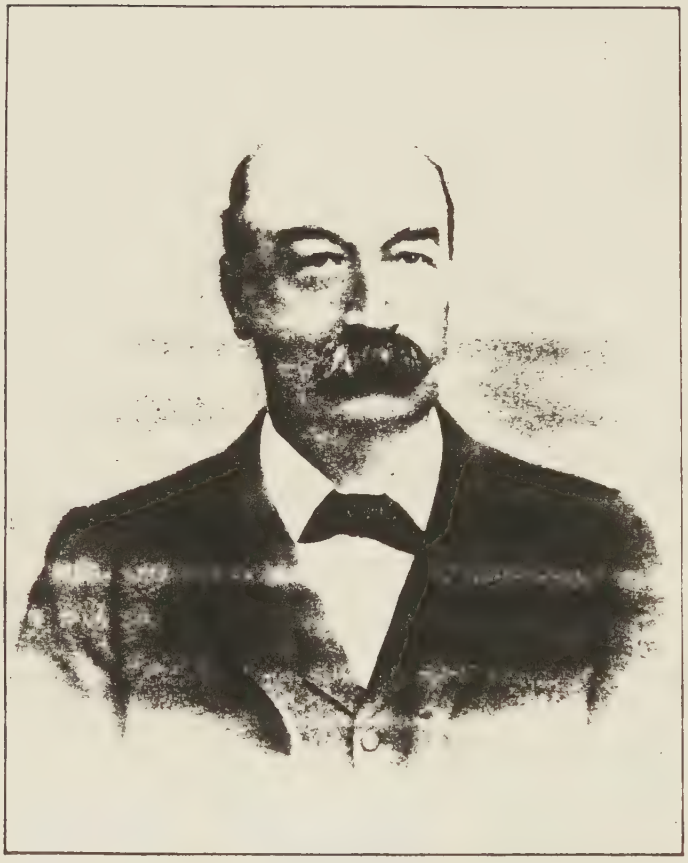
Coat of Arms. Ar. a fesse between six fleur-de-lis sa.

Mr. Norris-Elye is the present representative of the Utterby family. He was educated at Cambridge University, and received the degree of M. A. He has for some years been a magistrate of the County of Essex, and is President of the Poultry Club (of England), and also of the St. Bernard Club.

The Rectory of Utterby is in his gift when vacant.

L. C. R. NORRIS-ELYE, ESQ.

The present head of the Utterby family, who resides in the Manor House, at Utterby, near Louth Lincolnshire, England



GEORGE ELY, ESQ.

OF KENT LODGE, LOWER ADDISCOMBE, CROYDON, FORMERLY MANAGER OF THE LONDON AND COUNTY BANK, WINCHESTER, ENGLAND

THE ELYS OF KENT.

George Ely, Esq., of Kent Lodge, Lower Addiscombe, Croydon, England, who was formerly manager of the London and County Bank at Winchester, has kindly taken much interest in the family record. Mr. Ely has a coat of arms and crest exhibiting the fleur-de-lis, and in all respects quite similar to the arms of the American Elys.

He traces back his ancestry to John Ely, of Rochester, born 1733, died 1810, whose sons were Daniel, an architect, and George, gentleman, who left no children.

The records of St. Nicholas, Rochester, probably contain the record of the birth of John Ely, and in this way his descendant, George Ely, of Croydon, is in hopes of tracing his connection with the Wonston and the Utterby Elyes.

The sons of Daniel Ely were:

George, who was a surgeon, and John (the Rev.), who left no son.

George married three times, and had descendants by first two wives; his eldest son was George Ebenezer Ely, who had a large family. His eldest son was George Ely, born 1839, who is the senior survivor of a family of eleven, and has two sons:

George Frederick, and Arthur John.

"Argent, a fesse engrailed, between six fleur-de-lis sable."

This Elias de Ely was undoubtedly a scion of the Elys of Utterby, as the arms are identically the same. and this is further proof that they were borne by the Elys at a very early date, most likely having been adopted by Ralph de Ely 1st of the Utterby Elys as signifying his royal French origin.

Richard de Ely, left a son, Elias de Ely who married Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of William Brough of Brough Hall, in the Parish of Catterick, Hundred of Holderness, East Riding, Yorkshire, and his son John assumed the name of Brough, whose line ended with Roger Brough of Brough Hall, temp. James I.

His daughter and heiress, Elizabeth, married Sir Ralph Lawson, Baronet, whose male line still lives at Brough Hall.

As to the arms of the Elys, the color of the fleur-de-lis given in Burke is wrong.

The correct arms are:

Argent a fesse, between six fleur-de-lis sable (not gules).

Executors: Eldest son, William Gore, and Margaret Reade née Ely (a sister). Supervisors: John Pitman, of Quarley; Thomas Elye, Clerk, Vicar of Nether-Wallop, and Leonard Elye, of Wonston.

The two Elyes were cousins and Richard Elye, of Wonston, son of Leonard, probably married Elizabeth Gore, one of the daughters of William, and had Thomas, Nicholas, Edward and Richard. Thomas was Vicar of South Stoneham, died 1631, leaving Thomas, Richard and Elizabeth, who married Randolph Floyer.

The tradition in the Elye, alias Richmond, family is that Richard de Ely, of Utterby, married Joan, daughter and co-heiress of John, 7th Duke of Brittany and Earl of Richmond, and had two sons, John de Elye, of Utterby, and Elias or Helias de Ely de Richmond, whose son took the name of Richmond as a surname (see Visitation of York, article Elye-Richmond). One line used the fleur-de-lis sable and one line the fleur-de-lis gules, probably to distinguish them one from another.

Will of Roger de Ely, of the Parish of St. Stephen, Walbrook, London, High Sheriff of London in 1330-31. See Calendar of Ancient Wills, Vol. I., p. 573. Directs his body to be decently buried in the Church of St. Stephen's, Walbrook. To the Prior and Convent of Newark, near Guildford, County Surrey, he gives the rents of certain tenements in the parishes of St. Stephen, Walbrook, and St. Mary, Somerset; bequeaths liberal allowances to his children, Andrew, Richard, Geoffrey, Margery, Christina, Roger, Sibil and Alice; also directs that masses be said for the souls of his late father-in-law, John de la Chaumbre and Margaret his wife; Walter and Avelyna, parents of said John; also his own father, Roger de Ely, and Sibil, his mother; also bequeaths to his children as joint tenants the rents of certain tenements in the parishes of St. Mary Abbe-chirche and St. Nicholas Coldabbey; also leaves bequests to the Hospital of St. Catharine, near the Tower, and the Minoress Sisters of St. Clare's, of the Franciscan Order. Names his son, Roger, as Executor. Will dated May 1, Tuesday before the feast of the Apostles Philip and James, 1349, and recorded in Roll Book of Wills 76, Court of Hastings, London, Folio 302.

The records of the Priory of Durham show that he had an interest amounting to £10 per annum in the Church at Auckland, in Durham.

Randolph Floyer [2d son of William Floyer, of Berne, County Dorset, by 2d wife, Elizabeth Mainwaring], lived at Topsham, County Devon, near Plymouth. He married Mary, daughter of Thomas Ely, of Plymouth, Ald. He was sole Executor of his aunt, Eleanor Floyer, whose will is dated 10 January, 1695, proved March 1695. He had:

1. Anthony Floyer, named in his great-aunt's will.
2. Mary Floyer, named in great-aunt's will.

Helias or Helie, Count of Maine.

William, 2d Count of Perigord, was the eldest son of Wulgrin and Aldwin was the youngest son.

Isabella was the only child and heiress of Aylmer, or Americus, Count of Angoulême, surnamed Taillifer. Her mother, Alice de Courtenay, daughter of Peter de Courtenay, 5th son of Louis VI. of France.

Isabella married John, King of England, brother of Richard Cœur de Leon; b. 1166. Reigned from 1190; d. 1216. Mrs. Strickland's Queens of England, Vol. I.

Louis Antoine de Bourbon, Duke of Angoulême, eldest son of Charles X. of France; b. 1775; d. 1844; was head of the house of D'Angoulême during the last century.

John, 8th Count of Perigord, married Margaret, daughter of Hugh II., 2d Count of Maine, and became 3d Count of Maine in right of his wife. Their son, Helias, or Helie, was 9th Count of Perigord and 4th Count of Maine.

Helias married Matilda, daughter of Gervais, Seigneur du Château du Loir, and had a son, Uthred de Helie, the founder of the English line, and a daughter, Sybilla, who married Fulk V., Count of Anjou.

In 1031, Fulk V. resigned his European possessions to his son, Geoffrey IV., surname Plantagenet, for he had accepted the higher dignity of King of Jerusalem.

Geoffrey IV. married Matilda, Empress of Germany, daughter of Henry I. of England (son of William the Conqueror and brother of William Rufus), and their son, Henry II., was the first King of the Plantagenet dynasty, which ruled England for more than three centuries.

The warmest attachment, based on a near degree of consanguinity, existed for four generations between the Plantagenets and the Elyes. Henry I. granted to Helias, Count of Maine, extensive estates in Cambridgeshire, including the Isle of Ely; under Henry II. Sir Richard de Elye was appointed Lord High Treasurer of England, and William de Elye occupied the same position under Richard I.
